Roosevelt Wage Raise Attacked; House Group Passes 30-Hour Week

Administration Is Facing Test of Strength on Hour Cut.

Johnson Regime Between 2 Fires

Employers Assert They Cannot Absorb New Wage Costs.

By Raymond Clapper.

Labor, whose buying power is deemed by the Administration to be an essential element of general recovery, won two victories yesterday while many spokesmen for industry were protesting in NRA code conferences against President Roosevelt's challenge for immediate reductions in working hours and increases in pay.

It became apparent yesterday that in the conflict over this issue, Gen. Johnson and the Administration face a severe test of strength.

On one side are employers, whose representatives cheered repeatedly as industrial spokesmen protested against taking on additional pay roll costs now.

On the other side is labor, restless and ready to break loose from its more conservative leaders and go on the warpath.

Administration in Between.

Between them is the Administration, convinced that more men must be put to work at once to relieve unemployment, to increase consuming power and to reduce the amount of money the Government is pouring into made work, and above all, anxious to avoid new outbreaks of labor trouble.

Labor won an important victory from the Administration yesterday when NRA cracked down on company unions with the statement that many of them apparently were violating the collective bargaining provision of the recovery act and would be dealt with. Labor has become increasingly vehement in its claim that the Administration was permitting employers to oppress them by maintaining company unions through which they thwarted free collective bargaining.

Labor's second victory yesterday was important, at least psychologically. The House Labor Committee reported out favorably the 30-hour-week bill. Speaker Rainey predicted the measure would pass the House. There is some doubt about that, because Gen. Johnson and the Administration oppose it. They prefer to be left free to make downward adjustments in working hours on a flexible basis which will recognize individual conditions in different industries.

Sawmill Letters Cited.

With the possibility that Congress may pass a 30-hour straight-jacket bill, there is likelihood that industry will listen more receptively to the easier terms which the Administration is prepared to offer.

It developed in code conferences yesterday that so-called small sawmill operators, who have been writing letters to Congress protesting the 30-hour week, have been told by Administration officials that they will be exempted from the provisions of the bill.

Bank Bandits Kidnap 4 Girls

Machine Gunners Snatch $46,000; Planes Aid in Posse Hunt.

Sioux Falls, S. Dak., March 6 (AP).—Six cursing machine-gun robbers, in a daylight raid witnessed by hundreds of persons on the Security National Bank & Trust Co. today, shot down a policeman, seized four girl hostages and fled away with loot estimated at $46,000, pursued by posse men and airplanes.

They were reported this afternoon to have swung east into Iowa and then up through Minnesota after releasing their captives, but not before using four girls as shields, flying machine-gun bursts from behind their hostages to drive off closely pressing pursuers.

While posse men scoured the highways in a 50-mile area south and east of Sioux Falls, two airplanes sought traces of the daring band, the leader of which was said by C. R. Clarke, president of the bank, to resemble John Dillinger, notorious killler and bank robber who broke jail in Indiana Saturday.

Pursuit by plane was abandoned after Pilots Ralph Nelson and Carl Graff, in two ships, had scanned a wide strip of territory.

Highest Paid Banker Ill, Reported Better

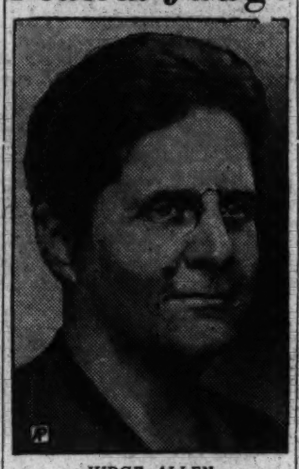
McEldowney, who drew $165,000 for 1933, according to figures released in Washington, recently sailed for Honolulu for a vacation. After passing the Panama Canal the banker collapsed. He was taken to New York and placed under the care of specialists.

Woman in Ohio First to Become Federal Judge



JUDGE ALLEN

Justice Florence E. Allen, of Cleveland, the first woman ever to sit on a State Supreme Court bench, yesterday became the first woman Federal judge. She was appointed by President Roosevelt to the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals, the next highest judicial body to the United States Supreme Court.

Aid in Dillinger Break Charged To Two Guards

Pair Held in Own Jail; Manhunt Fails to Find Outlaw.

Crown Point, Ind., March 6 (AP).—Two of the guards who surrendered to John Dillinger's wooden gun were taken into custody today, but an intense man-hunt failed to produce the missing outlaw himself.

The guards, Deputy Ernest Blunk and Turnkey Sam Cahoon, were charged by Prosecutor Robert G. Estill with "aiding and abetting" Dillinger's fantastic escape.

Assistant Attorney General Edward Barce, investigating for Gov. Paul McNutt, said the charge was based on the failure of the jailers to resist when Dillinger corralled all his guards into his own cell and drove off in the sheriff's sedan.

Barce said he had found "definite evidence of malfeasance."

"Neither of the two gives any satisfactory explanation," said the Assistant Attorney General after the two had been taken in custody today and lodged in their own jail.

"Apparently they put up no resistance whatsoever."

"Blunk, at Dillinger's bidding, called four other guards so that Dillinger—still with his wooden gun—could take them prisoner."

Two Dillinger Clews Are Found in Chicago

Chicago, March 6 (AP).—Two fresh clews pointed today to the probability that John Dillinger, escaped desperado, is lurking in Chicago.

The motor car in which he and a colored companion fled after walking out of the "escape proof" jail at Crown Point, Ind., has been Connery Bill Ordered Reported Favorably by Committee.

Rail Leaders See Doom in Measure

Say Industry Cannot Survive Further "Red" Operation.

By unanimous vote, the House Labor Committee yesterday ordered a favorable report on the Connery 30-hour week bill, giving force to the President's appeal for shorter hours, and setting up a board to administer the law.

Speaker Rainey immediately threw his support behind the measure.

"I think it will pass the House," he said.

Chairman William P. Connery, jr., of the labor committee, said he will confer today with House leaders in an effort to get right-of-way for the measure.

6-Hour Rail Day Scored.

Meanwhile, officials of the Association of Railway Executives assailed proposals for a 6-hour-day for rail labor at hearings before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

"Enactment of such a law," said J. Carter Fort, general solicitor of the association, "would not only increase by approximately $600,000,000 the operating expenses of railroads, but it would threaten many of the large lines with bankruptcy."

Dr. Julius H. Parmelee, director of the Bureau of Railroad Economics, said any large increase in operating costs continuing rail operations in the red "would have a disastrous effect on the Nation's economic structure and on the general employment of labor."

The bill favorably reported yesterday by the House committee would force all industries to work on a 30-hour basis unless exempted by a board comprising the Secretary of Labor and active representatives of National trade associations and National labor unions appointed by the President, one from each.

Chairman Connery estimated it would "within a short time, put

5 Reported Killed In Airplane Crash

Pilot and 4 Passengers Die in Snowstorm.

Petersburg, Ill., March 6 (AP).—A pilot and four passengers were reported killed tonight when a Chicago-to-St. Louis plane fell 5 miles north of here.

The plane, it was reported, crashed in a blinding snowstorm into a field.

Lure of Learning Lures 2 Boys, 15, To Steal Snakes

New York, March 6 (AP).—Two youthful herpetologists today were found guilty of stealing 10 rare snakes from the Bronx Zoological Gardens, and were remanded to the Children's Society for one week.

Morton Bimstein, 15, and Elkin Norris, 15, biology students at the De Witt Clinton High School, were arraigned in Bronx Children's Court on petition of Dr. Raymond Ditmars, curator of reptiles.

In describing the stolen snakes, Dr. Ditmars, one of the world's foremost authorities on snakes, said one was four feet long.

"Five feet six and one-half inches long," corrected Bimstein, who knows a little about snakes, too.

Prince Signs Marriage Book, Weds Commoner Tomorrow

London, March 6 (AP).—Prince Sigvard of Sweden today legalized his decision to defy tradition and the wishes of his family by marrying the blonde German actress, Erika Patzek, and surrendering royal titles and privileges.

In the Caxton Hall registry office—by answering a few questions—the 26-year-old son of Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf informed "all whom it may concern" that he intends to wed the 22-year-old Erika at noon Thursday.

The wedding will be of the simplest. There will be no reception. Everything, almost, will be far different from the pomp and ceremony he could claim if he married a princess.

Following the notice of intention to wed, the Prince lost no time in resuming his quiet life in London's fashionable West End.

He was embarrassed upon arrival at the registry office to find a large crowd gathered. But he walked quickly up the steps with his legal adviser, George Gordon, and answered the legally-required questions about himself and his fiancee with dispatch.

Gordon was his spokesman.

"There will be no reception afterward," he said, "and there will be only two persons present as witnesses, the bride's mother and her brother, George Patzek—besides myself.

"The honeymoon will be spent in Italy and the bride and bridegroom will leave Friday morning on their trip."

At that point the Prince reappeared, dressed in a gray suit, a Navy blue overcoat, a soft brown hat, and brown shoes.

Fifteen minutes later the official notice of the intended marriage was posted in the book. It listed the fiancee's full name as Erika Maria Regina Rosalie Patzek, spinster, aged 22. It was signed, "Sigvard, Prince of Sweden."

'Guilty,' Says Wynekoop Murder Jury

Young Jurors Out but 2 Hours 15 Minutes for Verdict.

Chicago, March 6 (U.P.).—Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop was found guilty tonight on charges of murdering her daughter-in-law, Rheta Gardner Wynekoop, and was sentenced to serve 25 years in prison.

A jury composed of young men returned the verdict after only 2 hours and 15 minutes of deliberation, thus bringing a dramatic and speedy end to one of the most sensational criminal trials in history.

Prays as Trial Ends.

Chicago, March 6 (U.P.).—The thin, white lips of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynecoop moved in silent prayer as her trial on charges of murdering her daughter-in-law, Rheta, was placed tonight in the hands of a jury of young men.

Judge Harry B. Hiller completed his instructions at 7:15 p. m. (Eastern standard time). The 63-year-old physician bowed her head as the jurymen left the packed courtroom, held mute in the spell of the moment.

Judge Miller outlined four possible verdicts: Death in the electric chair, life imprisonment, imprisonment for any number of years not less than 14, and acquittal.

The aged defendant, worn and tired by the long ordeal and weak of a chronic heart ailment, was lifted from her seat at the counsel table and placed in a wheel chair. She was taken back to County Jail to await the verdict.

Jail Me, Jail My Dog, Says Drunk, And Court Relents

Atlanta, March 6 (AP).—A Faithful little black dog got a fellow out of a jam with the courts today.

A man, charged with being drunk, appeared before Recorder John L. Cone with his dog in his arms.

"Why did you bring that dog in here?" the judge asked.

"He won't leave me," the man said. "He spent the night in the cell with me."

"Poor dog," the judge commented. "I won't send him to the stockade. I have too much sympathy for him. Your sentence is suspended."

Woman Bonded In Mate's Slaying

Manslaughter Is Charged in Arizona Case.

Tucson, Ariz., March 6 (AP).—Mrs. Lottie G. Swinbank, of Pittsburgh, today was held under $5,000 bond to a charge of manslaughter in connection with the shooting of her husband, John J. Swinbank, a mechanical engineer, here two weeks ago. She waived a preliminary hearing and pleaded not guilty.

In binding the woman over, Justice of the Peace C. V. Budlong said, "I am doing something which is against my better judgment. I believe she's either guilty of first-degree murder or she isn't guilty of anything. But I don't make the laws."

A number of witnesses at the inquest testified Swinbank was "intoxicated" the night two shots were fired into his body.

First Lady Flies To Port au Prince

Mrs. Roosevelt in Haiti on Trip to Puerto Rico.

Port Au Prince, Haiti, March 6 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and a group of friends arrived here at 5:30 p. m. today after an uneventful flight of 752 miles from Neuvitas, Cuba.

The weather was perfect. Their craft, the American Clipper, left Neuvitas at 1:10 p. m. today after a 35-minute stop.

En Route to Peurto Rico to get first-hand information on health and economic conditions, the party remained here tonight.

Indian Heiress, 12, Mother of Daughter

Juanita, youngest daughter of Mrs. Wosey Deere, one of the wealthiest of the tribe of Creek Indians, and the baby were reported "doing nicely" at the hospital. Her husband, Buster McClish, 19, also is of Creek descent. Juanita's mother has had much litigation over her fortune, estimated at $650,000. She has been married seven times.

Senate Votes Full Treaty Navy, 65-18

100 Millions a Year Needed; Four Nations Speed Arms Race.

Developments in the naval building race between four world powers yesterday included:

The United States Senate passed the naval construction bill. It included limitations on private contract profits.

The French Chamber of Deputies naval committee approved a project to build a 26,000-ton man-of-war, a sister ship of the huge Dunkerque, now under construction. Two new submarines and a torpedo destroyer are included in the French program—an answer to the 10,000-ton "pocket cruisers" of Germany.

The British admiralty presented 1934 estimates calling for construction of 4 cruisers and 20 other vessels, with an increase in expenditures to about $282,750,000.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

By the overwhelming vote of 65 to 18, the Senate yesterday voted to authorize the President to build the American Navy up to the full strength allowed by the Washington and London disarmament treaties over a five-year period.

In doing so the Senate, however, for the first time placed a limit of not more than 10 per cent on the profits which ship and airplane builders might obtain from such construction; and provided that at least one-fourth of the airplane program should be carried out in Government-owned plants, if available—and if not available, the Senate provided, such facilities must be expanded.

The House in passing the bill in January specified that one-half of the ship tonnage should be constructed in Government yards. Thus while sentiment in Congress overwhelmingly favors a big Navy, it also took cognizance of large profits of armament makers and decided to put a curb on them.

1,000 Plane Provided.

Construction authorized under this bill included building of a 15,000-ton aircraft carrier; 99,200 tons of destroyers, 35,530 tons of submarines and approximately 1,000 airplanes, in addition to the six cruisers authorized in 1929, and the $237,000,000 Navy building program now being carried out with PWA funds.

Estimates of the cost of the program authorized in the Vinson-Trammell bill vary between $475,000,000 (including $95,000,000 for airplanes) and $750,000,000. The program would require an annual appropriation in the neighborhood of $10,000,000 for the next five years. The bill does not commit the Government to the spending of this money, although Director of the Budget Lewis Douglas raised no objection to the measure.

The Senate action came shortly after receipt of word from London that the British admiralty intends to spend immediately about $282,750,000, of $14,900,000 above the usual annual sum for naval construction.

British to Build Four Cruisers.

The British program calls for four cruisers, one leader and eight destroyers, an aircraft carrier, three submarines and eight other vessels. The fleet personnel will be increased by 2,038.

The naval committee of the French Chamber of Deputies yesterday gave its approval to plans for construction of a 26,000-ton warship, two submarines and a torpedo destroyer. The Japanese recently increased their budget allowances for naval construction.

The Vinson-Trammell bill is now

Montene, Ark., March 6 (AP).—W. H. (Coin) Harvey, 83, free silver advocate and candidate for President of the United States on the Liberty Party Ticket in 1932, is ill of erysipelas at his home here. He was stricken Sunday and while his physician said his condition is not dangerous at present, he "is a sick man."

Unemployed Father Kills Two and Self

Stabs Son, Daughter, Uses Shotgun for Suicide.

Oil City, Pa., March 6 (AP).—Axel G. Anderson, 53, a machinist, stabbed his 19-year-old daughter and 15-year-old son through the hearts today, then killed himself with a shotgun. Dr. J. R. Sharp, deputy coroner, reported the case a double slaying and suicide.

Harry Anderson, 23, another son, made the gruesome discovery. His brother Paul, who had been excused from a second period at high school, was lying beneath a table, stabbed four times. The sister, Mildred, was beside a heap of potatoes which she had been peeling. A 4-inch hunting knife had been used.

Shoemaker Charged In Assault Warrant

Hacker Gives Affidavit of Attack on Street; Paper Unserved.

Police last night held an unserved warrant for Representative Francis H. Shoemaker, fighting Farmer-Laborite from Minnesota who brags of his term in Leavenworth Penitentiary, charging that he assaulted a taxicab driver.

In a sworn statement signed in the office of Assistant United States Attorney David A. Hart, the taximan, Charles Newman, 25, of 2016 Georgia avenue, well known as an athlete at Central High School and on local sandlots, described an unprovoked attack by the Representative.

Shoemaker, the affidavit stated, struck Newman several times, after "cursing and swearing" at him and running his car into the rear and side of Newman's cab several times.

PWA's First Bond Offer Nets $20,000

29 Premium Bids Entered on Municipal Issues of $737,000 Par.

The first of the $3,300,000,000 Public Works fund established by the Government came back to the Federal Treasury yesterday when the PWA sold four blocks of municipal bonds it held, with a par value of $737,000, at a profit of $20,000.

Five blocks of municipals, bought to help finance local projects, were placed on sale by Administrator Ickes. Thirty-one bids, 29 at premium, were received, and offers were accepted on all but a group of Bel Air, Md., sewer bonds.

The two bids submitted for $100,000 of Bel Aair bonds by two Baltimore firms were below par and were rejected by Ickes.

Considerable significance attached to the sale, the first offering of municipal securities held by PWA, and the first time on record the Federal Government became a seller of municipal bonds. It was claimed the ready sale at premium demonstrated returning strength in the bond market, and that the profit indicated that through future sales, the drain on the National Treasury of the Public Works program may not be as heavy as was anticipated.

The PWA has approximately half a billion dollars of municipal securities under contract, all of which have passed close examination. More sales are planned as the Administration actually places the municipals in its portfolio.

PWA Housing Is Ruled Legal By Cummings

Slum Clearance Pushed as Opinion Sweeps Aside McCarl Objections.

The Emergency Housing Corporation of the Public Works Administration yesterday prepared to go forward with all phases of its slum-clearance program as an opinion from the Attorney General swept aside all objections raised against the corporation by Comptroller General McCarl.

In a lengthy opinion, handed down February 7, but not made public until yesterday, Attorney General Cummings held the corporation to be legal and constitutional and declared its powers to function were clearly defined.

The opinion backed up contentions of Secretary Ickes, president of the corporation, that his housing group was within the purposes of the National Industrial Recovery act. It discarded all points raised against the validity of the organization by McCarl, save one. In that, Cummings concurred with the Comptroller in holding that titles to land acquired by the corporation should be approved by the Department of Justice.

What the reaction of the Comptroller will be could not be ascertained. It was stated at his office that the opinion had not been studied, and until it was examined, there would be no statement of policy.

On the other hand, Secretary

5 Children Leap 2 Floors To Brother, as Home Burns

Berryville, Va., March 6 (Spl.).—A 20-year-old youth stood on the ground early today and caught his five little brothers and sisters as they jumped from the second story of their blazing home near here and, then obtaining a ladder from a nearby barn, rescued his mother and small brother from the residence just as the roof caved in.

George Cochran, jr., was the rescuer, as flames destroyed the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Cochran, on the William Byrd estate, to which they had moved but six days previously.

The family was awakened about 2 a. m. by intense heat. The lower floor of the house was in flames. Mr. Cochran aroused the family and jumped from the second floor to get a ladder with which to rescue his trapped family. George, jr., also jumped and called his brothers and sisters to leap. The Cochran family sought shelter with relatives near Winchester.

Party Leader May Seek Senatorship

State Committee Will Call Session to Pick Successor Soon.

By Felix Bruner.

Expressing the fear that his activities as a Washington lawyer might be embarrassing to the Administration, Arthur R. Mullen has resigned as Democratic National committeeman from Nebraska and as a vice chairman of the National committee.

His resignation as announced last night by J. J. Thomas, Nebraska State chairman and a member of the Federal Reserve Board. Thomas also announced his intention to resign as State chairman.

Mullen joined other Democratic lawyers in resigning from party positions following President Roosevelt's statement that he opposed lobbying by party officials and proposed legislation barring political lawyers

Among other prominent Democrats who have resigned party positions since the Administration let it be known that it frown on lobbying activities of party officials are Robert Jackson, of New Hampshire, who was secretary of the Democratic National committee; Frank C. Walker, as treasurer of the committee; J. Bruce Kremer, as National committeeman from Montana, and Max Gardner, as National committeeman from North Carolina.

Makes Public Letter.

Mullen, who maintains law offices in both Omaha and Washington, made public through Thomas a letter he had written to President Roosevelt and the President's reply. Mullen's resignation has been predicted since the drive on lobbyists started, but he has maintained that his practice was not of the type frowned on by the President.

In his letter to the President, dated March 3, Mullen said that certain newspaper stories had "created the inference" that his activities were "unethical and embarrassing to the Administration."

He recalled a conversation with the President last October, in which he said the President had assured him that he "had no criticism of me, either personally or professionally."

The President's reply, addressed to "Dear Arthur," said that he appreciated Mullen's motives and that he remembered expressing confidence in his integrity.

Mullen's letter to President Roosevelt said:

"Certain publications recently have appeared in the press which have sought to create the inference that my activities as a practicing attorney in Washington were unethical and embarrassing to the Administration; that because of this I had incurred your displeasure and

Greece Delays Insull Ouster

Will Give Expatriate New Medical Examination Tomorrow.

Athens, March 6 (AP).—Another period of grace in its "final" order for expulsion of Samuel Insull, 74, was granted the former Chicago utilities executive today by the Greek government.

Officials announced Insull would be examined once more by doctors Thursday noon, two hours after the expiration of their decree that he leave within 48 hours.

Insull called in a heart specialist this morning shortly after he was notified he had to get out, and it was subsequently announced a third official examination will be made by the same physicians as before.

Simultaneously, Insull's 16-month fight against deportation was conducted in another sector, when his lawyer, P. Dhallis, filed with the foreign office a plea for clemency in connection with his latest expulsion decree.

United States Minister Lincoln MacVeagh, meanwhile, refused a request by the Interior Ministry that he appoint a physician to examine Insull. MacVeagh said such a procedure would be most "irregular."

The Ministry than instructed Doctors Vladimir Bensis and Spyros Livieratos to conduct another examination. They previously found Insull could travel by sea or rail.

U. S. Redoubles Effort to Stem Auto Walkouts

Flint, Mich., March 6 (AP).—The Federal Government redoubled its mediation efforts today as strikes threatened to slow down the automobile industry, just as it was overcoming production delays resulting from labor difficulties of last fall.

James F. Dewey, conciliator for the National Labor Board, was reported tonight to have received some assurances from the spokesmen of the Fisher Body Co. employes that the scheduled strike would not materialize tomorrow morning. The representatives of the Fisher employes were to try to get an agreement from the workers tomorrow morning to postpone the walkout until after the situation had been studied by the National Labor Board in Washington March 14.

Dewey has tried to reach a similar agreement with the 10,000 union employes of the Buick Motor Car Co., but the results will not be known until after a meeting of the workers.

Unions Asked to Delay.

He had just received word from Washington that labor leaders and automobile manufacturers had been invited to attend the March 14 conference.

As soon as possible, he indicated, he would seek a postponement from union employes of the Hudson Motor Car Co. in Detroit, who also have tendered an ultimatum.

The ultimatum sent to the Hudson Motor Car Co. does not expire until Thursday morning, while the deadline for replies from the Fisher Body and Buick companies is tomorrow morning.

Fisher Strike Called.

Union employes of the Fisher Body Co.'s plant No. 1 here, which makes bodies for the Buick company, have voted to strike tomorrow morning unless the company agrees to confer on the union's demands. The men are estimated to number 4,000, although only 1,800 voted.

Union leaders claimed 10,000 of the 12,000 Hudson employes in Detroit would strike if their ultimatum is ignored.

Doctor Predicts Superior Race

Spokane, Wash., March 6 (AP).—A belief that the next hundred years will see the beginning of a superior race of men was expressed here today by Dr. Malcolm MacEachern, associate director of the American College of Surgeons.

Through scientific reduction of the mentally and physically unfit this beginning will come about, said the surgeon, a speaker at the sectional convention of the college here.

In this period, he predicted, the science of medicine will have advanced far enought to combat the destruction of the body through nervous and mental disorders caused by the terrific speed of present-end living.

4,000,000 unemployed back to work."

Employers would be given 90 days to adjust their plants to a 30-day basis, and only where a shortage of labor or other "emergency" existed, could the special board exempt industries from following that standard.

Maximum of 40 Hours.

In no case would an employe be permitted to work more than 40 hours, and in no case could an exemption be granted for longer than a 90-day stretch.

The committee unanimously concurred in a provision giving labor equal representation with industry on NRA code authorities.

One amendment would prevent employes from holding "outside" jobs in excess of an aggregate of 30 hours a week.

Another would authorize the President to ban interstate shipment of the goods of a concern violating code positions, where the code authority unanimously sanctioned such action.

Bakers Back From Cruise.

New York, March 6 (U.P.).—Mr. and Mrs. Newton D. Baker returned on the Aquitania today from a Mediterranean cruise and left for Cleveland. Also aboard was Prince Ludovico Pignatelli, who refused to discuss a report that he will marry Miss Mary Duke Biddle, daughter of the late Benjamin Duke.

Experiment

Miss Perkins Called Best One of Administration.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA head, thinks the most successful of the Roosevelt program of experiments is having a woman in the Cabinet, the Associated Press reported.

He expressed this idea before several thousand business men gathered for the NRA Code Authority sessions. Secretary of Labor Perkins was present.

"I've been so busy," she promptly replied, "that until reminded I had quite forgotten I was an experiment."

The industrialists recorded approval of both sentiments by standing up in a body to applaud the Cabinet woman.

Representative in Code Charge

Labor Chalks Up 2 Victories As Code Chiefs Hit Pay Raise

mill "chiselers" in the South had been receiving encouragement from Representative H. P. Fulmer (Democrat), South Carolina, who wrote several of them letters telling them that if they could not comply with the lumber code, to use "common sense" and be as fair as they could regarding hours and wages in line with prices they were receiving for their lumber.

Letters written to sawmill operators by Representative Fulmer were offered in one of the code conferences by B. C. Sheppard, of the lumber code authority, who said he had indications that others in Congress had written similar letters.

NRA's blow at company unions came late in the day when William H. Davis, compliance director, appeared at the conference on code administration and declared he had been authorized by Gen. Johnson to say that many plans for company unions in the steel and automobile industries were regarded as in violation of the law.

"I am authorized by the administrator to say," Davis said, "that the investigation by the compliance division has disclosed the fact that a great many printed plans of employe representation in the automobile industry and in the steel industry has shown that these plans contain provisions which, in the opinion of the administrator, are continuing violations of the spirit of Section 7a, and continuing interference with the right of self-government of the employees.

"An example of such a provision which is commonly found in these plans is that there shall be no change in the self-organization of the workers without the approval of the plant managers. We regard that as continuing interference with self-organization.

"It is a very widespread thing and it is proposed to treat it by mass action, that is, to take the matter up through the code authorities with all the industries involved to bring the discussion into the arena of NRA."

Debate Price Control.

Davis explained that the situation would be handled through NRA administrative agencies with industry represented by its code authorities and by individuals, and with advisory boards present.

Price-control clauses in a number of codes were the subject of debate in yesterday's conferences. Likewise, there was criticism and praise of provisions limiting use of machinery in some codes. The operation of the textile code, where this limitation has been prominent, was praised by George Sloan, of the cotton textile code authority, but he urged that overlapping codes be merged.

The real field day was in the employment group, where the President's proposals for further tightening down on hours and boosting of wages was discussed.

Industrialists composing the large audience applauded when A. P. Haake, of Chicago, representing the furniture code authority, asked:

"What shall we use for money?"

This was a popular theme throughout the discussion.

"While NRA has done many wonderful things, I think it should reconsider the proposal for shorter hours and increased wages," said Sam Traylor, manufacturer, Allentown, Pa. "The Government should do something for the poor manufacturer and should not try to penalize industry by forcing us to accept the principle of raising wages and reducing hours of work."

Traylor said he had $400,000 in new orders, but was having trouble finding skilled mechanics.

Skilled Mechanics Scarce.

The paper and pulp industry can not meet the President's request, said Sidney L. Wilson, its spokesman, unless it gets higher prices. Under the code, he declared, the industry had increased its working forces 38 per cent, but could do nothing more unless it were guaranteed open price provisions, which he called "essential to the maintenance of stability."

Elwood Kaiser, of the automotive maintenance authority, declared he was one of the most enthusiastic supporters of NRA, but opposed shortening hours at present.

"We're not near enough compliance under the present codes," he said. "The same chiselers who made the law necessary are breaking it now." He asked that CWA workers be assigned to code authorities, in order to improve enforcement.

"The President asked for constructive criticism," said George F. Houston, head of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, and spokesman for the machine and allied products industries. "We suggest that the Administration support the heavy industries by assisting in every way to reopen the capital markets."

Houston attacked the securities act, the bill to regulate stock exchanges and the provisions in the banking law taking commercial banks out of the underwriting business. He said that American enterprise had paid out about $45,000,000,000 in losses during the depression, not including stock market losses.

Must Have a Profit.

"The heavy industries," Houston said, "would have been much better off if they had shut down in 1931 and kept shut down. We can't do business without a profit much longer."

Houston declared that the cost of producing heavy equipment was now up to the 1929 level. The manufacturers could not pass this additional cost along to customers, he said, because customers would not buy their products, "unless they can see ahead of them a profitable use for those products."

"This Nation can support its population," said H. Blumberg, labor adviser for the men's clothing authority, to an audience composed almost exclusively of employers. Blumberg told of how employers in the men's clothing industry had fought anything below the 40-hour week when their code was originally drawn. They got a 36-hour week.

"Did it destroy the industry?" he demanded. "You'd think the 40-hour week was in the Bible." He pointed out that those who opposed previous shortening of hours were the same group as those who oppose them now, and reminded his listeners that if they did not reemploy workers, they would have to support them anyway through the tax-supported CWA. "The workers and the masses of the Nation are following Franklin D. Roosevelt," Blumberg declared.

The hall was darkened when William J. Cronin, secretary of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, appeared to present his case with the aid of charts flashed on a screen.

The automobile industry has taken the brunt of attack in recent weeks from labor organizers who have charged it with disregarding worker's rights under the recovery act. As Cronin spoke, a strike of 30,000 automobile workers threatened in Flint, Mich.

In an effort to head it off, Senator Robert F. Wagner, chairman of the National Labor Board, called for hearings next week. Throughout the day, he conferred with William S. Knudson and Donaldson Brown, General Motors officials.

$30 Automobile Wage.

Cronin declared that employment and hourly wage rates in the industry were back to 1929 levels, and "if we are not held up by labor agitation, we can hire more men at just as high wages." Workers were getting a far larger share of the industry's income, he said because of the fact that work has been spread more widely and an average weekly wage of almost $30 maintained, in spite of the fact that business volume wa still well behind 1929.

I. Rapheal, of the fur dressers and dyers code authority, said his industry was improving rapidly and predicted all of its unemployed would be working by fall. NRA machinery, he said, had brought order out of chaos in the fur industry.

W. H. Robbins, of San Francisco, representing the ice code authority, brought loud applause when he said:

"The chiseler is encouraged by the failure of the Government to show its teeth. Give us the backing of the law and we'll show you how industry can govern itself."

Scottsboro Case Appeals Pushed

Bills of Exceptions Filed for Two Defendants.

Decatur, Ala., March 6 (AP).—Bills of exceptions in the appeals of Heywood Patterson and Clarence Norris from death sentences imposed in the "Scottsboro case" last December 6, today were filed here by defense counsel, preparatory to taking the case to the Alabama Supreme Court.

Judge W. W. Callahan, who presided, and who on February 24 held he was without jurisdiction in motions for a new trial, has 60 days in which to sign the bills that then go to the Alabama Supreme Court for a hearing and decision.

The colored men, two of nine arrested at Paint Rock, Ala., March 25, 1931, charged with attacking two white girls aboard a Southern Railway freight train, were convicted by Morgan County juries of attacking Mrs. Victoria Price.

Keeping Wages Down Is Called Trade Suicide

Boston Merchant Says Pay Raises Return in Increased Sales.

Business men who oppose the further shortening of hours and increase of wages under the NRA are "missing their big opportunity"—in effect, are "committing suicide"—according to Edward A. Filene, Boston department store owner.

On a visit to the White House in which he made an appointment to see the President today, Mr. Filene declared a tour of 14 important cities had convinced him there is no opposition to the Administration's monetary policy, even by the bankers.

There is definite criticism of the securities act, however, he said, on the ground it tends to freeze the flow of long-term credit.

Concerning increasing wages under the NRA, he asserted:

"If business men would understand that we would make our own market by increasing wages, they would work as hard for shortening hours and raising wages as they did the opposite in the past.

"Business men are coming here and missing their chance. If they succeed in keeping hours up and wages down, they are killing their own market. The masses of workers with small incomes supply more than two-thirds of the whole market."

of the Ohio bar. Justice Allen in her 20 years as a lawyer has achieved the highest distinction ever accorded a woman in the legal profession.

A native of Salt Lake City, Justice Allen will be 50 years old March 28. She served as Berlin correspondent for the New York Musical Courier from 1904 to 1906. From 1906 to 1909, she was a member of the editorial staff of the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Following her admission to the bar, she plunged into a fight for woman suffrage. Then she became an arbiter in a labor union case. She was elected to the Ohio Supreme Court in 1922 and later re-elected. Previously, she had been a common pleas judge in Cleveland for two years. Following her elevation to the State Supreme Court, she had her hair bobbed.

In 1916 Justice Allen was an unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate. In 1932 she was an unsuccessful candidate for Congress.

Justice Allen is liberal in her views. As a Supreme Court justice she has the respect of her associates and of the bar. Her appointment was recommended by Senator Robert J. Bulkley (Democrat), Ohio.

found in front of a North Side apartment building.

Also, police disclosed that Dillinger was sighted here and pursued last Saturday. Policeman Lorimer Hyde said he spotted the gang leader and a woman riding in the car through the same North Side district.

Dillinger, police believe, parked the machine outside the apartment Saturday night. Three squads of police kept a day and night watch over it, in the hope that the gunman would return, but he failed to do so.

Police believed the woman seen in Dillinger's company was the one who called at the Crown Point Jail, posed as Dillinger's wife and talked to him in code.

Meantime, in Youngstown, Ohio, two men who said they believed Dillinger was in Youngstown last night looked at pictures of the outlaw today and then declared they were certain that the man they suspected was Dillinger.

The men, a night clerk and a resident at the Empire Hotel, said a man who came into the hotel last night acted in a suspicious manner. They described him as being "a dead ringer" for the gunman's pictures.

Pal Called to Trial In Sheriff's Slaying

Lima, Ohio, March 6 (AP).—While John Dillinger hid from the law today, Harry Pierpont, his pal, was called to trial on a charge of murdering a sheriff in a jail delivery of Dillinger last October 12.

Pierpont, the State charges, was "trigger man" in the jail delivery in which Sheriff Jess Sarber was killed. He was captured with Dillinger and others in Arizona several weeks ago, and returned here on the murder charge, while Dillinger was locked in the Crown Point (Ind.) jail, facing a charge of slaying another peace officer.

A venire of 60 men was called, but selection of a jury awaited completion of a hearing by Common Pleas Judge E. E. Everett on a defense plea of abatement and a demurrer.

Fulmer's Sawmill Letters

Representative Advised South Carolinians to Operate Their Lumber Business on "Common-Sense Basis," Being as "Fair as Possible."

Herewith are the letters of Representative H. P. Fulmer (Democrat), South Carolina, regarding the lumber code which were put into the record of the NRA code conference;

To E. W. Watson, Windsor, S. C., Feb. 16, 1934: "Replying to your letter just received, will state that I have conferred with a representative of the NRA with the hope that we will be able to work out some plan whereby small sawmill operators would be able to operate their mills without much trouble under the code. It appears, however, that we are unable to make much headway.

"If I were you, I would operate your mill on a common sense basis, being just as fair to the hands who work for you as you possibly can, in line with the prices which you receive for your lumber.

"I understand that a man will go down to South Carolina, representing the lumber code and also a representative of the Federal Trade Commission, for the purpose of trying to get complete information so as to be helpful in perhaps modifying the code which would be helpful to small sawmills. Just as soon as I have some report from these parties I will be glad to communicate with you.

"P. S.—A man will call upon you in next few days. Look out for him."

To R. M. Hunter, Bamberg, S. C.: "Replying to your letter of December 29, will state that I have just been informed by Gen. Johnson that only provisions applying to hours and wages apply to sawmills of your type.

"I feel sure that it will be impossible for you to cut hours and pay the wages prescribed in the code for reasons that you are unable to demand such prices for your lumber in the locality in which you sell your lumber to take care of this additional expense.

"I have therefore advised sawmill operators in my district to continue operating on a common sense basis, being just as fair as they possibly can to wage earners as to hours and wages, in line with the prices received for their lumber."

Coded Concerns to Receive Serial Eagles Within Week

The new Blue Eagles, part of the latest phase of the recovery program, will be issued to coded concerns within a week, the Associated Press said yesterday. These will have different serial numbers for different industries.

The value of the Blue Eagle was disputed and upheld in yesterday's NRA discussions.

Lew Hahn, of the Retail Code Authority, said that to him Gen. Johnson's belief in the efficacy of the Blue Eagle was pitiful. "It has become the General's private trademark," he said.

Replying, Franklin S. Pollak, of NRA's legal division, replied that in almost every case where the Blue Eagle had been withdrawn the head of the busines had come crying to Washington, ready to surrender.

"In every case," he continued, "we have required that they pay all back wages due. In one case, a New York firm paid back between $30,000 and $40,000 in back salaries. Some firms have reported as much as a 75 per cent loss because of loss of the Blue Eagle. We feel that in the case of the code Eagles the loss will be even greater when the insignia is withdrawn."

War Contract Probe to Again Hear Woodring

Aid Will Be Asked Who Changed Specifications for Airplanes.

Assistant Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring will be questioned by the Rogers committee today regarding changes in specifications on Army aircraft to be purchased with $7,500,000 of PWA funds.

The committee already has heard Woodring deny he made the changes, bu testimony of Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, Chief of Air Corps, before the House Appropriations Committee placed responsibility directly upon the Assistant Secretary.

As a result of the changes, the War Department arranged, through competitive bidding inaugurated by Woodring, to purchase planes incapable of the performances called for by the original specifications of the Army Air Corps.

10,000 Expenses Voted.

The $7,500,000 contracts have been held up, pending the present investigation. The House yesterday voted the military affairs committee $10,000 the Military Affairs Committee $10,000 for a general investigation of all War Department purchases and leases since 1926.

Representative Rogers (Democrat), New Hampshire, heads the subcommittee which will question Woodring, while another subcommittee, under the chairmanship of Representative Hill (Democrat), Alabama, goes into the leasing of the Port Newark Army Base to the Mercur Corporation of New Jersey.

When the Rogers committee began its inquiry into the procurement of new planes with PWA funds, Woodring defended competitive bidding and assured Congress the aircraft to be acquired would be satisfactory. He made categorical denial of charges he lowered the requirements as to speed, range and ceiling, in order that certain companies, overlooked by the Air Corps in negotiated contracts, might compete.

Foulois Claims "Pressure."

Gen. Foulois told the Appropriations Committee, however, that the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Co., and the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation had brought pressure upon the Assistant Secretary of War, and that later Woodring changed the specifications.

The committee will give Woodring an opportunity to explain this morning, as well as going into other phases of the proposed purchases through the Assistant Secretary of War's office.

For its further enlightenment, the committee spent yesterday afternoon hearing the testimony of a Kansas airplane builder, Walter Beech, who had been unable to obtain Army contracts under the method of negotiation employed until Woodring took charge.

Members of the Rogers committee favor the competitive bidding method, but have indicated skepticism that everything was an competitive as could be desired.

Gov. Pinchot Hails Decision To Make New Deal Permanent

Gov. Pinchot yesterday wired congratulations to President Roosevelt on his address declaring permanence for the New Deal, according to the Associated Press.

"Coming on the same day as the Supreme Court decision in the (milk) price-fixing case," the Governor said, "It makes March 5 a red-letter day in the history of the United States.

"The people of Pennsylvania are behind you in your decision to make the New Deal permanent and to require property rights to yield to human welfare.

"Theodore Roosevelt worked and fought to make human rights supreme over property rights, and that is what the people of the United States want.

"The Supreme Court decision opens the way to break down the strangle-hold of concentrated wealth over our people. Human rights are emerging as supreme over money."

Driver Swears Out Warrant On Shoemaker

Taxi Operator Charges Assault; Paper Not Yet Served.

Shoemaker denied striking the driver.

When first asked to comment on the taximan's charges, Shoemaker would only say that they were merely another attempt to defame him. Later he said that no blows were struck in the traffic dispute he had with Newman.

Policeman Joseph S. Cooke, of the Traffic Bureau, who figured in the later part of the dispute, declared that as he was directing traffic at Ninth and U streets Monday night he saw a disturbance between two men.

When he approached, Representative Shoemaker asked him to arrest Newman. Shoemaker, Policeman Cooke said, was using foul language. When Cooke said they were tying up traffic, Shoemaker replied, he said, "I am a Congressman, and I'll tie up traffic for an hour if I want to."

Refused to Show Permit.

The policeman said the Representative refused to show his operator's permit, but he did get out his personal card. Cooke said he was almost run down when Shoemaker jumped into his car and drove off hurriedly.

Shoemaker, whose denunciations of conditions at Lorton Reformatory inspired the present investigation of condition there, has been accused of assault on several occasions. Last spring he blacked the eye of a Chastleton Apartment dweller, whose radio disturbed him.

Newman's affidavit described the Monday night affair as beginning while he was in his cab waiting for a red light to change at New Jersey and Rhode Island avenues. "Someone in back," he declared, started tooting his horn" as the yellow light flashed.

"Then the car in the rear struck my car with a terrific smash, knocking my car into the middle of Rhode Island avenue," Newman's statement read. "He continued running and jamming into the rear of my cab with great force, pushing me all the way to New Jersey and Florida avenues."

Then, Newman said, Shoemaker forced his cab to the curb. The Representative jumped out and while he (Newman) was still in his cab, struck him in the left eye with his left fist, Newman said. When Shoemaker drove away, Newman followed.

At Ninth and U streets both machines were stopped by a traffic signal, Newman said. Policeman Cooke appeared, and then, the taxicab driver swore, Shoemaker jumped from his car, pushed the policeman aside and struck him again, this time on the chin.

When the policeman asked Shoemaker for his permit, Newman related he said: "I'll show you nothing. I am Congressman Shoemaker. You can't bother me. Lock this man us." Then Shoemaker drove away, Newman said. His affidavit closed with the statement, "It is my full intention to prosecute Congressman Shoemaker for the assaults committed upon me."

Shoemaker declared that he had been delayed on his way home by a taxi which loitered in front of him trying to pick up fares. "I pushed him to the curb with my bumper, when he refused to move and took his number," he said.

Claims Taxi Followed.

The Representative said he drove off and the taxi followed, forcing him to the curb. "Then," Shoemaker said, "I probably would have hit him when he came at me, but then a policeman stepped in. I am amazed to hear that a warrant has been issued, because there are no grounds for such action."

Shoemaker went to Police Court last spring on the Chastleton Apartment affair. Then he was accused of hitting Theodore Cohen, when, as he said, Cohen came at him in a threatening manner when he went to Cohen's room to ask discontinuance of the singing of "Sweet Adeline."

Cohen's version was that Shoemaker called on the telephone and said "Cut off that radio or I'll break your necks. I am the only former convict in Congress and I'm hard-boiled. I'm another Hitler." Later the Representative came down and, when told to leave, hit him, Cohen said.

After the case had been continued in Police Court several times, Cohen finally dropped the charge.

Last summer at Minneapolis, Shoemaker was kept awake by a street car repair crew of two men working outside his hotel room. He went out and announced "I'll fight the whole bunch of you. I'm the fighting Congressman."

Then, the Associated Press reported, he demolished seven red lanterns. A policeman, who arrived as the supply of lanterns were depleted, took Shoemaker to the station. He was released and the workers went home as they couldn't go on without the lanterns.

Feud Ends; 1 Dead.

North Bergen, N. J., March 6 (U.P.). A feud between two neighbors ended today, police said, in the slaying of one and the attempted suicide of the other. Anthony Zally, 42, was killed by a shotgun blast, and his neighbor, Peter Stein, 46, a drug clerk, was in a critical condition. Stein, who recently lost a job, allegedly blamed his neighbor.

ready for conference, except that it has been delayed in the Senate by a motion of Senator Clarence C. Dill (Democrat), of Washington, for reconsideration of the vote of approval. Senator Dill voted for the bill, but after its adoption asked the action be reconsidered to permit action on an amendment by him.

This amendment would require that in accepting bids for warcraft from Pacific Coast private yards, the Navy make an allowance for the cost of transportation of necessary materials from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast. Senator Dill said he was called from the chamber just before the final vote was taken.

Democratic leader Joseph T. Robinson favored giving Senator Dill a chance to get action on his amendment but Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, said he had several amendments to offer and wanted the same opportunity. Senator Robinson would not agree to that and Senator Lynn J. Frazier (Republican), of North Dakota, would not agree unless the King amendments were considered.

This empasse caused Senator Dill to file a motion to reconsider the bill. Until voted on, his motion will have the effect of keeping the bill on the Senate table. In all probability an amicable solution of the difficulty will be worked out with the bill repassed and sent to the House for concurrence or a joint conference.

Republicans Oppose Bill.

Those voting against the bill were seven Republicans, ten Democrats and one Farmer-Laborite. The 65 favoring the bill included 41 Democrats and 24 Republicans.

The opponents of the measure included Senators Bulow, Costigan, Glass, King, Long, Murphy, Pope, Thomas (Oklahoma) and Thomas (Utah), all Democrats; Borah, Capper, Dickinson, Frazier, La Follette, Norris and Nye, Republicans, and Senator Shipstead, Farmer-Laborite.

The amendment limiting profits on the construction program was offered by Senator Park Trammell, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee. It provided that on no contract for more than $10,000 should the profit be in excess of 10 per cent. Contractors must agree to open their books for Government inspection, in addition to making oath to the Secretary of the Treasury as to profits. All profits above 10 per cent are to revert to the Treasury.

Nye Denounces "Bullying" Measure.

Senator Homer Bone (Democrat), Washington, offered the amendment providing that 25 per cent of the airplane construction, including engines, should be undertaken in Government-owned plants, provided, however, that if the President should determine that present plants were inadequate to handle that amount of work the requirement may be suspended. In such a case, expansion of the Government plants is required at once.

In the debate which preceded the final vote Senator Nye denounced the bill as "blustering and bullying." He said it would chiefly benefit munitions makers.

Senator Bone in urging his amendment, originally drawn to require building of one-half of the proposed airplanes in Government plants, contended its adoption was necessary to save the Government from being victimized by manufacturers. The latter, he said, had enjoyed a "Roman holiday." Senator Long assailed what he called the "corruption" of the ship builders.

The bill was defended by Senators Hiram Johnson (Republican), of California; Frederick Hale (Republican), of Maine; J. Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, and Trammell. The latter said this country was not responsible for the war-spirit abroad in the world but that it should be prepared.

British Given Biggest Navy Bill in 5 Years

London, March 6 (U.P.).—Great Britain's determination to rule the waves was emphasized today with publication of the new naval building program calling for 17 new warships.

The naval estimates for the coming year call for increased expenditures on war craft of almost every description, from aircraft carriers to submarines.

The proposals call for total expenditures of 56,550,000 pounds sterling ($282,750,000), against 53,570,000 pounds ($267,850,000) for the fiscal year just ending.

The program would increase the fleet's personnel by 2,038, bringing the total to 92,338. The estimated expenditures exceed any in the last five years.

In submitting the estimates to the House of Commons, Sir Bolton Eyres-Monsell, first lord of the admiralty, explained that of this year's increased expenditure of $14,900,000, some $7,237,747 is required to make "normal progress" in new warship construction.

He said an addtional $1,263,052 was required for the naval air force.

French Expand Navy And Aircraft Program

Paris, March 6 (AP).—France's rapid-evolving program to build up defensive strength took another long stride today.

Speedy approval was given by the naval committee of the Chamber of Deputies for the construction of a battle cruiser of 26,000 tons, which will be a sister ship to the Dunkerque, now under construction.

Also included in the naval program are two new submarines and a torpedo destroyer.

Preparations for a greatly augmented air force are progressing. A three-year construction pogram is planned.

A "flying battleship," armed with three machine guns and a huge speedy bombing plane are being added to the air force.

The seaplane, the biggest fighting craft of its kind in France, is capable of carrying a 14-ton load.

PWA's Initial Bond Auction Nets $20,000

29 Premium Bids Entered for Municipal Issues of $737,000 Par.

gathered in the Interior Department auditorium to watch Secretary Ickes open the bids. Frankly jubilant, the Public works chief declared the bidding showed that "private sources are now awakening and are willing to assume their proper function."

The bonds and successful bidders were: $125,000 Cedar Rapids (Iowa) 4 per cent sewer bonds, sold to White Phillips Co., Davenport, Iowa, for $127,839; $250,000 Erie County (N. Y.) 4 per cent road and bridge bonds, Salomon Brothers & Hutzler, New York, $250,010; $200,000 Lynchburg (Va.) 4 per cent water supply bonds, Brown Goodwyn & Co., Washington, $203,530; $162,000 Richmond County (Ga.) 4½ per cent school bonds, $175,671.

Officials, Encouraged.

The evidence of revived strength in the municipal bond market was taken as a highly encouraging sign by PWA officials. The sale, they said, demonstrated that between the time that the PWA was successful bidder on the bonds by offering par, and the time of the sale, enough encouragement entered the bond market to send 29 bidders after the same bonds at premium.

The bonds were purchased by PWA in the provided money for local public works, at the same time obligating the localities, through their bonds, to pay the money back. Secretary Ickes asserted the sale showed his administration was now returning public obligations to their normal market, and that private initiative was returning to work in underwriting municipal prjoects.

Money Returns in 8 Months.

Also significant was the fact that a little more than eight months after Congress appropriated $3,300,000,000 to finance the Public Works program, the money advanced began to flow back to the Treasury, with a $20,000 profit on this particular part of the appropriation. Should the sale of the municipal bonds held by PWA hold up and continue to attract premium prices, it is expected that the return of the works fund to the Treasury will be accelerated and some profit will be shown.

"Today's sale," said Secretary Ickes, "establishes the broader conception of the Public Works theory of aiding employment to speed recovery. PWA bought these municipal bonds when private finance failed to function for qualified public works. Today's bids show that in the instances involved, private sources are now awakening and are willing to assume their proper function.

Bel Air Case Not Important.

"Therefore the investment was returned to the regular market and by the procedure followed the Government secured the National benefits of the employment involved and also sold the bonds it bought for more than it paid for them."

Failure to receive par bids for the Bel Air bonds was not regarded as of great moment. Ickes previously announced that he reserved the right in sales to reject any bids below par, and followed up his declaration.

Sale of the bonds was within terms of agreements made by municipalities in selling their securities to the PWA, and is authorized by the National industrial recovery act. The bonds were examined by bond counsel and the finance, engineering and legal divisions of PWA. In advance of the sale, Ickes stated the offering was to be made without any Federal guarantee of the securities sold, and stipulated that successful bidders were not to represent to any prospective purchasers that the bonds were guaranteed in any manner by the Federal Government.

PWA Housing Declared Legal By Cummings

"It's a matter between the Attorney General and Mr. McCarl now," he said. "We're going ahead. All I'm doing is occupying a ringside seat if there is any trouble about it. The opinion has been rendered, and it looks to me as if that's the law."

In effect, the Attorney General's opinion held that Title II of the NIRA authorized the President to create corporate agencies to carry out the purposes of the title; that he was authorized to create such a corporate agency under State laws; that the corporation can acquire and convey real estate in its own name, and that Ickes or his corporation can secure land options without sanction of the Comptroller General.

Vouchers to Force Issue.

It also held that the powers of the emergency corporation should not exceed those necessary to carry out the Public Works program as defined in the act, but that it was proper to use Public Works funds to pay expenses of incorporating the agency.

It was pointed out that the real showdown on the ruling will come when the Housing Corporation presents its first vouchers to McCarl for approval. McCarl rejected transfer of Public Works funds to the corporation, thereby tying up its operations, but after discussions with representatives of Secretary Ickes he allowed the corporation to function in a limited manner. However, fortified by the opinion, the corporation now will exercise full functions and will forward its vouchers to the Comptroller. At that time McCarl can either conform to the opinion or raise still further objections, although legal authorities said precedent would require him to respect the Attorney General's contentions.

Concluding his opinion, Cummings suggested to Ickes that in the future it might be "preferable" to organize corporate "agencies of this character" in the District of Columbia rather than in a State.

Rolph Is Improved.

Mullen Resigns Democratic National Committee Position

ill will, and, therefore, should resign from the National Democratic committee.

"Press Statements Untrue."

"Knowing that such press statements were and are untrue, and confident that you believed my conduct to be entirely proper, I have not resigned.

"You will recall doubtless that last October we discussed the propriety of National committeemen practicing law in Washington. At thta time you assured me that you had no criticism of me either personally or professionally.

"In view of the pending legislation, I now fell, however, that my continuance in the office of National committeeman might be construed as indicative of opposition to you nad to your Administration, and as a lack of cooperation with you. I do not wish to be placed in this position. It has been, and is, my earnest desire to do whatever I can to assist you.

"With this in mind, I am requesting the chairman of the State Central Committee of Nebraska to call a meeting of that committee for the purpose of accepting my resignation and electing my successor."

President Roosevelt replied on March 5:

"Have just received your letter in which you indicate your intention to submit your resignation as National committeeman for Nebraska to the chairman of the State committee.

Motive Is Appreciated.

"It is necessary for me to state that I appreciate the motives which prompt you to take this action. I recall distinctly talking with you last October when the question of your law practice in Washington was brought up and I remember assaurances of confidence in your integrity that I expressed.

"I can appreciate your feeling, as indicated in your letter to me, that the time has come when you feel you should resign as National committeeman. I want you to know, however, that there is no change in my personal friendship for you and that I will continue to county on your unswerving loyalty to the principles for which we stand, your entire sympathy with the steps we are taking toward National recovery and a continuation of that loyal support to these principles that you have always manifested.

"I know that your retirement as National committeeman will in no way lessen your deep interest in public affairs and I shall welcome a continuation of your counsel and advice where the welfare of your State and country are concerned."

Mullen is one of the President's closest political friends. He was floor leader for the Roosevelt forces in the Chicago National convention. Following election, Mr. Roosevelt offered him an appointment on the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, but Mullen declined the post on the ground that he felt he could be of more assistance to the President in his political capacity.

May Run for Senate.

It is reported that Mullen may be a candidate for the United States Senate, against Gov. Charles W. Bryan and Willis Reed, a former Nebraska attorney general, who already have announced for the Senate.

Mullen's resignation will be presented at a meeting on the Nebraska Democratic State committee March 17, when his successor is expected to be named. Under the Nebraska law, the National committeeman is elected every four years in the State primary. Mullen's successor will be appointed to serve until the 1936 primary.

Mullen yesterday was en route to Omaha. He is a native of Ontario, Candaa, and has been active in the Democratic party for more than 30 years.

His resignation is another chapter in the story of political lobbying which has plagued the Administration since its beginning. With the New Deal and the vast projects accompanying it, politicians who are supposed to have "an in" with various officials have been flocking to Washington, setting up law offices or other agencies.

These activities have called for blasts from the Interior- Department, the Treasury Department, the Home Owners Loan Corporation and finally from the President. They have been the subject of Congressional nad grand jury investigation.

Also involved indirectly is Postmaster General Farley, who besides being a Cabinet member, is Democratic National chairman and chairman of the New York Democratic Central Committee. Farley has indicated that he intends to resign his position as national chairman.

Would Make Practice Criminal.

The legislation referred to by Mullen in his letter to the President was a bill introduced last month by Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, to amend the criminal code to forbid National committee members of either party from handling cases before Government Departments or from accepting positions under the Treasury Department.

President Roosevelt has let it be known that he approves this proposed legislation, and that he favors a general sweeping out of persons who have or claim to have political influence. At a conference with authors of proposed anti-lobby legislation last Friday, the President said he wanted action on the measure at this session.

The legislation may be extended further than at first suggested. Besides barring members of National political committees from practice, provision would be made for regulation by the departments to eliminate those people who make a livelihood on representation of influence, which the President regards as amounting to false pretense.

Many in U. S. Posts.

A number of party officials besides Farley are in the employ of the Government and further opposition to their dual duties may result in resignations.

Among these persons are Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the mint and a committeewoman from Wyoming and the vice chairman of the National committee; W. A. Julian, treasurer of the United States and National committeeman from Ohio; Jed C. Adams, member of the Board of Tax Appeals and committeeman from Texas.

W. W. Howes, First Assistant Postmaster General and committeeman from South Dakota; Dudley Doolittle, general agent for the Farm Credit Administration in Kansas and committeeman from that State; Archibald McNeil, Connecticut committeeman and State PWA chairman; Mrs. Fannie Dixon Welch, Connecticut committeewoman and and collector of the port of New Haven; Horatio Abbott, Michigan committeeman and collector of internal revenue at Detroit.

Joseph Wolf, Minnesota committeeman and collector of internal revenue at St. Paul; Mrs. Stanley V. Hodge, Minnesota committeewoman and collector of customs at St. Paul; W. T. Kemper, Missouri committeeman and agent for the RFC; H. H. Perry, North Dakota committeeman and collector of internal revenue at Fargo; Miss Nellie Dougherty, North Dakota committeewoman and postmistress at Minot.

Conference Put Up To Europe by Child

Revived Economic Parley Held Powers' Lookout.

After a farewell talk with President Roosevelt, Richard Washburn Child told reporters yesterday the initiative for reviving the world economic conference was up to European nations, the Associated Press reported.

Child, who is going abroad to make a three months' survey of European conditions for Secretary Hull, said:

"We have nothing to propose. It is up to the other nations if the conference is to be revived."

Hull spoke in his capacity of chairman of the American delegation to the London economic conference.

French Study Token Payment On U. S. Debt

New Agreement May Be Sought Before Move by Roosevelt.

Paris, March 6 (U.P.).—The French government may seek to reopen the debt question before President Roosevelt sends his war debt message to Congress, it was learned in reliable quarters today

The United Press was informed that certain influential officials were anxious to make a friendly gesture before Mr. Roosevelt asks Congress to reconsider the delicate debts issue.

These officials believed that any indication that France is willing to make even a "token payment" in June would help create a favorable atmosphere in America.

The gesture might ease the way for suggestions by the President to reopen the debts question and effect a new compromise settlement which France demands. Feeling in the United States was believed to oppose further concessions, particularly in view of the fact that France has been in default on the last three payments.

The French Ambassador in Washington, Andre de Laboulaye was reliably understood to have sounded the Department of State on his own initiative, in an effort to ascertain what reaction the offer of a token payment, on the British style, might have.

MacDonald Denies Islands to Be Ceded

London, March 6 (U.P.).—Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald today dispelled "fears" that Great Britain is considering ceding part of her colonies to the United States in return for a settlement of her war debt to America.

"I think it is self-evident that under no circumstance can there be any question of such an arrangement," the Prime Minister said, in response to queries in the House of Commons.

Apprehension was reported that Bermuda and other West Indies islands might be ceded.

Strewl Kidnap Jurors Shown Death Threat

Note "Offering" to Kill O'Connell Revealed at Trial.

Albany, N. Y., March 6 (A.P.).—A scarcastic ransom note, in which the kidnapers offered to "accommodate" the O'Connell brothers, Albany political leaders, by murdering their nephew, Lieut. John J. O'Connell, jr., was introduced at the trial of Manney Strewl today.

District Attorney John T. Delaney produced a crudely printed note received by Daniel P. O'Connell and his brother, Ed, the uncles, on July 18. This was 11 days after O'Connell was spirited away and after his uncles had protested they could never hope to raise $250,000 ransom as demanded.

The note said:

"Heard from Manney. What you offered is an insult. We want action. If you want John alive, get 250 G's. If you want him the other way we can accommodate you. We don't like your kind. If you're going to bargain we'll end it. When we asked for 250 G's we knew you could get it.

"Manney, if you get the money tomorrow, have all shades in your house drawn. Roma."

Mrs. Evva A. Gray, Winchester Buried

Funeral Services Held at Reformed Church.

Winchester, Va., March 6 (Spl.).—Funeral rites were conducted here today from the Centenary Reformed Church for the late Mrs. Evva Ashby Gray, widow of Capt. Robert L Gray, who died Sunday. The Rev. Dr. S. L. Flickinger and the Rev Dr. Luther A. Thomas officiated. Burial was in Mount Hebron Cemetery.

Mrs. Gray, a native of Winchester, was a daughter of the late Samuel S. and Elizabeth Anderson, members of a prominent northern Virginia family. Her husband was a Winchester business man and leader in volunteer fire companies.

Mrs. Gray is survived by four sons, Robert L. Gray, of London, England; Allen G. Gray, of Winchester, and Carlin F. and Richard H. Gray, of Washington, D. C., and three daughters, Mrs. Harry C. Stouffer, Mrs. Wyatt H Richard and Miss Louise E. Gray, all of Winchester; a sister, Mrs. George E. McCartney, and two brothers, Frank Anderson, of Winchester, and Benjamin C. Anderson, of Philadelphia.

-:- The New Dealers -:-

—The Low Down on the Higher Ups—

Hull Not New Deal's Hamlet, But Its Banquo

By the Unofficial Observer.

CORDELL HULL'S specialty in Congress was taxation. He wrote the first Federal Income Tax law in 1913, the revised income tax law of 1916 and the first Federal inheritance tax law in the same year. He was regarded as both able and impartial and was hence available for distinguished party service, acting as chairman of the Democratic National committee from 1921 to 1924, the blackest period of Democratic eclipse. In many ways he was the best chairman the party had had in many years, because he conscientiously kept in touch with the rank and file of the party workers. He muscled his way back to the House in 1922, where he remained until 1930, when he moved on to the Senate, a move which cost him his senority, but put him in line for National office.

He had been Tennesse's "favorite son" in the 1928 Al Smith convention and he could have been her "favorite son" again in 1932, if he had not previously picked Franklin D. Roosevelt as the party's strongest condidate. He was one of that triumvirate of wise old men—Louis Howe, Col. Edward M. House and Hull—whom Roosevelt consulted every few days in the preconvention campaign. No one knows whether Hull was as tremendously wise as Howe thought he was. An incorruptible dry, he was convinced that full-blooded repeal would wreck the party and he fought a hopeless battle at Chicago for the Al Smith variety of diluted repeal with a dry enforcement chaser, but Roosevelt swung over to unblended repeal and was wise to do so, for Hull was 100 per cent wrong on this issue, as he has been on almost every other phase of the New Deal.

Despite this or—perhaps—because of this, Hull was one of the "wise men" whom Roosevelt wanted in his Cabinet, being the reserve candidate for Secretary of State or Secretary of the Treasury from the beginning. If he hadn't been needed for one of these posts there was always the Department of Commerce. He was high-minded and sufficiently loyal to the Democratic party to do anything that the party leader asked him to do, and he felt no reluctance at leaving the Senate, where he would have had to wait too long to reach important committee positions.

Nevertheless, his appointment to the State Department was distinctly a pis aller, a step not in the dark but the painfully familiar light. Hull believed that international laissez-faire capitalism could and must be revived and that Republican protectionism had ruined the country and the planet and probably the solar system to boot. Probably there is no Morgan partner who believes this fairy tale more sincerely than does the old man from Tennessee. Hull happens to know a lot about the tariff, world trade and the history of the great commercial nations and he piously maintains that the United States lost a God-given opportunity to become great like England by not reducing the tariff after the World War. He claims that instead of exporting so much capital we should have exported goods and taken others in return.

Hull Idealistic Minded As Woodrow Wilson.

Hull has reconstructed the orthodox economic theories of Adam Smith and his vision of America on the belief that international trade is a mutually profitable exchange of surpluses and services. His knowledge of commerce and of the complex world tariff system impressed both Howe and Roosevelt. If Hull had not considered the doctrines of Carl Marx to be as damnable as his State considered those of Charles Darwin, he might have been a great leader, but his self-education was such that he could only imagine one kind of surplus and of only one way of getting rid of it, by shipping it abroad.

He could not see a surplus unless there was an international boundary across which to push it. He never dreamed that the textile workers of the South and the shoe workers of New England can buy each other's surpluses, if the purchasing power is placed in their hands, and he also failed to realize that nations can not swap goods unless there is purchasing power inside each nation to absorb the other's surplus.

A man with a mind as idealistic, stubborn and dogmatic as Woodrow Wilson, Hull believed that the portfolio of the State Department presented a magnificent opportunity for what is termed "constructive idealism." He knew that the way would be hard, but he suffered from a chronic case of that American belief which held that the great idealistic leadership of the United States could lead the nations of the world away from the follies of protection and back to the idyllic virtues of primitive industrial capitalism via free trade.

He had called the Payne-Aldrich tariff of 1910 "a miserable travesty, an ill-designed patchwork, a piece of brazen legislative jobbery," and he had announced that the Hawley-Smoot act of 1930 was "utterly disastrous to our trade," adding that "the practice of the half-insane policy of economic isolation during the past ten years is the largest single underlying cause of the present world panic * * * Economic disarmament and military disarmament are patently the most vital and outstanding factors in business recovery."

Hull is a courteous, gentle and almost shy gentleman, whom no one can accuse of personal ambition. At the Chicago convention he willingly stepped aside and let the chairmanship of the resolutions committee go to another because his dryness was a danger to the Roosevelt cause, and after Chicago he dropped out of the campaign. While others swarmed around Roosevelt, bickering and jostling in their rush to give the candidate the value of their advice, Hull waited to be sent for, and he waited a long time. Then he was invited to National headquarters and, when he found little for him to do there, returned to Tennessee.

Delighted at Draft Of Tariff Speech.

A preliminary draft of Roosevelt's tariff speech was sent to him and delighted his heart with its proposal of a 10 per cent cut all around in international tariff rates, but the speech which Roosevelt delivered at Sioux City was quite different and contained the proposal for reciprocal trade agreements. Still later, Roosevelt assured both farmers and workers that the tariff would be kept high enough to protect their interest, while the speech which Hull had approved appeared only in meaningless fragments.

Moreover, Hull had political fish to fry in Tennessee, where there was a factional fight in which Hull wanted Roosevelt's indorsement for his friends. He wired Roosevelt and received no answer, as the telegram got lost in the confusion at National headquarters. When Roosevelt started on his Southern tour he wired Hull asking him to join the party. This telegram also was lost, and without an invitation the Tennessee mountaineer would not visit the Roosevelt party, so the candidate traversed Tennessee without getting a glimpse of his old friend and preconvention supporter. And when Roosevelt was contacted by Senator McKellar and gave the indorsement at Knoxville that Hull had requested, Hull failed to see the newspaper reports and didn't know that Roosevelt had helped him until after the election.

This characteristic comedy of errors was prophetic of that diplomatic roller-coaster known as the London Conference of 1933.

Between election and inauguration, Roosevelt frequently consulted Hull and turned to him for Secretary of State when the Western Democrats and Progressives had made it clear Owen D. Young was just so much spinach as far as the plain people were concerned. Probably no man suffered greater mental anguish than did Cordell Hull as the heresies of the New Deal were unfolded before him. He consoled himself with the thought that it was all temporary, that it would never work in the long run, and that eventually the great evangelical mission of saving the world would be preached according to the economic gospel of Hull, in which he was convinced that Roosevelt also believed.

Economic Nationalism And Roosevelt Views.

At first, President Roosevelt himself didn't recognize any basic conflict between Secretary Hull and the New Deal and he still plays with the low tariff idea, but he was enough of a realist to recognize the fact that economic nationalism had the world in its grip and that every nation was moving farther toward self-sufficiency. At the London Conference, the economic nationalism of the New Deal torpedoed the Hull thesis, almost without Roosevelt's will or knowledge, when it came to the issue of submitting even so small a sector of economic life as international finance to international agreement.

Throughout the spring of 1933, Secretary Hull complained to his friends that President Roosevelt never consulted him, while Ray Moley—nominally Hull's subordinate—was constantly popping in and out of the White House like the bird in a cuckoo clock. If President Roosevelt had taken time to sit down and give Hull a few elementary lessons in what he was trying to do, Hull would have made a more useful Secretary of State instead of getting his wires crossed, but Roosevelt preferred to let Hull make his own blunders.

At London, Hull began to see daylight, as he learned things about the foreigner he had never suspected. He also began to reconcile himself to the New Deal, because he saw that it was working and was thereby giving him a little more time in which to convict the world of economic sin.

His final moral victory at London, his success in giving Moley political knockout drops, and the general backscratching he got from President Roosevelt on his return to America, left him feeling his oats and he began to prepare for the Pan-American Conference at Montevideo as though it were a wedding. It was a sad blow when Mr. Roosevelt told him to rule out economic subjects and confine himself to "good will" and the construction of a north-south highway joining the two Americas. When Secretary Hull balked at this, the President suggested a quiet investigation of South American finances with special reference to the defaulted debts. The main idea probably was to get Hull out of America before Maxim Litvinov arrived, but as a special dispensation he was allowed to stay long enough to meet the Soviet negotiator, though he was ignored in the negotiations and left before they were completed.

South Americans Won By Conference Views.

In South America, Hull fairly oozed good will and made a hit by his convincing assurances that the United States was determined to avoid invading the sovereign rights of its southern neighbors. Moreover, he favored abolishing the Platt amendment and doing everything else high minded and generous to our Latin brethren and customers and producers of exchangeable surpluses.

While Roosevelt is his own Secretary of State, Hull is our gray-haired Prince of Wales, traveling the earth as a human advertisement of American idealism and good will. This is not bad diplomacy, for Hull is surprisingly astute in negotiation. He has a way of gradually closing in on his opponent by continual redefinition of his objective and he left the British with great admiration for his skill. Almost everybody is fond of Hull, whose upright character embellishes American public life.

Hull is not the Hamlet of the New Deal, he is its Banquo whose ghost reminds the New Dealers of the murdered economic principles of traditional Democracy.

Tobaccos— like Wines have "Vintage" years

Only Grade A "Vintage" Tobaccos used in the filler of White Owl Cigars

EACH of the great vineyard regions has "Vintage" years . . . years when its wine is richer, mellower . . . years when nature particularly favored its crops.

Unknown to most smokers—tobaccos, too, have "Vintage" years . . . years when the leaf is voluptuous, milder. Naturally, such tobaccos make better cigars.

The filler tobaccos used in White Owl Cigars come only from "Vintage" crops. The General Cigar Company, through a vast crop control system, keeps a record of districts growing filler tobacco in Pennsylvania and Ohio . . . the two states which grow practically all of the United States cigar filler tobacco. They know of every "Vintage" crop in these states . . . and buy only the Grade A tobaccos from such crops.

Look for the Grade A "Vintage" band

Every White Owl Cigar in Washington now carries a Grade A "Vintage" band. It is your guarantee of good tobaccos . . . of a milder, more fragrant smoke. Now, for the first time, you can know what you're getting in a five-cent cigar.

HOW WHITE OWL SMOKERS ARE PROTECTED

THE General Cigar Co., through a 10-year-old Crop Control System, knows the condition of tobacco-growing districts in Pennsylvania and Ohio—the two states which produce nearly all United States cigar filler tobaccos. The amount of rainfall . . . of sunshine . . . the condition of the soil—are all recorded. From these records, it is possible to forecast every "Vintage" crop . . . and only tobaccos from such crops are purchased for White Owls.

But "Vintage" crops alone are not enough. Under the control system—all filler tobaccos are classified into seven grades. Only the top three grades pass White Owl's strict requirements. That's why we can truthfully say—White Owls are made only from Grade A "Vintage" filler tobaccos.

At the present moment, there is enough Grade A "Vintage" filler tobacco aging in our warehouses to make over 1 billion White Owls—more than a three-year supply. That is why White Owl never has to use non-vintage filler tobaccos.

Grade A "Vintage" filler tobacco is aged from 2 to 4 years—an average of 3 years.

Today we are using in the filler of White Owls two famous "Vintage" crops . . . the 1931 Pennsylvania and the 1930 Ohio. Look for the Grade A "Vintage" Band.

Farley Urges 11 Million Cut

House Is Asked to Reduce Salaries of Rural Mail Carriers.

Slashes in the salaries of rural mail carriers, which he estimated would save more than $11,000,000 a year, were recommended to the House Postoffice Committee yesterday by Postmaster General Farley, the Associated Press reports.

Pointing out reduced appropriations compelled savings, such as the day-a-month furlough recently ordered for all employes, Farley asked permission to pare down the pay of the approximately 38,000 rural carriers in preference to pressing the program of consolidating routes and thereby having to drop some 9,000 carriers.

The Postmaster General said the salaries of rural carriers were excessive compared with other postal employes.

The bill by Representative Dockweiler (Democrat), California, which the committee is studying, would cut the basic pay of rural carriers from $1,800 for 24-mile routes, and $30 a mile over that, to $1,800 for 30-mile routes covered six days a week and $20 a mile above that.

Lewis Assails Development Of Waterpower

Mine Union Head Says TVA, Loop River Are Unsound Projects.

Striking at the Tennessee Valley Authority and other Government projects to develop hydro-electric power, John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, yesterday declared this "unsound, uneconomic policy" is threatening the whole coal mining industry.

He asserted that the TVA, Boulder Dam, Loop River and other power developments were not authorized upon a basis of cost, adding that power can be generated more cheaply by coal than by the construction of hydro-electric plants.

The inevitable result of such a policy, he told a conference of mine operators and union officials, "can mean only destruction of the coal mining industry and vast increases in unemployment among the miners."

In particular, he charged that the Loop River project is being "promoted by a group of about 150 individuals out in Nebraska who have hired a man to represent them in getting the Government money to finance the project, and from all reports he is to get either 10 or 5 per cent of the gross amount that the Government allots * * *

"A very simple proposition and, by the way, the Loop River project was surveyed repeatedly by private power enterprise and rejected as being an inefficient site for the development of elctric power on the basis of cost of other propects and with coal."

He also criticized the creation of a Missouri Valley Authority, the bill for which he said proposes that the Government "write a blank check" to finance hydro-electric developments.

"Certainly," he added, "it is not a sound policy from our viewpoint to destroy permanent jobs in America and substitute for them only an equal number of temporary jobs, and that is about what the hydro-electric power propositions amount to in their final analysis."

Fire Fighters Celebrate 50th Anniversary

100 Members and Guests Attend Annapolis Banquet.

Annapolis, Md., March 6 (Spl.).—Memories of the early days of volunteer fire fighting in Annapolis, when bucket brigades and hand-drawn hose reels were the only means of combating flames, were recalled when the Independent Fire Co. celebrated its fiftieth anniversary with a banquet. One hundred members and guests attended.

George F. Quaid, city treasurer, was toastmaster. Among the guests were Judge Nicholas H. Green, former Judge Robert Moss, Frank A. Munroe, charter member; State Senator Ridgely P. Melvin, J. C. Rainey and George Lindsay, president and secretary, respectively, of the Maryland State Firemen's Association, and State's Attorney A. Theodore Brady, of Anne Arundel County.

Organized March 6, 1884, in the office of the late George W. Brock, one of the company's first experiences came when fire destroyed the Chase home, one of the city's landmarks. Miss Hariett Chase died in the fire.

The company's first steamer engine was drawn by hand. Then came the horse-drawn apparatus. Meanwhile, the Walter Witch Hook and Ladder Company and the Rescue Hose Company had been organized. In 1911, the first gasoline driven truck was purchased by the independents. Later, new trucks were acquired from time to time with funds raised through entertainments.

The local department of three companies is considered among the best-equipped in the State, but is still on the volunteer basis. The only officials paid by the municipality are the drivers.

Preacher Raps Mannish Girls

Now Failing as Inspirers of Men, Evangelist Declares.

Charles Town, W. V., March 6 (Spl.).—Decrying repeal of the eighteenth amendment, legalization of gambling, and increasing laxity of divorce laws, the Rev. John R. Williams, of Atlanta, in a Presbyterian revival meeting last night told an audience of 800 that today's "exalted youth" must stem the wave of liberalism in the United States within two years or suffer the dissolution of American civilization.

The speaker blamed an "existing moral and political retrogression" on the failure of postwar women to maintain their status as inspirers of men, and to their tendency to lower moral standards by mimicking members of the male sex.

"No nation," he declared, "has ever slapped God in the face and gotten away with it. There must be a revival of Christian ideals in government and morals within 30 months, or we will be one with Nineveh and Tyre."

Worship of revenue is responsible for much of the "failure to retain legislation against liquor, gambling, and other vicious practices," the evangelist declared. He said prohibition would never have been repealed, except for governmental revenue to be derived from taxing liquor.

S. T. Fisher, 85, War Veteran, Is Buried

Junior, W. Va., March 6 (Spl.). Funeral services were held today for S. T. Fisher, 85, who enlisted in the Union Army when he was 15 and saw service of four years, which included participation in the Bull Run and Gettysburg battles.

He was employed by the late United States Senator Stephen B. Elkins as a surveyor. He aided in the construction of "Halliehurst," the Elkins home, and helped to build the Coal & Iron Railroad from Elkins to Durbin.

Surprise!

Man Walks Through Glass Door—Almost.

Waynesboro, Pa., March 6 (Spl.). C. M. Leiter seemingly had something to think about when he stepped out of the safety deposit vault of the Citizens' National Bank & Trust Co. here.

He tried to walk through a plate glass door in the bank, but escaped uninjured except for a cut on the forehead. The glass was shattered.

Maryland Penal Farm Inmates Fed for Only 23 Cents Daily

Hagerstown, Md., March 6 (Spl.). It cost the State only 23 cents daily to feed each inmate at the Maryland Penal Farm near here, Superintendent Hal T. Kearns has reported to Harold E. Donnell, superintendent of prisons in Maryland.

The net maintenance cost per prisoner was 72 cents and would have been much lower but for the inclement weather which held up construction work being done entirely by the inmates.

All of the farming is done by inmates. The report shows the following production: Potatoes, 7,500 bushels; barley, 2,100 bushels; pork, 27,000 pounds; eggs, 2,875 dozen; milk, 179,660 pounds; cabbage, 40 tons; beets, 250 bushels; parsnips, 250 bushels; sweet potatoes, 50 bushels; wheat, 1,250 bushels; field corn, 2,500 barrels; string beans, 3,500 bushels; hay, 200 tons; poultry, 2,225 pounds; butter, 2,326 pounds; onions, 400 bushels; turnips, 600 bushels; carrots, 200 bushels; onion sets, 40 bushels.

In his report, Superintendent Kearns said:

"Every effort is being made to make the institution primarily educational in character and purpose; teaching the inmates habits of industry, self-respect, self-control and right habits of thought and conduct in the hope that, after release, they will be law-abiding members of society."

Date of St. Marys City Fete Moved So Roosevelt Can Come

Celebration Set June 16; Cross Ceremonies to Be March 23.

Baltimore, March 6 (Spl.).—The executive committee of the Maryland Tercentenary Commission at a special meeting here yesterday changed the date of the official celebration of the tercentenary at St. Marys City from June 20 to June 16 in order that President Roosevelt can be present.

The President, who will review the fleet off New England shores June 19, would be unable to attend the Maryland festival on the original date.

R. Bennett Darnall, chairman of the executive committeee of the commission, has announced that the following prominent Maryland citizens will take part in ceremonies set for March 23, dedicating a stone cross on St. Clement's Island, first landing place of Leonard Calvert's settlers: The Right Rev. Edward Phillips, provincial of the Jesuit Order of the United States, who will give the invocation; State Senator J. Allan Coad, of St. Marys County, address of welcome; R. Bennett Darnall, who will present the cross to the State; Gov. Ritchie, who will accept it on behalf of the State, and the Right Rev. Edward T. Helfenstein, Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Maryland, who will pronounce the benediction.

The public and parochial school children of St. Clement's Manor will sing the State song, "Maryland, My Maryland."

Staples School Bill Reported

Senate Committee Fails to Indorse Measure; Fight Forecast.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, March 6 (Spl.).—The Senate finance committee voted today, 9 to 7, to report without recommendation the Staples bill, designed to carry out recommendations of Gov. Peery for about $700,000 in additional taxes for schools. A similar measure has been passed by the House.

Earlier, Senator A. P. Staples, of Roanoke, sought to have the Senate discharge the committee from further consideration of his proposal. He charged the committee's delay amounted to "deliberate discourtesy to the Governor."

Senator Henry T. Wickham, of Ashland, declared an extra legislative session would be necessary unless the bill passes.

Failure of the committee to indorse passage of the measure was interpreted as a forerunner of bitter opposition on the floor.

Joint House and Senate committees probably will meet with the Governor tomorrow to consider an ultimatum from Federal Emergency Relief Administration officials that they will withdraw National funds from Virginia unless the State appropriates $2,000,000 for relief work to replace revenue lost through reduction of automobile license fees.

Ancient Races By Warrenton Hunt Arranged

19th Century Events Will Be Revived March 24; Cup Run May 5.

Warrenton, Va., March 6 (Spl.).—The Warrenton Hunt will revive the old-time point-to-point races, so popular with the nineteenth century sportsmen, at a race meeting here March 24.

Two races have been arranged by a committee composed of Amory S. Carhart, M. F. H; Capt. R. J. Kirkpatrick, honorary secretary, and W. Henry Poole.

The first is for individual riders over a 6-mile course; the second for teams of two, lady and gentleman, over a 7-mile course. Races are open to members of the Warrenton Hunt, landowners and their guests, and to hunters that have regularly hunted with the Warrenton or adjacent hunts.

Trophies are being presented by Frederick H. Prince, jr.—a challenge cup to be won twice by the same rider for the first race, together with a silver trophy to the winner, and two pieces of plate to the winners in the team race. The proceeds will go to the Fauquier County Hospital.

On May 5, the thirteenth annual running of the Virginia Gold Cup race also is scheduled to be held here on the estate of Baldwin D. Spilman.

Regarded as one of the racing classics of the East, this steeplechase is a 4-mile gallop over timber, with 22 hard fences, and is open only to amateurs or Army or Navy officers.

This year's Gold Cup, valued at $1,000, is the third to be competed for since 1922. It must be won three times for permanent possession. Mrs. Katherine Hitt, of Middleburg, captured the first cup in 1925, with her famous leaper, John Bunny. Last year, the Flying Horse Farm claimed the cup, winning with the stable horses Soissons, in 1930; Melita II in 1932, and Prophet in 1933.

Two other races will be run at the meet, a feature being the Farmers' Race for a cup donated by local merchants, with an additional $150 subscription by the Gold Cup Racing Association, of which Chaffraix LeLong is secretary-treasurer, with offices in Warrenton.

The meeting was called by C. C. Tabb, commander of Jackson-Perks Post, 71, American Legion, and D. Shirley Nichols, post adjutant. An open forum on veterans' problems will be held.

Fall Injury Fatal To Mrs. Price, 84

Month-Old Mishap Factor in Berkeley Death.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 6 (Spl).—Rites were conducted in Berkeley County today for Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Price, 84, widow of Samuel Price, who died yesterday at the home of a daughter in the county.

Infirmities of age, combined with an injury received in a fall four weeks ago, caused her death. She had been bedfast for three weeks.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Blanche Cook, of this county, and Mrs. C. E. Lewis, Gerrardstown, at whose home she expired; two brothers, James Hustler, Martinsburg, and Joseph Hustler, Glengary.

Too Short

Feet Freeze as Blankets Fail to Reach.

Hagerstown, Md., March 6 (Spl.). What this country needs is longer blankets, says George Herbert Sharpsburg, who nearly lost both feet because his bed clothing was short.

Herbert woke up one cold morning last week and found both feet frozen. He said his blankets were not long enough.

A physician sent him to the hospital here, where he is still confined. Surgeons at first feared they would have to amputate both feet, but now believe they can be saved.

Committee Favors Sanatorium Plan

DeJarnette's Operation Is Center of Fight.

Richmond, March 6 (AP).—By a vote of 7 to 5, the House Committee on Prisons and Asylums this afternoon approved the Cather-East measure, which would assure continuation of the DeJarnette Sanatorium at Staunton.

The vote followed a hearing featured by verbal clashes, which revealed a split in the ranks of the General Hospital Board. One faction, aligned with the Medical Society of Virginia, sought to end the system under which Dr. Joseph Spencer DeJarnette has been operating the $100,000 adjunct to Western State Hospital.

Charges that the DeJarnette Sanatorium, where prices of from $21 to $35 per week are asked, was "undemocratic," and that it resulted in penalizing insane patients at Western State Hospital, were made by Dave E. Satterfield, former Commonwealth's attorney of Richmond. He appeared before the committee as special counsel for the Medical Society of Virginia.

Singer Paintings Are Exhibited In Washington County Museum

Hagerstown, Md., March 6 (Spl.). Thirteen paintings done in Norway by William H. Singer, jr., recently knighted by the late Albert, King of the Belgians, are being exhibited here at the Washington County Museum of Fine Arts, which Mr. Singer and his wife, the former Anne Brugh, of Hagerstown, presented.

"The special appeal of the Norwegian landscapes which William H. Singer is showing lies in his interpretation of still solitudes. He gets what one feels to be the very spirit of those deep valleys beneath the mountains, and he gets it through a process which impresses by virtue of its simplicity. * * * His best work is done in his snow scenes, the atmospheric quality of which is particularly to be commended."

The local museum has several of Mr. Singer's paintings in its permanent collection. He is represented in permanent collections of 18 American and European museums.

Also on exhibition is a collection of modern Dutch paintings, including works by Bauer, Jongkind, Neuhuys, Vander Waay and Dooyeweard.

The third annual exhibition of amateur photographs, all by Washington County photographers, also has opened.

Restaurant Code Probe Is Due at Parkersburg

Charleston, W. Va., March 6, (Spl.).—Complainants who alleged violation of the restaurant code in Parkersburg today were advised by F. Witcher McCullough, State N. E. C. director, to resort to the State NRA enforcement act recently enacted.

The Parkersburg Restaurant Association was informed that it was at liberty to consult the prosecuting attorney of Wood County for action and McCullough suggested that charges of violations be changed to a formal complaint for "investigation and formal action."

National Guard Has Inspection

Frederick, Md., March 6 (Spl.).—The annual Federal and State inspection of the First Maryland Regiment, Maryland National Guard, comprising 66 officers and 1,118 men in about 18 towns, began last night at the State Armory here with Company A and will continue until the middle of April.

The inspection covers automatic riflemen, first-aid, rifle marksmanship, extended orders, musketry problems, display of equipment, training, interior guard duty, bayonet training, scouting and patrolling, platoon drill and combat principles. Col. D. John Markey, this city, is regiment commander.

The band and headquarters, Second Battalion, commanded by Maj. Elmer F. Munshower, were inspected tonight. The inspection of regimental headquarters and regimental headquarters company will take place Thursday night.

The remainder of the inspection schedule is Company B, Hagerstown, March 12; Company G, Cumberland, March 14; Headquarters Company, First Battalion, Laurel, March 19; Company F, Hyattsville, March 20; Howitzer Company, Kensington, March 22; Company H, Westminster, March 26; Headquarters, First Battalion and Company D, Belair, March 27; Company M, Annapolis, March 28; Service Company, Silver Spring, March 29.

The Eastern Shore inspection dates are: Company E, Elkton, April 2; Company K, Centerville, April 3; Company C, Cambridge, April 4; Medical Detachment, Chestertown, April 5; Headquarters Third Battalion, and Company L, Crisfield, April 9; Headquarters Company, Third Battalion, Pocomoke City, April 10; Company I, Salisbury, April 11; Headquarters Company, First Battalion, Easton, April 12.

Tercentenary Fete Will Be Discussed

School Heads to Consider Taking Part.

Hagerstown, Md., March 6 (Spl.). Principals of Washington County schools will meet here Thursday with Superintendent of Education Byron J. Grimes to discuss the question of having local schools join the Maryland tercentenary celebration.

Superintendent Grimes has been informed that the Tercentenary Commission of St. Marys County, in conjunction with the State Tercentenary Commission, will assign parts to each county.

It is planned to stage a pageant here and then take it to St. Marys City for the production in June.

One Swallow

Doesn't Make a Spring, Nor Does Robin.

Clarksburg, W. Va., March 6 (Spl.).—So far as West Virginia is concerned, robins are not true harbingers of spring, according to Dr. Frank S. Gilbert, of the biology department of Marshall College, nor does the food set out by generous bird lovers give birds a hundredth part of their sustenance.

The latter fact should not deter persons from putting out bread, suet and other delicacies for the birds in bad weather, Dr. Gilbert says, even if the number of birds thus benefited are comparatively small.

In dispelling the popular belief that the first robins are sure signs of the approach of spring, Dr. Gilbert says the robins are here all winter long.

Plant Workers Form Aid Body

Sylvania Employes to Bar Company Executives at Fredericksburg.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 6 (Spl.).—More than 500 workmen of the Sylvania Industrial Corporation have joined the Sylvania Employes' Mutual Aid Association.

Officers just elected include J. A. Gourley, chairman; H. W. Dudley, W. C. Shepherd and J. T. Sexton, vice chairmen; Mrs. A. R. Schooler, secretary; Ralph Covey, treasurer; J. B. Bolling, publicity chairman. Directors include the officers and T. Y. Holladay, O. R. Nunnally, J. S. Westerfield, J. B. Bowen and Clarence Atkins.

The double purpose of the organization is to provide sick benefits to members and to provide opportunity for workmen to discuss with Sylvania officials any subject of interest to the employes.

Shore Will Plant More Potatoes

Virginia Counties Expect 20 Per Cent Gain.

Cape Charles, Va., March 6 (AP).—Eastern Shore potato growers will plant 20 per cent more acreage this year than last, agricultural leaders said today.

Planting was delayed by bad weather, but seed and fertilizer have been on hand for some time.

Basing their prediction on the arrivals of Northern-grown seed, agriculturists said the Northampton-Accomac potato crop will equal the bumper 1931 crop, when 55,000 acres were grown in the two counties. The 1933 crop was 45,000 acres. This year's increase, they said, is due largely to Government financial aid to farmers and crop lien contracts between the seed potato and fertilizer brokers and the growers. The contracts were said to be the largest in the country's history.

Tobacco Taxing Plan Protested In W. Virginia

Leaf Interests Fight Bill Passed by House as Too Stringent.

Charleston, W. Va., March 6 (Spl.). Vigorous objections before its finance committee by tobacco interests against luxury tax provisions of Gov. Kump's emergency revenue bill to raise $10,000,000, marked the opening of the Senate battle over the measure, passed yesterday by the House. Protestants declared the tax imposed an unnecessarily large burden upon producers already heavily taxed.

The committee had before it the Kump measure and one drafted by a sub-committee. The former calls for a 2 per cent consumers' sales tax, a 20 per cent tax on so-called luxuries, including tobacco, candy, bottled drinks and amusement tickets, and a 60 per cent increase on corporation tax rates. The sub-committee bill calls for a 3 per cent consumers' sales tax and a 20 per cent increase in corporation rates.

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill providing for an annual motor driving license of 50 cents replacing the present perpetual $1 fee. The proceeds would enlarge the State police force.

Another effort failed in the House to obtain some expense money for delegates. A resolution offered by Delegate Milton J. Ferguson (Democrat), Wayne, requesting the Governor to pay each member $150 from his emergency fund was referred to the finance committee with pigeon-holing instructions. The State auditor has refused to honor warrants ordered by the House for like sums as "expense money" of an investigating committee comprising the entire membership.

The Senate approved a House bill extending the discount period for tax payments until April 15 with authority to the State tax commissioner to make further extension to May 1, but it was returned to the House for action on an amendment providing for an extension of 45 days in cases where a levy is contested.

James S. Larkin Dies Victim of Pneumonia

Charleston, W. Va., March 6 (Spl.). Pneumonia, with which he was stricken a week ago, caused the death today in a hospital of James S. Larkin, 70, member of the State Board of Control for more than 20 years, and for years its director.

As president of the board Larkin shouldered responsibility of managing and improving the State penal, charitable and correctional institutions. He was active in Republican politics and member of the party's State committee. For years he operated mercantile and lumber concerns in Preston County. The widow and three children survive.

$13,250 Fire Razes School At Earlysville

Blaze Is Believed to Have Been Set and Probe Is Started.

Charlottesville, Va., March 6 (Spl.).—The Earlysville School was destroyed by fire, believed to be of incendiary origin, last night. The blaze attracted a large crowd. Loss was estimated at $13,250, covered by insurance.

The school, with an enrollment of 275, was a large frame structure.

The school board will meet tomorrow to make plans for the continuation of classes.

Wanted: Bride

Postoffice Finds Ring in Unaddressed Letter.

Fairmont, W. Va., March 6 (Spl.). Clerks in the local postoffice are searching for a bride.

This results from the receipt of a white envelope, which the sender neglected to address, bearing a platinum wedding ring. Inside the band was engraved, "O. L. to M. D 2-9-34." The ring was set with three diamonds.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAY COX

Blackie Bear Sends for the Doctor

When Sallie Cat jumped off of Blackie's nose, Blackie didn't stop running. He kept right on running and woofing till he got home, and he made so much noise that his friend, Jay Bird, heard him and flew over to see what was the matter.

"Looks like a briar has been tickling your nose, Blackie," said Jay Bird.

"No, it wasn't any briar," said Blackie; "it was a wildcat. But no matter what it was that scratched it, it hurts, and I want a doctor. Is there one on the creek?"

"There certainly is one, and he is a mighty good doctor, too. His name is Doctor Coon," said Jay Bird.

"Well, fly for him, and fly fast. Tell him to hurry, and to bring all the medicine he has. Tell him a wildcat has scratched me nearly to death. Now fly, fly!"

Doctor Coon didn't live very far from Blackie's house, but he was asleep in his bed away up in the top of the highest tree there was on Bear Creek, and Jay Bird had to peck on his door several times before he could wake him. Then it took the doctor some time to wake up good and get his medicine chest packed and get down to Blackie's house. But when Jay Bird told him that Blackie was a new neighbor and a mighty good fellow, Doctor Coon was anxious to see him, and so he hurried along as fast as he could.

Jay Bird introduced the doctor to Blackie and told him that Doctor Coon could cure anybody from a toad frog to a moo cow. Then he went into Blackie's kitchen and got some hot water for Doctor Coon to wash the blood off of Blackie's nose with. Blackie was mighty glad to see Doctor Coon, and he told him that it really wasn't a wildcat that had scratched him up so, but was a house cat over by Aunt Lindy's house. It seemed so funny for a bit of a cat about the size of Blackie's paw to whip a big bear that Doctor Coon just had to have a good laugh over it before he got through fixing up Blackie's nose. This made Blackie awfully mad, but he didn't dare do anything but "woof" once or twice at Doctor Coon, for fear he would go off and leave him before his nose was fixed.

When Doctor Coon got through washing the blood off of Blackie's nose, he went down to the creek and got some alder leaves and mashed them all up and made a plaster that he spread on some bear grass and tied on Blackie's nose. This made Blackie feel so much better that he walked with Doctor Coon a long way down the creek toward his house, and Doctor Coon told him a lot of things about the other Creek folks. Coons go about at night to get their food, and they sleep in the daytime, so Doctor Coon told Blackie good-by, and went back up the tree to his house and went back to bed. But before he left, he told Blackie that he had better stay away from the kitties.

"You bet I will," said Blackie. "I never expect to get near enough to another kitten to tell the color of her eyes."

Flier, Long Snowbound, Finally Leaves Ground

Clifton Forge, Va., March 6 (Spl.). After several vain attempts to get his plane into the air last week, Kenneth Tibbets, the Bradford, Pa., aviator snowbound at the country club, near here, since February 25, finally succeeded in taking off from the ice-covered golf course.

The youth was forced to land here after he lost his bearings while en route from Bradford to Winston-Salem, N. C.

Maryland Jury Convicts Killer, Urges Mercy

Anne Arundel Trial Ends With Second Degree Verdict on Stevens.

Annapolis, Md., March 6 (Spl.).—A jury in Anne Arundel County Circuit Court today returned a verdict of second-degree murder, with a recommendation for mercy, in the case of Jerome Stevens, 52, Millersville farmer, tried for the killing of Ernest Davis, 35, farm hand, also of Millersville.

Judge Nicholas H. Green, who presided, has not passed sentence.

State's Attorney A. Theodore Brady asked for a first-degree verdict without capital punishment. Stevens' wife, who sat near him during the trial, collapsed in a corridor when informed of the verdict. She was taken to the sheriff's office nearby and revived.

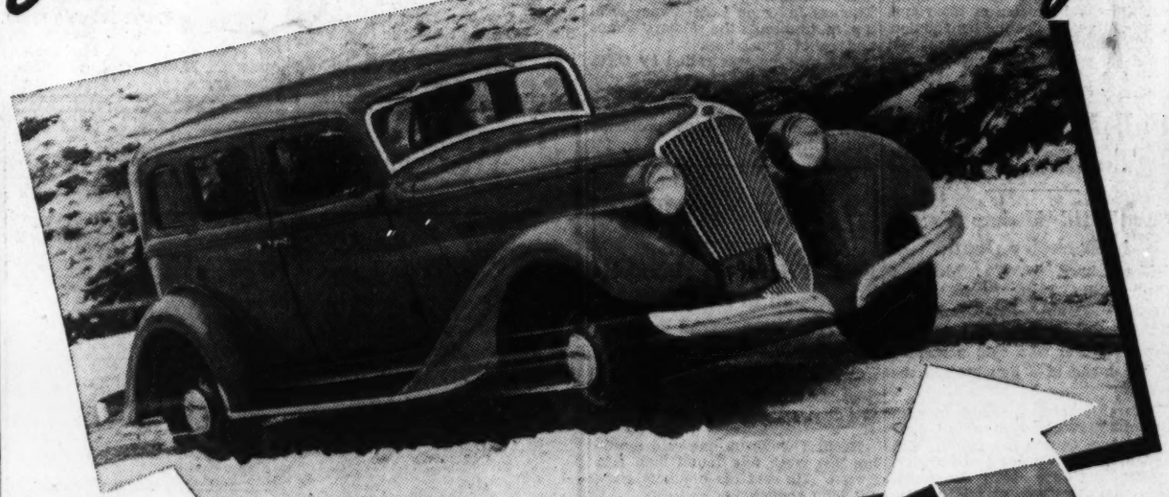
The killing of Davis occurred last December 3 on the Crain highway near Andersons Corner in a quarrel between him and Stevens. He was shot in the abdomen with a shotgun. Stevens claimed self-defense, asserting Davis had threatened to "get him."

Hagerstown Kiwanis Raps CWA Reduction

Hagerstown, Md., March 6 (Spl.). The Hagerstown Kiwanis Club has added its protest to that of the Chamber of Commerce against rapid reduction in the CWA force in Washington County, in a telegram to Harry L. Hopkins, Federal CWA administrator, urging a reasonable extension of the program.

Edgar C. Jones, president of the Kiwanis Club, pointed out the deplorable conditions which would follow any change in CWA plans at this time. He cited a number of projects which would be left unfinished.

Your dollar hits a new High



. . . in a GRAHAM

Unique Banjo Frame for greater roadability

In the Graham, the rear axle passes through the frame. The combined weight of axle and rear wheels helps to anchor the car to the road, especially over bumps and around sharp turns. The Banjo Frame works in harmony with the Outboard Springs, wide 61-inch tread, and the Geometric Steering Mechanism to give Graham unusual roadability and safety.

Ever have an "Outboard Spring ride"?

The Graham is the only car with Outboard Springs, placed outside the frame, both front and rear. This greater distance between springs means less tilting and sidesway. And the springs are long and flexible for smooth, level riding. The Graham does not "lunge," or nose down in front, when you're driving at high speed over choppy surfaces.

YOU'LL forget about a *de*valued dollar when you see and drive the new 1934 Graham. With new lower prices, starting at $695, your dollar hits a new high in purchasing power—buys far greater value than it bought last year.

The lower price speaks for itself. And the new Graham speaks for itself. A bigger, roomier car—116-inch wheelbase for the Six—123-inch wheelbase for the Eights. Clear-vision ventilation. High-styled interiors. Three-passenger comfort in both front and rear seats. More power and pick-up in the Six and Standard Eight . . . and a Supercharger in the Custom Eight, increasing power 42% without affecting economy. Take the wheel and see for yourself that the new Graham is a better car at a lower price.

Payless Postal Furlough Hit By Senators

Pay Cuts Also Scored as Not in Line With Recovery Aim.

Protest against the recent four days payless furlough order of the Postoffice Department and against Administration opposition to full restoration of Government salaries was voiced on and off the Senate floor yesterday.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, said the Postoffice Department furlough order would mean a reduction of 27 per cent in the salaries of workers in the department.

The call by President Roosevelt and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, for shorter work hours and higher wages for industry, Senator McCarran said, was proof of the justice of the fight for full restoration of Government salaries.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, presented to the Senate pleas from postoffice clerks in Massachusetts against the furlough order. One telgram to the Senator was sent by Emmet J. Whelan, president of Boston Postoffice Clerks Union.

Families of 1,600 clerks in Boston, Whelan said, urged a vigorous protest against the furlough order of Postmaster General Farley. The furlough is "unwarranted and inconsistent with the President's appeal for higher wages and greater consideration for those receiving $2,000 a year or less," he added.

Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, protested against the Administration opposition to restoration of Government salaries and veterans' benefits at the same time it was sponsoring such enormous expenditures as would be required by the Navy building program.

State Checks Forged, Former Banker Held

Raleigh, N. C., March 6 (AP).—While a one-armed former bank employe, who served one sentence for forgery, was being blamed by officers with circulating hundreds of dollars worth of forged vouchers on the State treasury, four new spurious checks, which were cashed here Saturday by two women, reached the State treasurer's office today.

Claud Horne, 30, was being held in the county jail at Lillington in $5,000 bond and officers were seeking evidence to support their allegation that he was the leader of a gang responsible for passing bogus State checks in the two Carolinas and Virginia.

Town Buys Power, Needs Wire System

Florence, Ala., March 6 (AP).—Florence today lacked only a distribution system in being ready to serve its citizens' homes, business and industry with the electric power from Wilson Dam for which it has battled 12 years.

A contract with the Tennessee Valley Authority for power was signed last night and as soon as negotiations for the purchase of the Alabama Power Co. facilities here, or for funds to construct a new system, can be completed the city will begin operating a municipal power system.

Mrs. Coolidge Accepts Movie Council Post

Capper Joins Copeland for Pension Law

Senators to Unite on Bill to Assure Enactment This Session.

Adoption of a program which will assure enactment of an old age pension law for the District before adjournment of Congress will be sought by Senator Capper (Republican), Kansas, at the meeting of the Senate District Committee tomorrow.

Capper is author of a bill, as is Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York. The Capper bill fixes the pension age at 63 and the Copeland bill at 68. The Capper bill provides for administration of the pension law by a special commission appointed by the District Commissioners. The Copeland measure provides for administration of the law under the direction of the Board of Public Welfare.

"The purposes of the measures introduced by Senator Copeland and myself are the same and the differences between us, I believe, are not so great they can not be ironed out," Senator Capper said.

The fact that there are pending National old age pension measures is no reason why action on a District law should be delayed, Senator Capper said.

A public hearing to consider the subject and to disclose local sentiment will be urged on the committee by the Kansan.

Other pending District measures are to be considered by the committee. Senator King (Democrat), Utah, chairman, said he had laid down no special program.

U. S. Political Parties' End Forecast in Rome

Rome, March 6 (AP).—The disappearance of political parties in the United States was forecast by Virginio Gayda, writing in the Giornale d'Italia today on the conclusion of the first year of President Roosevelt's administration.

Gayda, who is considered a spokesman for Premier Mussolini, declared: "President Roosevelt's policy of unification of economic forces tends to level groups, which apparently are destined to disappear or to fuse themselves into a new political society."

Unpaid wages and damages amounting to $2,204.09 are alleged.

Fraser Miniatures On Exhibition Here

National Art Gallery Show Closes March 27.

Miniatures by Charles Fraser, rated as one of the three greatest American miniature painters, are being displayed by the National Gallery of Art.

Fraser, a prominent lawyer in Charleston, S. C., painted the miniatures of many of the prominent families of the old South. He died in 1860.

The exhibition here will close March 27, when the miniatures will be returned to their owners.

A collection of rare stamps of Central American countries was presented President Roosevelt yesterday by Gonzales Zeledon, Charge d'Affaires of the Costa Rican Legation. The stamps were added to the President's extensive collection.

Disabled Veterans Pay Albert Tribute

Brussels, March 6 (AP).—Disabled war veterans from all parts of Belgium gathered today to pay their tribute to the late King Albert at the Marche les Dames Rocks, where he plunged to death while climbing a cliff February 17.

A parade of veterans, principal feature of today's program, will be repeated, according the plans, on March 11. The "Highway of Sights," which passes the scene, resounds almost daily to the tread of various regiments of former service men making pilgrimages.

Detroit Subway Fund Doubtful, Says Ickes

Secretary Ickes, Public Works Administrator, said yesterday that Detroit's application for $87,000,000 for subway construction had received no approval and would be rejected by the Public Works Board unless it was made clear the city itself "has faith in its own project," according to the Associated Press.

YOU CAN'T "KILL" COLDS
but you may Control them!

Don't run risks with so-called "cold-killing" remedies. It's so easy to upset the system with unwise internal dosing.

Play safe with your family's health! Reduce the number, duration and dangers of colds by following Vicks Plan for better Control of Colds. Its worth has been clinically tested—and proved. Details of the Plan are in each Vicks package.

To AVOID many colds —VICKS NOSE DROPS

At that first nasal irritation or stuffiness, apply Vicks Nose & Throat Drops, the amazing new aid in preventing many colds.

To RELIEVE a cold —VICKS VAPORUB

If a cold has developed, apply VapoRub at bedtime. Its poultice-vapor action—all night long—gives soothing relief. Avoids dosing.

VICKS PLAN FOR BETTER CONTROL OF COLDS

"AN EYE TO THE FUTURE — AN EAR TO THE GROUND"

—this describes General Motors' policy, a policy by which the public is given what it wants in better cars year after year, and yet is safely protected against ill-timed or dubious experiments

"I am confident that a more intimate, detailed and systematic knowledge of the consumer's desires will afford a sound and progressive basis upon which to meet the new conditions as they unfold."

ALFRED P. SLOAN, JR.
President, General Motors
(From message to stockholders, September 11, 1933)

Even MORE than they expected!

ONE of the real surprises to the public—and to the motor industry—is the mature beauty of General Motors streamlining for 1934.

They expected No-Draft Ventilation. Knee-Action Wheels had been announced. These were enough to arouse excitement. But streamlining made the score for General Motors "three in a row."

It wasn't daring. This organization has entirely too many friends—too deep a sense of responsibility to almost half of all the people who now own cars—to make any experiment with finished models.

What did guarantee the instant reception of General Motors' new cars is the habit of checking the work of the industry's largest engineering department against what the public wants.

And anyone who listens to what the whole public is saying about the new Chevrolets, Oldsmobiles, Pontiacs, Buicks, La Salles and Cadillacs today, will hear what General Motors heard from hundreds of thousands of car owners many months ago.

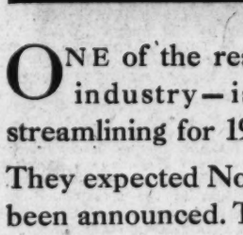
HOW GENERAL MOTORS LEADERSHIP KEEPS IN STEP WITH YOUR DESIRES

FIRST—The vast and varied activities in research and experiment pursued by General Motors cover virtually the whole field of transportation. Its work in aero-streamlining over many years, for example, embraces airplanes, automobiles, even railway trains.

SECOND—Through the largest automotive dealer organization in the world General Motors is in close understanding of the public mind; and every year this understanding is verified and double-checked—last year through more than a million questionnaires mailed to owners of all makes of cars.★

THIRD—It is a hard and fast policy of General Motors to suffer its own mistakes, to test and prove every innovation under conditions beyond those of normal use, to protect the buyer against any experiment of doubtful utility or value.

FOURTH—The balanced excellence of General Motors cars in 1934 as in other years includes ample and numerous features such as safe, smart, roomier Fisher Bodies, perfected No-Draft Ventilation, Knee-Action Wheels, smoother, more powerful motors, better brakes, to mention just a few.



This medallion commemorates the twenty-fifth anniversary of General Motors and of its public-minded interest in the advancement of motor transportation

Spring Rhapsody.

Little goats tripped the streets of New York yesterday, tossing spring from their horns. Signs in tavern windows read "Bock Beer Is Here." All's right with the world again.

Senatorial heads are bowed with weighty problems. Europe is an armed camp. Russ and Jap may snarl and scrap. Critics crack down and plans crack up. The dollar may by now be worth even less than 59 cents. Who cares? Bock beer is here again.

Foamy, bitter, herby bock beer, the heady draught of spring. It's been a long, long time since the little goats appeared in corner windows, beckoning one in to sip the nectar that comes when the crocuses are almost ready to peep. There was a time when, after a winter such as this, the flowers were long in breaking through and people despaired of ever being warm again. And then, suddenly, the little goats came gamboling in.

Then crocus or robin mattered not. All knew that spring was come. It was a sign that never failed. The square posters with the goats' heads on them and the simple lyric "Bock beer is here." And now, in New York at least, the signs are come again. True, there was beer in the era of drought and, if you sought, all else that now may be had in any of the stores that have sprung up like mushrooms. But nowhere bock beer. Even in Jersey it was not. But now it's back again.

So throw off your troubles, fill your cup with cheer, the signs are in the windows, and bock is here.

Price Fixing In The Future.

The Consumers' Advisory Board of NRA has issued a report criticising the price-fixing policies of codified industries. Their statement focuses public attention upon one of the most vital features of the recovery program—substitution of controlled for competitively determined prices. Such regulation or control may be open or direct, as in agreements fixing minimum prices. Or it may be indirect, taking the form of prohibitions upon sales below cost, limitations on output, and restrictions upon the utilization of machinery.

The price-fixing policies which are developing under the codes create administrative problems of extreme complexity. However, the social implications of price fixing are of even greater concern to the people of the United States. When the recovery act was passed, Congress voted—whether unwittingly or not—in favor of price fixing. To be sure, there are reservations and prohibitions upon monopolistic practices that create uncertainty as to the present status of the anti-trust laws. But, practically speaking, these laws have been abrogated to permit the codification of industry to proceed.

Unfortunately the haste with which we have plunged into our program for organizing industry has left little opportunity for considering the long-time consequences of the multifarious pricing systems set up under the NRA. As the Consumers' Advisory Board suggests, "the larger social and economic implications" of the new policies have now to be taken into account, in order that we may assess the net gains and losses.

Cooperation among business competitors, even if it extends to control over prices, may be a public benefit or a major menace to society. Germany—a country having long experience with cartelized industries—has found that some organized groups prosper and serve the public by charging reasonable prices, and adhering to progressive standards. Other cartels have resorted to production quotas or similar devices to keep inefficient producers alive. By selling at extortionate prices and refusing to improve their industrial technique and equipment, these organizations become a social liability of first rank.

We have had ample opportunity in the past to test the effects of anti-social price-fixing agreements of an illegal character. We should be warned by such experiences and those of others and pause before plunging blindly ahead. Otherwise industry may soon find itself in a strait-jacket, with scarcity at high prices substituted for abundance at low prices, while technical progress is thwarted by organized efforts to maintain the status quo.

Almost Balanced.

Official estimates indicate that Great Britain closed her international balance of accounts for 1933 with a small deficit on current account, amounting to £4,000,000. That is, the sums currently owing to the British by foreigners for goods bought, interest on investments, shipping services and other charges did not quite cover the amounts due from the British to foreigners. However, the deficit was below those of the two preceding years, which reached £104,000,000 and £56,000,000, respectively.

The latest figure does not cover capital transactions nor gold receipts, which brought a net inflow of £196,000,000 into the country. Moreover, Great Britain made only two small token payments to the United States on war debt account last year, whereas she paid us £29,000,000 in 1932. Nevertheless, there has been a slow but steady improvement in the trading balance, indicating that the time may not be far distant when Great Britain will again have a net surplus available for overseas investment, and will be able to resume the gold standard if she so desires.

The Milk Case Decision.

At first glance there is an obvious resemblance between the decision of the Supreme Court on New York's milk control law, and that of two months ago on Minnesota's legislation in behalf of mortgage moratoriums. Both laws were enacted by the State authorities in accordance with the philosophy and purposes of the national recovery program. The constitutionality of both has been upheld on grounds which, in the last analysis, must be called those of expediency. Two months ago in these columns we predicted that the effect of the earlier decision would be to fortify the recovery program "to meet its next test of constitutionality." That test has now been met and—by another 5 to 4 decision—surmounted.

Behind this general similarity, however, there is a distinction to which the people of the United States must be alert. The Minnesota moratorium law, by its very nature, was designed for and limited to an emergency period. The New York milk control law, though an outgrowth of the present emergency, is not so confined in application. Indeed, the policy of price-fixing, as pointed out elsewhere on this page today, is one which seems destined to grow and be fostered by the Government, regardless of the break with American traditions involved.

This portent, coupled with the fact that none have to contract mortgages while all need milk, underlies the obvious and proper alarm which breaks through the sober language of the dissenting opinion. Therein is found a sentence to which there may be all too good cause for regretful reference later:

> If now liberty or property may be struck down because of difficult circumstances, we must expect that hereafter every right must yield to the voice on an impatient majority when stirred by distressful exigency.

When present distress is fully measured, none can claim that the country today faces any such emergency as was the case in 1863. Yet, as the minority opinion points out, the Supreme Court is today abandoning guarantees which in that darkest hour of our history were scrupulously maintained. It can be said, perhaps, that this is excusable. But no close student and admirer of our institutions can be light-hearted at the road which we are taking. Ahead are thickening shadows.

Spade Work.

In one respect the appointment of Richard Washburn Child as a special emissary to investigate economic conditions in Europe may appear premature. Congress has not yet formally considered the President's tariff bill, and controversy is foreshadowed. On the other hand, it is evident that Mr. Roosevelt wants to have a clear view of actual conditions in the Old World before he sets out either to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements on a broad scale, or to revive the World Economic Conference.

Promotion of a world-wide economic gathering when the United States was not prepared to discuss the most fundamental problems by which it was confronted has proved one of the Administration's most serious blunders. Apparently President Roosevelt intends to avoid any situation of this kind in the negotiations which he now hopes to enter. A rapid succession of events has carried the world a considerable distance from the stalemate reached at London last summer. Is there any prospect of reviving the conference and accomplishing what proved to be impossible a few months ago? What are the chances of negotiating reciprocal trade agreements with our best customers abroad, if Congress grants Mr. Roosevelt authority to bargain with other countries? It is of the utmost importance that the Administration be fully and accurately informed on these subjects.

Mr. Child has demonstrated capacity as a shrewd negotiator, a diplomat and an investigator. In this task of preparing the way for what may develop into a new international policy he has an apportunity to perform essential service.

Humor In Austria.

Ingenuity worthy of a Yankee hoss trader was called into play by the Socialists of Austria, who removed a large sum from Fascist reach by exporting it under an account falsely attributed to Chancellor Dollfuss. The ruse affords the first cheerful news to come from that country in months. Fascistically inclined or otherwise, it would be difficult for one not to see the humor in the situation. And perhaps there is a moral in it, too.

Crushed by their enemies, the Socialists now lie in prison or hide in exile, but at least some of the spoils do not to the victor belong. In all the woe and misery which has descended upon poor Austria, it appears that the Socialists alone have been able to maintain a sense of humor. Is not this often the case? With arrogance, humor passes; with defeat, it often remains. And in the long run, perhaps the smiling Socialists, who hoodwinked their adversaries, may come again to the top, while the Fascists, now so indignant, may provide only a closed chapter in Austria's long history.

There is the story about the poor Chinese bootblack who with self-pity looked up at the bedizened general and sighed: "Ah, such is life. Only a month ago I, too, was a general." And the mighty one looked down, with a rare sense of humor as well as a sense of history, and replied: "Cheer up. Only a month ago I, too, was a bootblack." So go the fortunes of war, and of peace, too. If the workers of Austria can put one over on their enemies so easily and in so amusing a manner there is hope for them, after all.

Borah Speaks Out.

It was not the cry of a doctrinaire, that ardent plea which Senator Borah made in the Senate, advocating the taking of arms manufactures from the hands of private individuals and placing them under Governmental control. It was a most commonsense attack, documented by a growing mass of evidence, and all the stronger because not intended to defeat the primary aims of the Navy appropriation bill. Its purpose was simply to warn the world against an evil which helped bring about the World War and which increasingly is preparing the way for another outburst of death and destruction. The greed of those who "kill human beings for nothing but sordid gain" is almost unthinkable in its viciousness, and yet, in the face of the investigations cited by Senator Borah, it is a reality which must be faced.

The Senator showed, from records which have not been denied, that in Germany, England, France and the United States are men, conducting huge plants for private profit, whose financial success since the World War has been amazingly spectacular in a world where most other industries have shown equally spectacular declines. These plants make the tools of war, from small shells to huge battleships. At the direction of their management, the Senator charges, issues much of the insane propaganda designed to inflame the minds of men and women in countries where such inflammation might easily be made into the deadly scourge of war.

Back of languishing disarmament conferences Senator Borah sees the controlling hand of the munition makers who would sell death for profits. No ghastlier degradation of humanity can be imagined. The stories about French arms makers backing Hitler and selling French munitions to Germany; the ridiculous attempt to make a warlike gesture out of America's recognition of Russia; the stirring up again of the "Yellow peril" scare; all these, Senator Borah charges, are attributable at least in part to the activities of munition makers.

Small wonder, with these charges, that Congress should be willing to limit profits on armaments contracts to a maximum of 10 per cent. That is at least a step toward the goal which President Wilson sought—the elimination of all private profit out of weapons designed for war.

Deserves Emulation.

Relief needs in the District have become so acute that the Commissioners may postpone their efforts to secure an appropriation for the first building of the proposed Municipal Center. A few weeks ago it appeared that there would be ample funds available to start this project. But a recent survey indicates that at least $2,700,000 must be added to the estimate for emergency relief purposes, assuming that the Federal Government will match the total allotment of $4,000,000 from District funds.

Further delay in construction of the Municipal Center is regrettable. But, of course, the obligation to care for destitute citizens must be given precedence. The Commissioners are to be commended for their concern over conditions among the unemployed of Washington. Too many State executives, faced by similar circumstances, have withdrawn from the struggle and left the responsibility of feeding and housing their destitute people to Uncle Sam. Federal assistance in meeting this local problem ought to be forthcoming, but the District has no intention of sidestepping its obligations.

This attitude deserves attention on Capitol Hill and in Administrative circles. Congress has insisted on holding the District to a subsistence budget, while spending lavishly for national projects. The Public Works Administration has followed a policy of ignoring requests of the District for aid in the construction of schools, libraries, hospitals and administrative buildings. Apparently it has worked on a theory that unemployment and destitution are not acute here. Now that conclusion must be revised.

In response to the unselfish attitude of District officials it would be quite appropriate for the PWA to come forward with funds to construct some of the projects urgently needed in Washington, thus helping to relieve unemployment here as well as in other parts of the country.

Some of the pessimists are of the opinion that if prosperity has turned the corner it was in an ambulance.

Air Mail Background.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As a member of the House of Representatives at the time some of the air-mail contracts were let, perhaps I may be able to throw some light on the methods and motives of those who were then making the contracts and spending the money of the taxpayers, who so often are the forgotten men.

I flattered myself that I was a member in good standing with what was called the Administration, from the President down to the Postmaster General, and especially his assistants. I represented the district in which Herbert Hoover was born, and in my district was a city of no mean importance, Cedar Rapids, which is the fourth primary grain market of the United States—and in Cedar Rapids we actually convert all these cereals into food products.

Cedar Rapids had been left off the main highway of the air over which the mails were carried. The chamber of commerce and all the civic bodies down to the luncheon clubs insisted it was my duty to put the city on the map of the air. They beseeched and almost threatened me with political extinction if I did not get some kind of recognition. A company was conjured up that might drop mail from the air into Cedar Rapids. It was to fly from Minneapolis to St. Louis, and all for the sake of serving the city that I was trying to serve in Congress. Flanked with high officials and potent politicians from home, I proceeded to storm the Postoffice Department. We invoked even the name of Herbert Hoover, both with and without his consent. We pulled with all the pull we had and we flattered ourselves the pulling was good.

And what was the answer from those in direct authority? They flattered me by saying there was no man in Congress whom they would rather favor. But—and the but is important. But they were not laying out mail routes in the sky to serve this or that ambitious city, or to favor this or that politician. I was told that they could not award mail contracts to companies hastily formed to get such contracts. The act of Congress under which they were acting contemplated the development of a well-systematized and comprehensive service from coast to coast, continental and not regional, one that would be permanent and commercially economical. It was even suggested that I should not muster political influence to harass them in carrying out such a program. They would not consider even local financial aid that I was ready to proffer.

Having satisfied myself and my constituents that I had done all I could, and used all the "influence" I could muster, I dropped the matter and the officials pursued the course that they believed would best serve the country and the development of commercial aviation. My contacts with those "higher ups" left me convinced, and I am still convinced, that they were wide-visioned men, who had nothing so much in mind as to build up an air-mail service that would stand to their credit and that would be for the service of their country. Of course, in carrying out such a policy they left many communities disgruntled, and also many politicians and would-be contractors. And these disappointed and disgruntled ones may have made some of the subsequent troubles. That is the penalty of politics, also the curse of it. CYRENUS COLE.

Spanish War Pensions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am sure that public opinion for justice to the Spanish War vets has been misunderstood. As a result of the withdrawal or reduction of our pensions, many of us are being taken care of by the Emergency Relief and charity. The Economy League has not saved anything for the Government by taking away and reducing the poor Spanish War vets' pensions, which could not go over $72 per month.

The Spanish War was fought by volunteers. On or about April 21, 1898, after the call by President McKinley for 100,000 volunteers, all States furnished the best of their man-power to show the world we could fight. We left our homes and loved ones, and in quick time, with no preparation, we were mobilized in camps for war training. About July, 1898, owing to our crowded and unsanitary camp conditions and exposure to the weather, our first disease was scurvy, then typhoid and malaria, which laid low thousands. With this we were given food rations that were poisoned, owing to lack of sanitation. All this has been proven, and all of us Spanish War vets are suffering with some kind of poison condition, or fever, as a result of this experience, and, today, we are old and useless for any further service to our Government or to anybody else.

Our Government had always given us a square deal until the Economy League tried to tell the public that Spanish War vets were not entitled to any pensions. Has this Economy League informed the public what the Spanish War vets have done for this Government, leaving no war debt to the taxpayer by the Spanish War? This answer I now leave to the common sense of the public.

A Vital Need.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The recent ill-tempered attack of Gen. Johnson on The Post directs attention to the steady and pronounced improvement of the paper under its present management.

It has become easily the foremost newspaper of the Capital City. Its vigorous and patriotic editorial policy is not only refreshing, but it obviously reacts favorably on its local contemporaries and prods them to some degree of improvement too.

A vital need in these trying and perilous times is more journals with the candor and discernment to unmask political shams and enlighten the American people. More power to your good right arm.

Withdrawing Gangster Immunity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Referring to your recent issue featuring "Drastic Bill Gives Federal Police Powers Over States." As American citizens we are immune to arrest until a charge is lodged against us, and we are inherently free until such charge is proved. But such immunity gives the kidnaper a long start. In this "drastic bill," that immunity should be withdrawn. When a kidnaping has taken place, questionable characters should be jailed until the kidnapers are apprehended. Then those caught in the net should be freed, individually, or an alibi sworn to by citizens of the place, and released only by Federal agents. Thus the likelihood of culprits being released by local officials who might be in league with the underworld would be obviated. Martial law for the territory involved might well be declared at times. The penalty for kidnapers and accomplices should be written in the law, and court proceedings largely done way with. Such may seem to be somewhat without mercy, but it is time to withdraw both immunity and mercy from that class.

Golden Age of D. C. Negro.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Concerning the recent incident of the refusal of service to the secretary of Congressman Oscar De Priest in the restaurant at the House end of the Capitol, may I employ space of the widely read Post to correct an error in the statement of the manager?

He stated that Negroes had "never been known to eat in the House restaurant and that while he was in charge they never would." Of course, as to the latter part of the averment, I am not so sure it will always stand up, for there are several elements which lie exclusively within the future which should be considered, but as to the first part of the declaration "Negroes have never been known to eat in the House restaurant," the manager is entirely in error.

In the late 80's and early 90's, an era which takes its place as the Golden Age of least restrictive privilege for the Negro citizen of the District, it was not unusual for the Negro ladies and gentlemen to lunch at the House restaurant and, too, with no evidence of slight or discourtesy. In like manner the same consideration was extended generally throughout the city. Specifically I may mention the dining room at the old Sixth street station, the numerous drug store fountains and other places of liquid refreshment, such as the famous Shoomakers, home of ancient and mellow vintages; the Losekam, genial Tom Marshall's cosy place on F street near Fourteenth and the Chamberlin Club, Fifteenth and I, where a cordial welcome was frequently extended by the proprietor himself.

Much water has gone over the dam since those days. Prohibition brought forth with much travail and great agony has yielded up its young life, a victim of politico-malnutrition. Is it too much to hope that the Negro may again be served as well as allowed to serve in the Nation's lunchroom?

Homage to the President.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

An Associated Press dispatch from Boston, dated February 21, states that William R. Castle, Undersecretary of State in the Hoover Administration, declared that President Roosevelt's Administration had moved as had Hitler and Mussolini, and had wiped out personal liberty.

No fair-minded, thinking American, no person with a heart capable of appreciating the immense benefits which President Roosevelt has conferred on millions of his suffering countrymen, believes such statements. Not single unconstitutional act can be charged to the President or his Administration. Not once has he gone counter to the expressed will of Congress. His leadership, it is true, has been fearles beyond all precedent, but for that the vast majority of Americans, I believe, pay him homage of devout thanks and admiration.

Again, the Starlings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In the February 16 issue of The Post is a letter from Mr. J. D. M. Lanley suggesting the use of radios around the Capitol building with the crooners turned on, as a means of frightening off the starlings.

While I have complete confidence in the plan, may I suggest another one which I believe will be quicker in exterminating these pests?

My idea is to reserve a section of the balcony in each House of Congress, and invite the starlings in to observe these great governmental bodies, or Presidential yes-men, in action. It would not be very long before there would be a grand exit and final farewell to the Nation's Capital. "VIRGINIAN."

The Post Impressionist

The Return of Two Natives

Postoffice, Wednesday.

"Carnera is a silent fellow, but his clothes shriek." Thus writes a sports writer, and the champion does nothing about it.

"The Angelus Temple congregation thought my clothes too wordly." So a perhaps unintentionally veracious misprint records the testimony of Aimee McPherson's husband, and he got a divorce.

• • • •

Our acquaintance with Aimee's spouse is exactly like that of Gelett Burgess with the Purple Cow. We have, however, possessed the privilege of observing Primo during a voyage between New York and Le Havre.

The deepest impression left by this experience is that he did not enjoy himself. Although preparing for no fight, he was perpetually guarded against his better self by vigilant warders. They snatched the breakfast cream jug from his powerful right. They visibly forbade him the bar. Every evening at 8 bells, they fearlessly hauled him from the arms of the most diminutive foxtrotter he could find. But, whereas Owen Wister, dean of American letters, may wear a pink "standup" on Pennsylvania avenue, this pugilist's drapery was uncommonly like his neighbors'—except that there was much more of it to each suit.

• • • •

Let the Sporting Department explain Carnera's contradictions. Who shall arbitrate the following difference between the royal House of Bernadotte and the royally named fashion expert of "Collier's?"

Aged, though agile, Sweden's tennis-loving king announces that he will play no tennis with wearers of shorts. Betty Thornley Stuart, of and in "Collier's," avers that next summer "everybody is going to wear them."

Says Betty, coolly: "Shorts will be used for everything except formal and semiformal occasions."

Details? "The most popular length for women will be just above the knee." Yet there will be lengths, designs and colors for all tastes, not excluding those of women whose girth has leaped the girlish limit: "Practically every figure can be taken care of."

• • • •

Concerning the "most popular length" for men, this authority leaves us regretfully uninformed. Nevertheless, she asserts that among male converts are Gen. Atterbury, of the P. R. R.; George Gershwin, of the piano, and Prof. Piccard, of the stratosphere.

• • • •

Time was when people wondered which one of a married couple wore the trousers. Now the sun-burning question is: "Who'll obey the king—who, Miss Stuart?"

Tomorrow may break the authentic dawn of the dictators; but what remains of today is the democratic twilight of the kings. We bet on Betty.

• • • •

For a return to shorts will be but the turning of fashion's clock hands full circle. See the lounge suits of Apollo and Agamemnon. Consult Prokesch v. Osten, Denkwurdigkeiten aus dem Orient (1836). Shorts were the sole brief thing about the Trojan War, or about the epic about it.

• • • •

But will their return banish the returning suspenders? These, like the Young Pretender in the old song, have just "come to their own again," according to Boston information—at least at Harvard. "Bright colors prevail:" Obviously green for the class of 1937, probably deep purple for sophomores.

It is well. Suspenders outlasted the beard as a badge of masculinity, and they deserve a second term. At its inception, the present-day belt was intended not even as an ornamental accessory to the suspenders; it was nothing but a receptacle for surplus armament.

Tommy Loughran wears a belt, but the only belt John L. Sullivan ever wore, outside the ring, was the Richard K. Fox diamond championship belt, and that merely in "The Police Gazette."

• • • •

You may argue that these gentlemen are Europeans. You may say that Europeans prefer suspenders because it is too adventurous to use belts alone with the nether productions of the European tailor. That he makes his belt-straps only under protest. That he makes them so fragile as to tear at the first time of asking. That he makes them so few as to be useless. And that he would rather die than not provide a landing-field for suspenders by cutting all his trousers in "a princesse effect;" a belt becomes a thing of ridicule upon them.

You may ask: "Where, in modern support of the suspender thesis, is not a group of college boys, but a set of outstanding Americans?"

Then we shall respond by playing our best trump. That Harvard card was led simply to establish the suit.

According to White House statistics, 48 per cent of the Brain Trust wear suspenders.

• • • •

So the night may yet arrive when no knotted pajama strings gnaw, like the Spartan lad's fox, at the American midriff. From the attic's Saratoga trunks, we may yet draw forth our forefathers' nightshirts.

A-P. P. S.: The Associated Press appears to record mutiny in the royal ranks—quotes the Duchess of York as saying, "I think shorts are very practical."

P. P. S.: However, she was speaking of shorts for tennis only, and the pair shown her were British-made.

Carlisle Bargeron

IF the members of our August Supreme Court have a sense of humor, and I am satisfied that at least two of them do—Chief Justice Hughes and Justice Roberts—they must be getting a great kick out of the movement to canonize five of their number as the new liberal block. The thing can not be stopped now. The liberal majority they are, the chief justice Justices Roberts, Brandeis, Stone and Cardoza.

BARGERON.

They are the "liberals" at the crossroads of our destiny, the ones with human understanding who have readily grasped our new philosophy, the subordination of property rights to human rights, or as Mr. Roosevelt himself stated it Monday, the placing of human rights before profits. The other four justices are but willful dissenters, very hard-hearted gentlemen removed from human sympathy.

This is not my picture. It is the picture that has been painted by more masterful hands than mine. In fact, it is a picture I could not possibly conceive. I understand it, of course, insofar as it sets out two distinct groups, the five justices of the majority on the one hand and the four dissenters on the other. They have appeared divided this way in the two recent decisions bearing on the New Deal, first in upholding the Minnesota law extending and revising the payments on mortgages, and in that of Monday, upholding the New York milk law.

What I can't understand is why the one group must be labeled the liberals, men of understanding and big hearts, and the others hard-boiled reactionaries.

An explanation, of course, is that both of their decisions have favored the New Dealers and these latter look upon themselves as "Liberals." Everybody who agrees with them is a "liberal." The five majority members of the court headed by the Chief Justice have qualified for their embrace. From now on they are entitled to all of the "liberals'" secrets, entitled to sit in their councils and hear their plans. They may, if they wish, wear little buttons in their coat lapels denoting the liberal beat of their hearts.

I shouldn't at first blush think they would ever do this, but it is a fact that the court is getting to be quite informal. We are moving very fast in our democratic ways if not in the ways of a democracy. I wouldn't be a bit surprised to see some member of the court issuing a statement to the press some of these times.

• • • •

Don't get the impression, however, that I am quarreling with the decision in the New York milk case. My complaint is with the terms that are being used these days. Personally, after reading the majority and minority decisions, I am of the opinion that they must have simply squared off five and four. And the five "liberals" ruled that a small grocer in New York had to quit selling milk at 9 cents a quart and giving a loaf of bread with it because that was embarrassing to the big milk combines.

It seems that all along the line our small corner stores have simply been ruining our vast combines, our great mass-production and mass-distribution enterprises. These poor clumsy monsters must be protected by the law of our land.

As I said, I am not questioning the decision at all. But how in the name of goodness it can be classed as the decision of liberals while the four dissenters are dubbed as reactionaries, incapable of understanding human woes, is more than I can understand.

Keech Retires In Rate Case

Former People's Counsel Finds Other Work Too Pressing.

Richmond B. Keech, former people's counsel, yesterday withdrew from the hearing in the District Supreme Court of the appeal of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. from the order of the Public Utilities Commission of a 10 per cent rate reduction.

Keech is being considered for appointment on the Utilities Commission. He pointed out that he had been in court as a silent observer since his term expired two weeks ago.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins asked Keech if he would stay as a "friend of the court," but Keech explained that it would not be possible, as he found it necessary to do other work.

Lake Bed Reveals Shipping Tragedies

Horicon, Wis. (U.P.). — Horicon Marsh, at one time the site of the largest artificial lake in the country upon which steamers navigated daily, has yielded up a number of old relics.

In the exact center of the marsh, now a game preserve, bits of wreckage have been found which were identified with ships scheduled to arrive in port 50 years ago. In one spot parts of a large boiler surrounded by blocks of quarried stone indicate the conclusion of one voyage.

Two other vessels are known to have gone down in the lake. One, a scow, sank in July, 1857, when lightning struck it during a hurricane, killing three of the crew and seriously injuring the remaining 13. The other disaster occurred two years later when the boiler of the steamer Winer exploded, killing [illegible]

Thoroughbreds Learn Feel Of Saddle Early

By Robert Quillen

The first step in deciding for or against child labor must be to define the word "child."

If you say that boys and girls of 10 or 12 or 14 should not be forced to work long hours for hire, all civilized people will agree.

The future of the Nation, or any section of it, depends on the physical and mental health of its citizens; and to make wage slaves of children is to invite destruction of the Nation's greatest asset.

These are obvious truths, seldom disputed.

But there is another side of the story.

In any American town, large or small, you may find a boy of 15, care-free and pleasure-bent, driving his father's car with the skill of a professional chauffeur. He is strong enough to endure the hard knocks of football. He has made love to one or more girls. Unless his training has been exceptional, he has learned the taste of tobacco and liquor.

Yet the law says that his own father can not require him to work more than three hours a day.

Must boys like these loaf on the street for want of a better occupation, even though their help is needed to earn the family bread?

How many middle-aged men, reared in middle-class homes, were permitted to loaf through their boyhood?

Most of us "helped Dad" after school and during the summer vacations. And though we doubtless felt abused at the time, no evil came of it except that we learned a trade and acquired the habit of working.

You can't wait until a boy is 16 to teach him the habit of industry and a sense of responsibility. There are few bronze statues of men who loafed until they were grown.

The child labor amendment merely gives Congress authority to do something. Like another famous amendment, it will defeat itself if denied the benefit of common sense.

It is one thing to sweat for a penny-pinching cradle-robber, and quite another to help Dad with the chores.

The Seventh of March.

So far as I know, the speech delivered by Daniel Webster in the United States Senate on the 7th of March, 1850, is the only speech known in history by its date. The title of the speech correctly described its contents—"For the Constitution and the Union." But the occasion was so momentous, the issues at stake involving the very existence of our country, and the effect on Webster's own reputation so great, that the address immediately became known by its date; and even now, after the lapse of 84 years, it is still called the "Speech of the Seventh of March."

Webster's great rival and political antagonist, Senator John C. Calhoun, of South Carolina, was on his deathbed, and when Webster expressed regret at his illness and the wish that he might have been present, he was astounded to hear a faint voice murmur from his old friend and opponent. Calhoun had been brought from his bed into the Senate chamber to listen for the last time to the splendid voice he had heard so often. Twenty years earlier, when in 1830 Webster made the famous Reply to Hayne, Calhoun was sitting in the chair; for he was Vice President of the United States.

"The Speech of the Seventh of March" ruined Webster in the eyes of the great majority of the people of New England, as he had known it would. He received a torrent of abuse, insult, vilification; was called traitor and turncoat. When I was a small boy, I used to hear it said that Webster had changed from a great statesman into a cheap opportunist; and of course I believed that. But one day, when I was 17 years old, I decided to read the speech for myself; and when I had finished it, Webster seemed to me greater and nobler than ever. It was the most patriotic, unselfish, far-sighted speech of his life; never was such eloquence combined with such wisdom. This speech is full of matter applicable to conditions in the twentieth century, and every American should read it.

Winchester Rites For John H. Quiatt

Colored Educator to Be Buried Today.

Winchester, Va., March 6 (Spl.). Funeral services will be conducted from Mount Carmel Free Baptist Church here tomorrow afternoon for Prof. John H. Quiatt, 76, foremost colored educator of northern Virginia, who died Sunday.

A native of Fauquier County, Prof. Quiatt came to Winchester in 1880 to take charge of Negro education in the city after special provision for that instruction had been made by the City School Board.

He was in charge of Negro education here for 33 years. His work resulted in the erection of the Douglas Junior High School here, one of the largest high schools for the colored race in the State. He retired from active work 16 years ago, but continued to manifest an interest in all civic affairs relating to his race.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

I SHOULD be the last to deny the debt we owe to Jessie B. Rittenhouse. At a time when there was but scant recognition for the young American poet, she labored for him. She brought out her "Little Book of Modern Verse" in 1913, when there was no other anthology of living poets and added others as excellent. She was chief co-founder of the Poetry Society of America and its secretary for 10 years. Not once did her energy flag in helping to introduce a whole generation of lyric writers.

I dare say no one of recent times has known personally so many and various poets as Miss Rittenhouse. And yet, as I was reading her autobiography, "My House of Life" (Houghton-Mifflin, $3.50), I could not help thinking she failed to do justice to her opportunities. Out of a full and courageous life, out of an acquaintance or friendship with everyone from Louise Chandler Moulton to Vachel Lindsay, she wrote a book which, in a word, I can only call dull.

• • • •

It is oversweet, too "poetic." It holds little but generality and platitude. Not a figure steps on the stage but he or she is eulogized. Everyone is kind, generous, charming, lovable, and winning, and the adjectives go on endlessly. On grounds of pure mathematical probability, at least, I am inclined to doubt this.

The anecdotes she tells are neither exciting nor informing. Amy Lowell insists on water and crackers; Alfred Noyes asks to sit next to Anna Hempstead Branch at dinner; George Sterling, fresh from California, exclaims over a winter in the East: "Don't you love the cold weather? I wish it would snow—too feet of it!"

All this is narrated in a style which I shall indicate by one quotation and leave without comment. Miss Rittenhouse is writing of Alice Brown, first biographer of Louise Imogene Guiney: "From Boston, too, is this lovely person who may be said not to sparkle but to glow, so do her dark eyes flash."

• • • •

But it would be more surprising yet not to find, in this rambling narrative of American poetry in the last 30 years, at least one item of a definite, if peculiar, interest. If I may be excused for repeating it at all, I offer it at face value. Miss Rittenhouse prints a letter she received from Edna St. Vincent Millay in 1920, in which occurs this sentence: "I find myself suddenly famous, Jessie dear, and in this unlooked-for excitement, I find a stimulant that almost takes the place of booze!"

If you are already acquainted with Roget's "Thesaurus," you need only be told that Longmans-Green has issued a completely revised and authorized edition ($2)—705 pages of India paper, bound in dark blue, limp imitation leather. Peter Mark Roget's great-grandson supervised this issue, and it is printed by the American house of the original London publisher of the first edition of 1852.

If the "Thesaurus" is still unknown territory to you, you have yet to discover one of the oddest and most invaluable works of learning in English.

The "Thesaurus" is a treasury of words arranged not by alphabet, but by idea. The whole realm of fact and thought is divided into precisely 1,000 categories gathered under six main headings—Abstract Relations, Space, Matter, Intellect, Volition and Affections. By subdividing downward, Roget put every idea possible to man in his pigeonholes—no small feat of mind over universe!

Moreover, the ideas are arranged as often as possible by opposites. On one half of the page is a pigeonhole called Hindrance, on the other half one called Aid. In each of these the words are divided into nouns, verbs, adjectives, adverbs, phrases and interjections. It is all very complicated at first sight.

• • • •

The value of the "Thesaurus" is this—you have an idea, but the word you want is just around the corner. You know, to be sure, a word vaguely near, and this you look up in the huge index at the end of the book. Under the suggesting word you find several others, each leading down a different avenue of meaning. Here you have to guess which avenue is the one in your direction, but this isn't so hard as it might appear. A number will refer you to a pigeon-hole in the front and, in the list there given, you will come upon so many words of the meaning you wanted that you will be embarrassed with verbal riches.

The "Thesaurus" belongs at the side of every dictionary, complementing it fully. I have heard of writers who scorn it, but I am inclined to believe, if I looked into their studies, that Roget's world-famous work would be found within easy reach. It is just as valuable for anyone who uses the written language at all.

Manager of Hamas Asks Carnera Bout

New York, March 6 (U.P.).—Charley Harvey, manager of Steve Hamas, today put in a definite bid for his charge to meet Primo Carnera in a heavyweight championship bout here in June.

Harvey, in Miami, telegraphed James J. Johnston, Madison Square Garden boxing boss, asking first for a bout between the winner of Friday's Walter Neusel-Kingfish Levinsky fight.

Harvey pledged a knockout over either Neusel or Levinsky and assured Johnston that Hamas "will then further clinch his claim to the title shot by giving Max Baer the same kind of a licking that Hamas gave Max Schmeling in Philadelphia.

Druggist Predicts Drug Stores Without Drugs

South Bend, Ind. (U.P.).—The drug store of tomorrow will dispense sandwiches, cosmetics and bathing suits and will not handle drugs at all, Oscar M. Russell, Elkhart, secretary of the Indiana State Board of Pharmacists, predicted here.

"Professional pharmacists will open their own shops," Russell said. "There will be two stores; one a drug store where commercial business is transacted, the other a pharmacy.

"The apothecary shop is being reborn."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

DR. ROOSEVELT EXAMINES THE PATIENT AGAIN.

Dr. Roosevelt—Well, how do you feel now, Samuel?

Uncle Sam—Pretty fair, doc. In fact, if it wasn't for those dizzy spells I think I'd be my old self again.

Dr. Roosevelt—Are you sure those dizzy spells aren't imagination?

Uncle Sam—Lissen, doctor, I've had experience under too many Presidents not to know when I'm dizzy.

• • • •

Dr. Roosevelt—I can't understand it. You look so well.

Uncle Sam—I am well, doctor, but I can't get the medical staff and nurses to believe it. They keep on prescribing new tonics. Say, who's the head physician around here, anyhow?

Dr. Roosevelt—I am.

Uncle Sam—Then why don't you pronounce me cured, throw out all those bottles, write me out a discharge and give me a chance to show you how strong I am?

Dr. Roosevelt—Now, Sam, all those medicines I have been giving you have been doing you a lot of good.

Uncle Sam—Yes, but I don't have to go on taking them forever, do I? It's all this attention I'm getting that's holding back my recovery.

Dr. Roosevelt—What makes you think so?

Uncle Sam—I'm kept so busy swallowing NRA capsules, CWA tablets, BGT elixirs, TRH wafers and XYZ powders that I don't get time to do anything else.

Dr. Roosevelt—Don't they fill you with the urge to do things?

Uncle Sam—Sure. But just when I feel like doing things those other fellers rush in and stop me.

Dr. Roosevelt—What other fellows?

Uncle Sam—Those PWA masseurs, CBA chiropractors and CCC vapor bath men.

Dr. Roosevelt—But when they finish with you, you feel like a new man, do you not?

Uncle Sam—I don't get time to analyze my feelings. They're no sooner gone than another bunch of experts rush in and they begin feeling me all over, squinting down my throat, tapping my chest and taking X-rays of my big toe.

Dr. Roosevelt—Why the big toe?

Uncle Sam—I dunno, I can't figure it out, except that some of your young doctors working on my case are so full of funny notions they think a big toe is a tonsil.

• • • •

Dr. Roosevelt—Look at this chart. It shows you are still running a fever.

Uncle Sam—That's no fever chart; that's one of Dr. Warren's sketches of economic trends.

• • • •

Dr. Roosevelt—Have they taken your temperature lately?

Uncle Sam—Yes, they take it every day, but do you know the big mistake they make? They hold the thermometer in their own mouths instead of mine.

Dr. Roosevelt—Go ahead.

Uncle Sam—Am I supposed to be undergoing a period of convalescence or a life sentence?

Dr. Roosevelt—I admit it's a little confusing, but all I have in mind is a period of convalescence. Stick to me and everything will come out all right in the wash.

THE LAST WORD IN FOOLHARDINESS.

If the first robin appears this year before Decoration Day he will go down into history as a daredevil.

An annual event for the next 20 years in New England will be the regular midwinter epic contest between the veterans of the blizzard of '88 and the blizzard of '34.

Some of us are so old we can recall when the Senate stock market investigation was away out on the outskirts of the town.

President Roosevelt has been in office a year and when he looks around and sees what's happened he is probably as much surprised as the voters.

Culbertson on Bridge

Attack and Counter-Attack.

One of the rarest occurrences at the bridge table is to see a vulnerable team deliberately take a sacrifice against nonvulnerable opponents to prevent the opponents from scoring a game or Slam bonus.

Today's hand, which occured in the Pair event of the Grand National Championship, held in New York City, is unusual in that after a vulnerable North and South pair reach a lay-down Small Slam their nonvulnerable opponents can take a sacrifice penalty which is more than worth while. At one table, however, the North player was particularly astute and overcalled the opponent's six-heart bid with six notrump, which contract, played from the right side, is also a lay-down for North and South.

South, Dealer
East and West vulnerable

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	1◇	1♡
5◇	Pass (1)	5♡ (2)	Pass
6♣ (3)	6♡ (4)	6NT (5)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—West does not wish to sacrifice if the opponents stop under a Slam. He realizes that a possible set of 500 points is a bad sacrifice against a nonvulnerable game bid at Howell Match Point play.

2—North naturally wants to contract for at least a Small Slam and possibly a Grand Slam after his partner's very strong bid. He makes the correct bid—an Overcall in the opponents' bid suit.

3—South's response is fairly obvious. He wishes to paint a fairly accurate picture of his distribution but does not wish to encourage a Grand Slam unless North wishes to bid it by himself.

4—Since the opponents have contracted for a Slam which will give them a score of more than 900 points, West now decides to attempt to take the sacrifice. After his partner's Overcall he feels fairly certain that six hearts will not be defeated more than three tricks, or 900 points, and a set of 900 points or less would naturally be more than worth while.

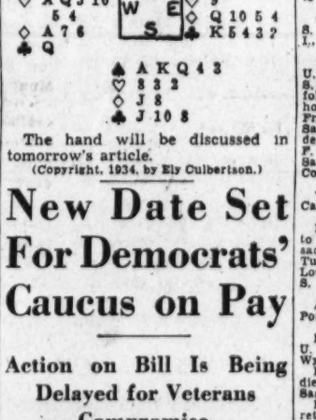
5—North quite correctly sizes up the situation. Despite his own wealth of honors, he knows that his partner's bidding is based chiefly on distribution, and accordingly decides that he can not set the opponents sufficiently to counteract the possible score for a Slam bid and made, even with the existing vulnerability situation. He quite correctly decides that six no-trump played from his seat must be a laydown. He knows his King of spades will stop that suit from being run against him, although he is certain the opponents hold the Ace, and he can count for a certainty five diamond tricks, a heart trick and a minimum of five, and probably six, tricks in clubs. Therefore he overcalls West's six-heart bid with six no-trump.

Obviously, the six-notrump contract is a laydown, and North and South scored very close to top on the board. West's attempt at a sacrifice was also very fine as six hearts could have been defeated only two tricks.

Tomorrow's Hand.

What line of defense should be adopted by North and South against West's contract of three hearts doubled?

West, Dealer
Both sides vulnerable



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

New Date Set For Democrats' Caucus on Pay

Action on Bill Is Being Delayed for Veterans Compromise.

The Democratic caucus on Government pay restoration and veterans' benefits, postponed last week when House leaders decided to revive an old rule to return the independent offices bill to the Appropriations Committee, probably will be held after all, Representative Byrns, majority leader, stated yesterday.

A decision will be reached, he said, as soon as the Aprropriations Committee is ready to report on the pay and veterans' amendments.

All questions of procedure, including whether the report will carry a gag rule preventing the tacking on of amendments from the floor, will be settled at the caucus.

Meanwhile, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the Independent Offices sub-committee, is carrying on group conferences with House members and veterans' representatives in an effort to effect a compromise between the liberality of the Senate and what the Administration is willing to give.

Inability to Smell Onions Worth $3,500

Philadelphia (U.P.).—A jury in Delaware County court has decided that the inability to be able to smell onions is worth $3,500.

Miss Jean Marsh, Philadelphia former model, 27, was struck by an automobile driven by John M. Ruegenberg, Upper Darby. Several operations were performed on her nose in an attempt to restore its former beauty. The operations failed and the young woman sued the autoist.

She testified at the trial in Media that she couldn't even smell onions and the jury's sympathy went out to her in the form of a $3,500 verdict.

Famed Neville Farm May Be War Cemetery

Pittsburgh (U.P.). — The Neville farm where irate Western Pennsylvania farmers demonstrated against a whisky tax during the famous whisky rebellion may become an "Arlington cemetery" for Allegheny County's soldier dead.

Sixty acres of the farm, once owned by Gen. John Neville, collector of the obnoxious 25 cent whisky tax, have been purchased for the soldiers' memorial park. The farm also was traversed by the old trail leading from Pittsburgh to the Western Reserve.

U. S. Expected To Begin Land Program Soon

Families Will Be Shifted and Farms Closed All Over Country.

Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of stories by the Associated Press explaining the Government land utilization plans, one of the most vital problems of the Roosevelt Administration.

The Roosevelt Administration is expected to inaugurate in this first week of its second year the actual purchasing of acreage in its land utilization program.

Men who have been studying the problem since long before Mr. Roosevelt became President estimate that between 25,000,000 and 40,000,000 acres of land is definitely "submarginal."

For the good of individuals living on it, and the Nation as a whole, they feel this vast acreage should be retired from production.

Resources "Swept Away."

L. C. Gray, Department of Agriculture economist, likens the indiscriminate giving of lands by the Federal Government in past years to the spending of a "Coal Oil Johnny." As for the result, he says:

"We find most of our timber resources swept away and our oil and gasoline being squandered in an incredible orgy of waste; hundreds of 'ghost' towns and villages; scores of millions of acres of good farm land ruined by erosion; 25,000,000 acres in abandoned farms; some of the Nation's finest beauty spots and recreational resources subject to private exploitation; thousands of farmers waging a hopeless battle on unfriendly soils or with inadequate acreage; an overexpanded farm plant, and millions crowded in congested centers of population."

Such conditions can not be allowed to continue, the Roosevelt group has decided.

Funds Already Donated.

From Public Works Administration funds they have been given $25,000,000, and other funds will be forthcoming.

The Federal Government, acting as the coordinating agency with States, cities, counties and township governments, will buy up large tracts of land, move the people on it to other areas, destroy roads, schools and drainage ditches now largely useless, and build up an entirely new structure suited to the needs and welfare of the people.

In answer to the cries of "Communism," these men reply, in effect, "If it's Communism, make the most of it!"

"Faced with the alternatives of continuing the present wasteful, disorganized and aimless system existing on thousands of farms, or building a new structure of farm life which will guarantee these families a decent scale of living, recreation and wholesome constructive work toward renewing themselves and their country," Gray holds, "there can be but one choice."

If Difficulties Are Great.

Monumental difficulties stand in the way, they acknowledge. Chief of these is the natural reluctance of families to move from the soil on which they have lived, perhaps for generations. However, leaders believe the opportunity for a new start can be made attractive enough to overcome this inhibition.

Land will be acquired in huge blocks, probably counties or portions of counties in the most distressed areas.

It is planned then to convert this land to numerous uses, including erosion control, which strikes at the very heart of the flood problem; timber production; wild life refuges and sanctuaries, and National, State and county parks.

(Note: The practical application of such a program will be discussed in tomorrow's article.)

Economies Peril 10,000 Jobs; Slot Machine Tax Bill Passes.

Richmond, March 6 (AP).—The Senate Finance Committee moved with haste today in an effort to avoid throwing 10,000 people out of work this summer.

Acting on a resolution by Senator John Lesner, of Norfolk, the committee agreed to appoint five of its members to serve on a committee with five members of the House Appropriations Committee and the Lieutenant-Governor and the Speaker of the House. The committee is to wait on the governor in an effort to work out some plan to meet a Federal demand for relief funds.

Senator Lesner said "we have passed a bill cutting nearly $2,000,000 off the road funds, and now the Federal Government says we have got to do our part if we are going to get any Federal relief money for our unemployed."

101 House Bills Passed.

With impassioned addresses replacing the restricted oratory of the day sessions, the House in night session yesterday defeated the bill to create a State sanitorium for inebriates and passed the measure admittedly designed in its present form to tax slot machines out of existence.

The bill to tax and restrict the use of billboards was left to die on the calendar. The death blow was administered to the Beard bill seeking to create a milk commission, fix the price of milk and control its production, transportation and sale.

The House boosted its total of bills passed yesterday to 101 at the night session. It cleared up its calendar and gave the Senate so much grist to grind that there was little hope that the upper House would consider more than a small percentage of the bills passed.

Plea for Inebriates Fails.

Haskins Hobson, delegate from Chesterfield, after amending his bill for a sanatorium for inebriates to provide for incarceration there of persons less than 30 years old convicted of drunken driving, delivered a stirring address to the House.

Mr. Hobson compared the aims of the racketeers during prohibition with those of the State. Both, he said, sought to obtain a monopoly, to bring to themselves the profits and both sought to stifle competition. The racketeers, he said, did nothing for the victims of intoxicants and the State, he added, has done nothing yet.

Slot Machine Taxes Pass.

The slot machine bill, sponsored originally as a tax measure by Delegates Moffett, George, Shrader and Quesenbery but amended by Delegate John Spiers, of Radford, to place a tax of $25 on each machine and $50 per machine on the operator, was brought up immediately afterward and the House heard another impassioned address from Spiers.

The Radford delegate denounced slot machine gambling, asserting he had witnessed a man in Richmond shedding tears after spending $75 in a vain effort to get money from a machine.

"I want to save the weak from the iniquitous machines," he said. "I believe this tax will do it."

Delegate Dan Coleman's bill prohibiting anyone from serving on the general hospital board, or on any of the separate insane hospital boards, who is interested in a private sanitarium for nervous diseases was passed. Delegate H. M. Bandy, of Wise, also secured passage of his bill increasing from $50 to $60 the exemption of wages per month by laboring men from garnishment or levy.

Manassas Drama Club Will Present 2 Plays

Manassas, Va. March 6 (Spl).—The dramatic club of Manassas High School, recently organized under the sponsorship of Prof. W. E. Lloyd, will begin work this week on one-act plays to be presented soon.

"The Diabolical Circle" by Beulah Bornstead and "Sham" by Frank G. Tompkins have been chosen. The club has invited Dr. Newman, who recently came here from Richmond, to become the director.

7 Loudoun Schools On Accredited List

Purcellville, Va., March 6 (Spl.). Seven high schools in Loudoun County are listed among the accredited high schools in Virginia, according to Superintendent O. L. Emerick, from the division of public instruction. The Leesburg, Lincoln, Lucketts, Lovettsville, Round Hill, Ashburn and Aldie schools reached the required number in attendance and met other necessary conditions.

Citizens' Ticket Elects One Commissioner.

Williamsport, Md., March 6 (Spl.). In a hotly contested election, at which the largest vote ever polled here was cast, the Progressive ticket elected a burgess, assistant burgess and one of the two commissioners by small majorities.

Richard C. Hawken was elected burgess over F. M. Gower, who headed the Citizens' ticket, 338 to 304. Charles W. Harsh was elected assistant burgess over W. E. Cottrell, 342 to 315. Harry Shank, Progressive, with a vote of 341, and H. O. Britner, Citizens, 326, were elected commissioners.

The defeated candidates for commissioners were John A. Connelly, Progressive, 299, and C. A. Lumm, Citizens, 325.

Senate Passes Bill, 21-18, and Governor Will Sign It Today.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Va., March 6.—Legal whisky will begin to flow in Virginia between March 22 and April 1.

This was assured today when the Senate concurred in gubernatorial amendments to the liquor bill by a 21-to-18 vote and Gov. Peery announced he would sign the measure tomorrow. Printers planned to work on the bill all night to enable prompt action.

The measure contained a clause making it effective 15 days after passage. The three-man control board—expected to be appointed soon—probably will obtain stocks and be ready to begin business March 22.

Stores Given Monopoly.

State-operated dispensaries will be established in more than 100 towns and cities. Stores will have a monopoly on hard liquor sales. Hotels and restaurants, however, will be permitted to sell wine and beer of unlimited alcoholic content.

All tax revenues up to $1,650,000 annually will go to the State, with counties and cities to receive 50 per cent of the remainder. Under an amendment approved today, 3.2 beer revenue will be segregated from liquor income and will be allotted the State.

Another amendment accepted by the Senate would subject both the buyer and seller of illegal spirits to 12-month jail sentences.

Board Has Wide Powers.

General liquor law provisions are:

Broad powers to fix prices and policies will be exercised by the control board; members will be paid not in excess of $7,500 a year each; any individual may import a gallon of whisky at a time from another State for his personal use.

Individuals may drink legally acquired whisky in hotel rooms, but not in public places, such as hotel lobbies and on highways; dispensaries will be closed on Sundays, holidays and election days; dry counties or cities may hold local option elections; persons under 21, habitual drunkards and motorists convicted of driving while intoxicated will not be permitted to buy liquor.

Comedy Scheduled At Martinsburg

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 6 (Spl.).—Under the chairmanship of Lawrence A. Parkinson, legion worker, a local committee will stage a musical comedy, "Heads Up," here March 22-23, with local talent.

Bilge Oil in Bay Kills Ducks, Geese

Guilty Ship Sought After Wholesale Slaughter.

Norfolk, Va., March 6 (Spl.).—Several hundred dead ducks and geese were washed on the beach today between Cape Henry and Virginia Beach, their bodies covered with heavy coatings of oil.

Walter J. Fentress, State secretary for the Izaak Walton League, and L. J. Rux, who made an investigation, declared the fowl has encountered bilge oil off shore. They were either drowned or suffocated by oil fumes, they said.

There are State and Federal laws prohibiting ships dumping bilge oil in Chesapeake Bay or rivers and harbors, and Fentress says he is reporting the matter to the Biological Survey at Washington and Coast Guard headquarters.

The Coast Guard will endeavor to escertain the name of the vessel that dumped its oil in Chesapeake Bay.

Cattle Breeding School Scheduled at Abingdon

Abingdon, Va., March 6 (Spl.).—A two-day cattle breeding school, sponsored by the Washington County Agricultural Extension Service, the Pet Milk Co. and leading dairymen, will be held at the First National Bank here Thursday and Friday.

Representatives of the Dairy Husbandry Department of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, and the State Division of Animal Industry, Richmond, will give illustrated lectures on breeding.

Two of Seven Escaped Prisoners Recaptured

Buckhannon, W. Va., March 6 (Spl.).—Sheriff Morgan Bailey, of Upshur County, today reported the recapture of two of the seven prisoners who broke out of the county jail here yesterday.

They are Lawrence B. Smith, alias Beleu, charged with extortion, and Aubrey Rinehart, charged with getting money under false pretenses. They were found sleeping at a farmhouse near Janelew.

Salvage Tug Crew Win in Wage Suit

Norfolk, Va., March 6 (AP).—Former members of the crew of the treasure-seeking steam tug Salvor were victors in the United States District Court here when Judge Luther B. Way ruled they were entitled to certain wages they claimed due for work in helping try to recover gold, silver and jewels from the sunken steamer Merida.

Judge Way's decision came yesterday in the libel filed against the Salvor by Charles Parkins, a member of the crew, and 15 others. Fifteen of 16 claims were allowed partially. They will aggregate between $700 and $800 each.

Served on School Board for 20 Years.

Staunton, Va., March 6 (Spl.). E. W. Crosby, 73, member of the Augusta County School board for 20 years, died today after a month's illness.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 2:30 p. m., at Hebron Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Crosby was an elder.

He is survived by his widow, formerly Miss Eddie Koontz; one daughter, Mrs. Harry Karicofe, of Frederick, Md.; one son, Lloyd, and one sister, Mrs. G. W. Baylor. Mr. and Mrs. Crosby would have celebrated their golden wedding anniversary this year.

Native of Berryville Slain in Mississippi

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 6 (Spl.).—Relatives here were advised yesterday that Fred M. Hayslett, of Columbus, Miss., formerly of this section, had been murdered by a Negro bandit.

He was about 45, and until recent years frequently visited here. He has a wide family connection in the county, particularly in the Middleway section. He was born in Berryville, Va.

Sea Museum Draws Tourists

Thousands Visit 1,000-Acre Tract Near Newport News Developed by Archie M. Huntington; More Improvements Planned.

Newport News, Va., March 6 (AP). On a 1,000-acre tract west of Newport News, Archer M. Huntington has established a mariners' museum to preserve relics from the days of the sailing ship to the modern era.

Since its establishment in 1929 the site has been visited by thousands of tourists. Huntington is the owner of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co.

A building which houses the relics, a lake for birds, ducks and swan, a preserve for native Virginia wild animals and song birds, and a plant preserve for shrubs and trees indigenous to Virginia are among the features.

Homer L. Ferguson, president of the museum, and other officials are contemplating the erection of an old water mill, the placing of a large sculptured horse group on the facade of the building facing the lake and the planting of thousands of unusual plants from all parts of the world. Panthers, carved by Mrs. Huntington, guard the entrance.

Among the exhibits are a large figurehead of a woman taken from an ancient French ship. A large model of the steamship President Hoover and an historical picture showing the sinking of the Cumberland by the Merrimac off Newport News March 8, 1862.

Although more than 20 years will be required to finish the museum and grounds it already has become one of Virginia's show places.

Officers of the museum, besides Ferguson, are Charles F. Bailey, vice president, and George A. Parker, treasurer. The board of trustees is composed of Bailey, Mrs. Huntington, F. H. Skinner and Ferguson.

Chamber to Select Officers for Year

PWA Finances Factory Homes

Will Help Erect 50 Houses for Rayon Employes at Alta Vista, Va.

A housing project for Alta Vista, Va., to provide homes for workers in the rayon factory there, was authorized by the Public Works Administration yesterday.

The Administration will lend up to $84,000 for construction of 50 one-story, four-room frame dwellings, to be rented at $16.

Forty of the dwellings will cost $1,312 each and ten others will cost $1,880 each.

2 West Virginians In Senate Race

Clarksburg, W. Va., March 6 (Spl.).—Although fall elections are distant, two candidates are already in the ring for the West Virginia United States Senatorship.

Earl Annon, of Philippi, has been regularly named as the Socialist nominee for the position. The other candidate is Edmund M. Conaway, a school teacher of Board Tree, Marshall County, who has notified Emer C. Yoho, of Moundsville, chairman of the Marshall County Democratic executive committee, of his candidacy.

Envoy to Go, Says Report; Capital Sad

Ambassador of Turkey Again Announced as Retiring.

Society Feels Regret at Forecast of His Departure.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Washington society has received with regret the report of an immiment change in the Diplomatic Corps. The Ambassador of Turkey, Mr. Ahmet Muhtar, dean of the Diplomatic Corps, for the second time in announced as retiring.

Word has come in an Associated Press dispatch from Turkey that the Ambassador is to be replaced. The embassy here has made no announcement.

The Ambassador has been in ill health for some time, and this lends credence to the report. Last year a similar report published in the Capital was vigorously denied by the embassy, and friends of the Ambassador hope that the current report also may be reversed.

Appointed in 1927.

Muhtar Bey is probably the most distinguished and ambassadorial-looking envoy in Washington at the present time. He is a veteran diplomat, having served his country ably, under the old as well as the new regimes, since 1893.

He was appointed first Ambassador of the Turkish Republic to the United States in 1927, which post is the culmination of a magnificent career. During his four years of service here the handsome, white-haired, white-mustached gentleman, with his polished manner, faultless French, and distinguished bearing, has become an outstanding and popular figure in Capital society.

If the rumor of Muhtar Bey's departure is correct, his place as dean of the Diplomatic Corps will be assumed by the Ambassador of Great Britain, Sir Ronald Lindsay.

Roll of Diplomatic Deans.

It seems almost incredible that the changes have been so numerous that within four years the chiefs of mission have completely revolved, and his Britannic Majesty's envoy is again about to become dean of the corps.

When Lord Howard, then Sir Esme Howard, Ambassador of Great Britain, was transferred from Washington to Rome, he had been in the Capital for nearly ten years. Since then the envoys of Mexico, Italy and France have had the honor of heading the Diplomatic Corps, due to their length of service in this country.

But Capital society knows and understands these frequent and regrettable changes, and compensates itself by welcoming back those diplomats who frequently return to this country in more exalted positions, to pick up the train of their friendships as though they had never been away.

Widow of Joseph Donner, His Fiancee; Surprise Announcement.

The recently announced engagement of Lord Hallam Tennyson, grandson of the late Alfred Lord Tennyson, one-time poet-laureate of England, to Mrs. Carroll Elting Donner, widow of Joseph Donner, of Buffalo, is of interest to Washington. Lord Tennyson is the former husband of Mrs. James M. Beck, jr., daughter-in-law of Representative and Mrs. James M. Beck.

The announcement of the engagement came as a surprise to the many friends of Lord Tennyson in London, as he has been away from England since last summer, making his home in Burlingame, Calif.

Mrs. Donner is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Elting, of Chicago and New Paltz, N. Y., and has been spending the winter in Santa Barbara. Her father is a well-known clubman of Chicago, and her brother, Mr. Howard Elting, jr., now vice consul in Istanbul, Turkey, spent several years in Washington while preparing for the Foreign Service. His marriage to Miss Margaret Ayers, of New Rochelle, N. Y., more than a year ago was of interest here.

Lord Hallam Tennyson, the third Baron Tennyson, is a noted cricket player and World War hero. He attended Eton and Trinity College, Cambridge, and was a major in the rifle brigade, formerly the Coldstream Guards. Lord Tennyson succeeded to the title on the death of his father in 1928. The second Baron Tennyson, like his illustrious father, was a noted author.

The marriage will take place on April 14 in Santa Barbara, Calif.

Opera Season In Baltimore Draws Many

President Invited; Society Group From Capital Will Go.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt have been invited to attend the three-night season of Metropolitan Opera at the Lyric Theater in Baltimore. The invitation was extended by the Baltimore Opera Club, underwriters of the Metropolitan Opera season in the Maryland metropolis. It followed definite news from New York that there will be no opera season by the Metropolitan in Washington this year.

Elizabeth Rethberg will open the Baltimore season the night of April 9, when she appears in the title role of Puccini's "Madame Butterfly."

Mme. Rethberg will be supported by Giovanni Martinelli, Angelo Bada and Ina Bourskaya in "Butterfly" on the opening night. The double bill on Tuesday, April 10, will have Editha Fleischer, De Luca, the radio operatic tenor, Nino Martini, and Ezio Pinsa in "Gianni Schicchi." Goetja Ljungberg, Friedrich Schorr and Frederick Jagel will sing in a revival of Richard Strauss' "Salome." Lucrezia Bori, Lawrence Tibbett and Richard Crooks will sing in Verdi's "La Traviata" on the closing night, April 11.

Judging from the number of seats already proccured, Washington society will be as well represented as Baltimore society.

Weather Can't Damage These Rain Costumes

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Spring may bring crocuses, hyacinths, roses and violets, but it also brings consistent showers that wreak havoc with our new wardrobes. And, of course, if all wasn't vanity we could very well cloak ourselves in a heavy slicker, don the high galoshes and brave the direst downpour. But surely no woman has soul so dead that she could bear to submerge a brand new outfit in the folds of an old raincoat.

A downtown department store realizes these problems so keenly that it sought about for a reasonable solution. And here's what it is: Light rubber rain capes to sling casually over the shoulders, a matching wrap-around skirt, and a jaunty little beret, same material, same color. All three of these come folded neatly into a little rubber bag, which will fit into a coat pocket. There are sets in red, blue, green and tan.

We can safely wear our best, even with menacing clouds overhead, for when the first drops begin to fall out comes little bag, rain cape, skirt, and all.

There are other sets, one including merely the cape and cap for $1, and a plain cape for 75 cents. These are available in attractive figured rubber, small, unobtrusive designs.

For Bottles—Extra Special.

There's quite a jolly old topper in a local gift shop. He's a very talented gentleman. With very little effort he can be bottle opener and corkscrew at one and the same time. Although he's never been immortalized by a Shakespeare, Byron, or Keats, one rhymester wrote of him:

"His big mouth will uncap ale and beer;
He has big ears and perhaps looks queer.
Pull off his hat and you will see

A Story and a Jewel.

A local jeweler has an interesting tale to tell, and a magnificent ring to show.

One day a short time ago a Chinese boy came into the shop and asked to see some jades. The clerk brought out a tray of rings and proudly displayed them. The Chinese boy looked at each one fixedly and asked if there were no other jade in the store. The clerk remembered that a few loose stones had come in that morning. He took these out of the boxes and held them up for the boy's approval.

With an expressionless face, and in an equally expressionless voice, the youth said, "Your jade, pshaw;"

The clerk was naturally annoyed and burst into a flow of eloquence, or sales talk as some persons call it. He ended up by defying the youth to show him anything better.

The Chinese boy maintained the same stoic look. He reached in his vest pocket and brought out an old gold ring set with an imperial jade.

The clerk's mouth dropped open. His eyes bulged. The proprietor, observing that something unusual was taking place in his shop, advanced. He, too, examined the ring, and exclaimed over its rare beauty. A connoisseur of stones, he knew the gem was of great value.

"I was very rich. Now I am poor," the youth remarked by way of explanation. "I would like to leave this with you to sell for me. I must finish college."

The ring, the inside marked with Chinese figures, is there now, a beautiful, rare piece of jade, translucent as such jade is.

It was a choice—education or jade—and the student chose education.

For Office or Home.

There's a new pencil sharpener on the market. It's designed to suit the office desk, or the home desk.

Besides being a pencil sharpener, it's a paper weight, so that if it isn't being used one way, it is another.

Most pencil sharpeners have standard shapes, but this one appears to be a metal sphere, sliced directly in half. Blades concealed on the inside are of such sturdy steel that they're proof against a regiment of pencils.

The manager of the shop which carries them said when they first arrived she was dubious about their selling value. But, she admits, even merchandise managers have happy surprises.

The Question of Make-Up.

I. R. writes that she is a blonde with ash blonde hair, gray eyes and a pale skin. What make-up is recommended?

A creamy or light naturelle powder for daytime is suggested and a deeper peach shade for evening. Rouge should be light, and a clear red tone. Mascara must be light brown and either gray or blue eyeshadow may be used.

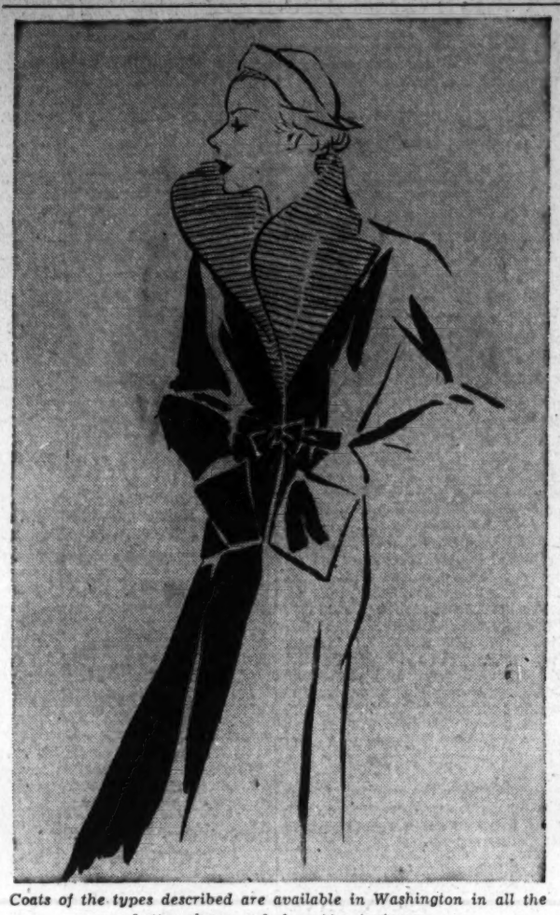
Schiaparelli Designs 'Stormy Weather'

But It's Really a Coat Fit for Balmy Spring Days.

By Amos Parrish.

New York, March 6.—Schiaparelli called it "Stormy Weather" when she designed the coat from which the one illustrated gets its inspiration. But it's one of the most-in-fashion fair weather coats you can wear on Easter.



It does make you look as if you were being swept along in the teeth of a 50-mile gale . . . a smart way to look this spring . . . with that blown-forward collar and skirt rippling in front as if all its material were pushed that way by the wind.

The back is as smooth as backs get when gusts whirl you 'round corners. And even the pockets are so placed that when your hands are in them you appear to be whipped from the rear.

"Wind-Swept" Silhouette.

This coat is a perfect example of the new daytime "wind-swept" silhouette. And if you want to change your whole fashion outlook on life this spring, it's a coat of this type for you.

There are other spring coats that have this wind-swept look in a more modified way. With front skirt fullness . . . sometimes more than this has . . . but with less gale-blown collars.

One of these has a collar which started out to be a cape. But it is draped across the shoulders and front in a cowl-like way. And you'll find coats with collars blown forward but smaller and less standuppish than this.

Leaflet Tells Best Spring Ensembles.

Any of these coats make a smart Easter costume . . . provided the rest of the ensemble is harmonious. The question of what goes with what to make up a good-looking spring costume is graphically answered in a new illustrated leaflet which we'll be glad to send you on receipt of the coupon and requested inclusures.

Capital Kitchen

Beer Does Wonders in Providing Just the Proper Flavor in Many Meat Dishes, Says Chef Krumnacker, of the Stevens Hotel in Chicago.

By Susan Mills.

The invariable remark of all the chefs is, "We will have better cooking, now that prohibition is over. There is nothing quite like the flavor of wine in cooking."

Philosophers and chefs seldom disagree.

This "new deal" in cooking is what the chefs have been hoping for. Now that repeal is well under way, good wines are used extensively in soups, meats, sauces and desserts; in almost every course of a meal.

KRUMNAKER.

Chef Krumnacker, of the Stevens Hotel, Chicago, approves the use of beer in cooking. He says:

"Good beer is essential in obtaining the proper flavor in many meat dishes. Some days we use several cases of beer to flavor special soups and meats, and scarcely a day passes that beer is not an ingredient in some recipe."

Aside from beer's excellent flavor in dishes, it is a distinctly healthful drink. Highly nutritive and unique in flavor, it adds much to a meal, whether used as an ingredient in a dish or as a beverage.

Beef Steak Flamande.

Take four sirloin butt steaks, six to eight ounces each, season with salt and pepper. Put three ounces of butter in a saute pan and heat. Place steaks in pan with one slice medium-sized onion and a sliced carrot to saute for about 8 minutes. When steaks are a nice brown color, remove. Stir one and one-half tablespoons of flour into the juice in the pan and simmer until it thickens. Add slowly three spoons of tomato puree, two and one-half bottles of beer and stir constantly. Now put steaks back in saute pan to simmer till done.

Can be served with any kind of vegetables or potatoes. For four persons.

Welsh Rarebit.

Put in a pan one pound Cheddar or good American cheese, cut in small dices, with a small pinch of dry mustard, one teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, one-third bottle of beer. Place on fire to melt. As soon as cheese is rather soft, stir well with a whip till the cheese is smooth and boiling. Have three serving dishes very hot. Place a piece of toast in each dish and pour the hot rarebit over.

Serve without delay. For three persons.

Chicks Intrude on Co-Eds.

Berkeley, Calif., March 3 (AP).—Sleepy-eyed co-eds huddled upstairs in the Theta Upsilon Sorority house at the University of California were told by Policeman H. F. Whaley to go back to bed and forget it. He reported the intruders downstairs were three white Leghorn chickens.

Brownstone Houses Come to Life

Style Pendulum's Swing Restores Furbelows in Decoration.

By Jo Ellen Maxson.

Good news for owners of brownstone houses. The Victorian period is with us again. No longer need those high rooms and long windows masquerade in unsuitable draperies and furniture. Decorators have gone back to the 90's for inspiration—frills, furbelows, whatnots and all that goes with it.

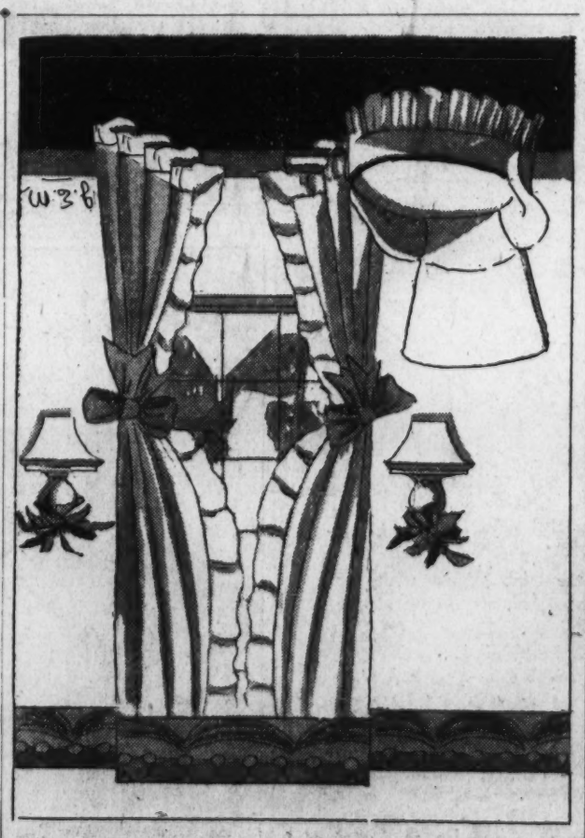
The double doors in the entrance hall of a charming old house are hung in white organdie. The curtains are shirred on rods, top and bottom, and tied in the center with large organdie bows.

One living room had windows and walls too high in proportion to the rest of the room. A deep paper border designed in architectural details solves this problem. The border is continuous around the room and is used effectively over the wide ruffled muslin curtains as a valance. This unbroken horizontal line makes the room appear much lower.

In another living room a graceful rosewood settee with an oval back and pleasing lines is upholstered in plaid gingham, a modern interpretation of Victorian. The gingham is in old reds, blues and cream. It is placed before a bow window, which is draped in wide ruffled white percale.

An old barrel-backed chair is brought to life in new upholstery of shiny eggplant sateen corded and fringed in white cable rope.

The fireplaces of this era, one of its best architectural features, are cleared of their former decorations and given emphasis with a few harmonizing ornaments. One mantel of white marble is made distinctive with a large mirror extending from the ceiling to the mantel.



It is screwed to the wall with glass rosettes. On the mantel itself are two low white china vases holding graceful trails of ivy.

Miss Maxson will be glad to give individual help in home decorating problems. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Itinerant Girls To View Capital Political Arena

74 in Traveling College Class From Missouri Due Saturday.

Seventy-four girl students from a Missouri college that is making educational history will arrive in Washington Saturday to include President Roosevelt and the personalities in Congress in their curricular study.

Since early Sunday, these young ladies from Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., have been absorbing modern history in New York. They have occupied their time with going to theaters, to an art show, to church, to a concert, riding buses, shopping, and the thousand-and-one other activities peculiar to youth's first visit to Gotham.

Their reactions to Manhattan have been as various as those of the three blind men describing the elephant to one another.

Witness their testimony regarding Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick's sermon, which they heard Sunday:

"It was a wonderful sermon," said Mildred Fifer, of Maryville, Mo. "It was about the soul."

"You ought to do the right thing," Louise Hammond, of Las Vegas, N. Mex., summarized it.

"You get out of life what you put in it," was the impression carried away by Mary Frank, of Kirksville, Mo.

"It was fun," said Jane Fifer, of Quincy, Ill. "Dr. Fosdick shook hands with us after the sermon."

When the girls arrive in Washington to draw equally varied deductions from their experiences in the Capital, they will be accompanied by Dr. James M. Wood, president of Stephens; Miss Vera Jurz, dean, and Miss Dorcas Lindsay, faculty member. They are coming by boat, by way of Norfolk, Va.

Alimony of $5 Weekly Spurned by Divorcee

Media, Pa., March 6 (AP).—To Mrs. Rebecca Lipsin, of Chester, $260 a year is not worth bothering with. Awarded a $5 weekly support order, she turned her back on the court and walked out.

"Keep your $5," she flung back over her shoulder. "If I can't have $9 I don't want any." The order was revoked.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

A correspondent wants to know why he has received contradictory advice about taking fats and nonpurgative oils for his gall bladder trouble. The question is one that is often asked. Physicians not infrequently are at a loss whether to advise their gall bladder cases to take nonpurgative oils freely or to refrain from eating them entirely. Sometimes they give advice one way and later change it and advise directly the other way.

This apparent indecision may not be indecision at all, and it rarely results from ignorance. Nonpurgative oils are excellent agents to cause the gall bladder to empty its bile. We have no better agents for that purpose. Therefore, if in a given case the objective is to cause the gall bladder to empty, fats and nonpurgative oils are given.

These are olive oil, butter, cream, eggs, fat meat and occasionally nuts. But oils and fats are hard to digest, and they throw tasks especially on the liver. If the liver is a good deal damaged—and it is very apt to be damaged if the gall bladder trouble has persisted long—the sufferer from gall bladder attacks heads into trouble when he eats freely of fats. In many cases of gall bladder trouble the sufferer remains free from symptoms so long as he eats very little cream, butter, oils, eggs, gravies and fat meats.

In cases of gallstones an attack of colic may follow a rich meal—one containing much highly seasoned food, rich soup, gravies and greasy foods. The fats start up the contractions of the gall bladder and a stone is pushed into the duct along with the bile.

For all of these reasons one of the most difficult questions that a doctor has to decide in gall bladder cases is whether to advise a diet that includes no eggs, cream, butter, fat meats, and rich foods, or to order directly one that contains plenty of cream, butter, and olive oil.

Chilblains.

Many correspondents have sent in suggestions for relief of chilblains. Here are some of them:

Mrs. H. E. H.: Put some powdered alum in warm water and bathe the feet thoroughly. One or two applications should cure and keep from getting frostbitten again.

A. N.: I lost chilblains years ago by substituting cotton hose for woolen ones in the winter time.

A. C.: Paint the feet with tincture of iodine after they have been bathed in warm water.

J. E. T.: When I was a boy I used to scratch my feet until they bled. One day my father, who was an engineer, came home with a recipe given him by his brakeman. He sent to the meat market for a lard pail filled with beef brine. He put this on the stove and heated it and had me soak my feet in it at the highest temperature I could stand. I do not remember whether this treatment was repeated, but I do know that I have never been bothered since. That was nearly 40 years ago. I keep my feet dry, but wear silk hose the year round.

What Today Means

"Pisces."

If March 7 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:45 to 10:45 a. m., from 1:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 7:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 11 p. m. until midnight.

If March 7 is your birthday, do not let the sense of overanxiety dominate you. It might be advisable not to make too great an effort to win the approval of relatives and friends. When we strive too hard to please and meet with the approbation of people and if they become conscious of our endeavor, they are very apt to take unfair advantage by trying to control not only our actions, but thoughts as well. Sometimes it pays to be independent. Selfish and self-centered individuals do not appreciate unselfish motives.

The child born on March 7, as it grows up, must learn not to be afraid to assert itself and express its opinion when the occasion arises. Bringing a child up to be afraid of offending grown people by an honest declaration of its sentiments is absolutely wrong. If we expect a child's mentality to develop, then it must be allowed to exercise its brain, and be permitted to give verbal utterance to the thoughts emanating from it. Children are too often regarded as strange little beings who have no right to self-expression, and must, without protest, endure the whims and injustices inconsiderate grown-ups often inflict upon them.

The woman born on March 7 should not tolerate any attempt of interference with her personal liberties by anyone. Having a very easygoing nature, not disposed to argue or quarrel, some people may misconstrue this as a desire on your part to cater to their idiocrasies, and feel you will not resent unreasonable demands. People of this type must have their erroneous impression corrected in no uncertain manner.

The man born on March 7, if he wishes to succeed, must cultivate the habit of being assertive. Dilatory tactics never won a battle. Today's business methods require a man to be right on his toes, ready to fight for his rights. If you have faith in your proposition or business, you do not have to be afraid of offending anyone if you refuse to allow them to reflect on it by aspersions. There is always someone who will tell you how much better a competitor's proposition is, but if called on to prove his assertion, usually shows he does not know very much about your own, or your competitor's business.

People born on March 7 will do well to realize that most of us are taken at the value we place upon ourselves. Politeness does not mean you have to defer to other people's ideas or opinions. Your mind is capable of forming its own conclusions, so do not have others do your thinking for you.

Successful people born on March 7: Stephen Hopkins, statesman. Goold Brown, grammarian. Thaddeus Dod, clergyman. Henry Draper, scientist. Luther Burbank, horticulturist. Edward P. Roe, clergyman and novelist.

Dessert Recipe

Steamed Chocolate Pudding.

2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons double-action baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
¼ teaspoon salt
1-3 cup butter or other shortening
½ cup sugar
1 egg, well beaten
3 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
1½ cups milk.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, soda and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter, add sugar gradually, and cream together thoroughly. Add egg and chocolate, beating until smooth. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat well after each addition. Turn into greased mold, cover and steam two hours. Serve hot with hard sauce. Garnish with whipped cream, if desired. Serves 10.

Soroptimist Party March 17.

An "Irish Sweepstakes" party will be given by the Soroptimist Club at Almas Temple at 6:30 p. m., March 17. Sadie Trapp and a committee are in charge of arrangements. The club will hold a luncheon at the Willard Hotel today.

I Ate What I Liked ... Fat Slipped Away

It was so easy—I did not go on a diet. I took no exercise. I did not weaken my body with drastic purgatives. Yet fat slipped away. Each day I felt myself growing lighter, more slender. Now my figure is lovely, graceful. And I never felt better in my life.

That, in brief, is what thousands who have reduced the Marmola way might well tell you. Four times a day they take a little tablet containing the right quantity of a world-famous corrective for abnormal obesity.—A corrective prescribed by physicians everywhere and acknowledged to be the most effective known.

Since 1907, more than 20 million packages of Marmola have been purchased. Could any better recommendation be had?

Today—buy a package of Marmola, and start at once. Soon you will experience Marmola's benefits. When you have gone far enough, stop taking Marmola. And you will bless the day you first discovered this marvelous reducing agent!

4 MARMOLA A DAY TAKES FAT AWAY

Beggars All

By Katharine Newlin Burt.

The Story Thus Far.

Rafe Courvoisier, last heir of an impoverished Southern family, is released from a secret outlaw rendezvous by Madrone, on his promise to obey Madrone's orders, always written in a unique green ink. He becomes a boatman at Candle Island, his old home, now owned by Hortense Kendall. She is vaguely in love with Rafe, but he gives her no encouragement, because he considers himself Madrone's slave. He notices that her guardian, Harmon Jay, writes to her in green ink. With Jay's encouragement, the girl becomes engaged to Randal Crewe. Rafe falls into the hands of Strego, Madrone's rival. The boatman is rescued by Torkwist, a Madrone gunman, who is leading a mutiny against his chief. On his return, Rafe finds Madrone in his cabin.

Rafe started toward his bedroom door, paused, and looked down at Madrone. He took his courage in both hands and spoke measuredly.

"If you expect me to help you in your plans here in Candle Island, I must have your confidence, Madrone."

Madrone, very much in Hortense's fashion, shook his finger and laughed. "So you are to make conditions. Now you are on your own ground, eh? Remember, it is not your ground any longer. It is not like the old days. I am not incapable of minding my own business and even yours, Courvoisier. Wait where you are." He trod lightly over to Rafe and, smiling into his eyes, felt him carefully and thoroughly. "No gats, eh? And none in the house. I have made sure of that. It was not gat-courage, then, eh? Now, go to bed."

Madrone brought the tea and some biscuits. Rafe ate and drank. The relief of this vital, seemingly protective presence was inexpressible. Madrone sat down presently with his own cup of tea beside Rafe's bed.

"Now, I would like to tell you that I am so far pleased with what you've done."

"I've done nothing for you. I wasn't even sure"—Rafe spoke sullenly—"that Jay was your man."

"No. No. I understand that. I did not want you to be sure. He has been stupid. I pay him. But he doesn't know what it's all about. He's just scared."

"I came here," Rafe said under an obscure impulse to restore his own pride, to justify himself, "to be a boatman. Under a man called Rondo, whom I think you must know rather well. That's all I've been here—Rondo's boatman."

"Yes. Yes. That's to the good. I did not know about the boatman business, but it worked out very good for us all. Now, I wish only to reassure you of my intentions. St! Someone is coming. You will have to go out. I can keep quiet in here. Look who it is. Quick. Through the window."

Rafe looked. It was Hortense. She had come down in a canoe and was now walking toward the cabin.

Rafe would have shouted to her to go back, he would have driven her away with a desperate warning gesture, but Madrone guessing this intention pounced. He caught Rafe's weakened body in a vice-like grip and smothered his speech with one hand.

Chapter XX.

"Listen, boy! There is no harm coming to this lady. She is safe from me. Outside there, you don't know how close, is Torwkist. Strego maybe. Not so safe. Let her come in. See, I put my gun into your pocket. Now you will believe me, sure."

It was done and Rafe was freed. Hortense had reached the porch.

"Rafe! Are you there?"

He went past Madrone, his hand on the gun inside his pocket, opened the bedroom door, and closed it behind him before he answered her.

"I'm here. Won't you come in?" he said.

He was thinking, "Madrone is right. She's safer inside with me, as long as I'm armed, than she might be outside there." Hortense had already opened the door and crossed its threshold.

"Where have you been?" She was direct and imperious as ever, but looked white with an unusual weary pallor. "I sent Rondo down this morning when you didn't come to me. I was afraid you might be sick, but he brought word that you'd gone somewhere in your boat. But, Rafe, there is something wrong, really. You look strange—your face—it's blistered."

"I went swamp exploring and got chewed up by mosquitoes, that's all."

Hortense Shakes His Arm.

She came up very close in her unself-conscious and disturbing fashion. His eyes fell. He was afraid to let her see the spirit leaping in them. She gave his arm a little shake. "Something has happened, but you won't tell me, I suppose. It's always like this. I'm in the dark, ignorant, alone." Her eyes were wet.

"Not alone," he muttered. Her suffering hurt him.

"Who is with me? I have to grope my way. I make mistakes and then it is too late. I am used by people for their own ends."

"Have you made a mistake, Hortense?" he asked softly. His heart was pounding.

"Randal came back last night from a visit down here with you. The rest had gone. He was in haste to get my promise to marry him. He would not go without his answer. And meanwhile Mr. Jay had been interviewing some one, Rondo or Maddalena or Tine, and had thought things over. He came in and somehow it was all arranged. It was like a dream. Now, I am really engaged to be married. Randal has gone to tell every one. Mr. Jay is paying off his debts, ordering things that he will need, giving him carte blanche. The engagement will be announced at once." Her eyes were dark and warm, not with sympathy, but with some stronger and more painful feeling. Again she came close to him. "Tell me, Rafe, it's too late to change now, but—am I doing right?"

Calls Him Best Friend.

"Why is it too late to change?" he demanded.

Hortense began to walk up and down.

"I felt that I must see you. You were my first friend in all the world. We quarrel. We are angry. But you are my friend. It is queer how sure I am of that. Mr. Jay, Maddalena, Rondo, yes, and Tine Dare—they are all telling me that it's done. Settled. For life. That means that I am to go through with this marriage. When Mr. Jay tells me that I must, it is true, Rafe. I learned that long ago. There's a sort of secret power that is not just Harmon Jay. I always knew that I must marry or not marry by their will. I'm not of age yet, you see, and even if I were my money can not come into my own use until I'm married—with Mr. Jay's consent. He doesn't like me. I think he would like to get me out of the way. He will get some reward and he'll be free. He isn't free now. None of us is free. If I didn't obey, I'd be turned out of doors. Nobody cares, Rafe. Perhaps there is something about me that nobody can love. That's why I feel that I must make myself useful, be some one's salvation. Then, perhaps, I will be loved."

Again she was beside him, her eyes caught his and fought to hold them. "Don't look away from me, Rafe"—her hands were on his arms. "Look at me. Answer me. Do you want me to marry Randal Crewe?"

"What business is it," he demanded breathlessly, "of mine?"

"Do you want me to marry Randal Crewe?"

Rakish Men Who Doted on Being Reformed Broke Hearts in Bertha Clay Fiction

Sheltered Life for Women Still Rule in Many Schools

While College Men May Do as They Please Girls Are Limited as to Dates, and Are Watched by Chaperones.

"Collegiate, collegiate, oh yes, we are collegiate," went the gay and saucy tune of a few seasons ago.

"What does collegiate mean, anyway?" the curious asked, wondering what strange creatures inhabit college campuses.

Recent announcement that Vassar College had lifted its ban on smoking in dormitory rooms immediately brings the query as to what comparable schools are doing.

A survey reveals facts that are surprising in this feminist age. Women in the world may be crying for equal rights and getting them. They may hold important executive positions and prove their ability to work side by side with men. But for their daughters they still insist upon a sheltered upbringing. That is the deduction one must make after a survey into the rules and regulations which hold in exclusive schools in the East.

Men's Code Liberal.

Young college blades are permitted the sowing of a certain amount of harmless wild oats, in the form of occasional late hours, smoking and drinking, within the rules of the code. But in nearly every instance, schools are exercising an almost Victorian supervision of girlhood.

The penalty for violation of the dormitory code for girl students is severe, and promptly enforced. One school recently returned to their homes two girls who failed to return from a dance within the expected time.

Washington schools strike a nice balance between liberality and conservatism in their regulations. At Holton Arms, for instance, students may have their Saturday afternoons unchaperoned for matinees and shopping, providing they are back at the school by 5:30 p. m. They may leave the campus for three week-ends during the year, if they have their parents' consent and a letter from the persons they plan to visit. They may receive callers named on a list approved by their parents, and accept week-end evening engagements from persons thus listed, with a chaperone included.

The line is usually drawn against social activity on school-day nights, however, because it is felt too active participation in outside affairs will interfere with classroom work. Smoking is usually prohibited altogether.

Coed Schools More Lenient.

Even in coeducational institutions, the double standard of regulations prevails. In the latter institutions, however, rules governing women students' conduct is more lenient than in the private schools.

Maryland University rules are drawn up by student government officials. They provide that women must be in dormitories at nightfall. The hour changes as the day lengthens. A girl is permitted a specified number of "late dates" during the school year—the number of such privileges depending upon her scholastic standing and her classification. Other rules concern the hours for return from various dances, and certain house rules necessary to provide time for study. Chaperones are required only at dances.

George Washington University alone makes no discriminations in its rules regarding men and women. The same smoking rules apply to both. The only rules about dances are that they shall stop at midnight on Saturday nights.

"We are very proud of the fact that at George Washington the women are neither coddled nor ignored," said Mr. Vinnie G. Barrows, dean of women. "They are a part of our college community, and enter wholeheartedly into its life. We feel that this system has been most successful."

Birth Rate in Chicago Lowest in 20 Years

Chicago, March 6 (U.P.).—Chicago's birth rate has touched an all-time Twentieth century low, Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, reported today.

There were only 13 births per thousand last year, less than half the 26.3 ration in 1901. The total of 53,129 births last year was the lowest in 13 years despite a steady increase in population.

But perhaps if you could realize how much I need your help in my holy work, how much more good I could accomplish in the world if you were with me, you might listen, without steeling yourself against me, as you have so long done. Late 80s Were Lush Years for Heroines Who Saved Love From Jill-Flirts in Tear-Jerking Romances

Paper-Back Novel Formula of Angelic Flower Girl Who Rescued Opulent But Misguided Dandy From Clutches of "That Woman"—and Married Him Herself—Held Sway Over Literature Market for Decade—Nellie Bly Inaugurated New Phase.

What kind of men do women love—in books? The stacks of paper-backed best sellers in the rare book room of the Library of Congress reveal the answer. They tell of the dashing desperadoes, the mustachioed villains, the blithe gallants and the fascinating rakes that women of successive eras have adored.

The following article is the third in a series depicting the changing tastes in heroes.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Charming men of today are invariably described by their feminine admirers as "sweet." No such appellation was bestowed upon them in the 80s. The male idol of that decade, as pictured in the best sellers of the era, was a high-handed and often scheming debauchee who was eventually reformed by the golden-haired heroine. Bertha M. Clay cut the pattern, and Laura Jean Libbey further developed it.

The name of Bertha M. Clay carries magic to mothers and grandmothers of today who remember secretly poring over the adventures of Octavia, Vanna Lee and others of the much-harassed Clay beauties. But just who Bertha M. Clay was—man or woman—has long been a matter of debate.

"A Dead Heart," introduced Bertha to the public. This was a romance published in the Seaside Library, a series printed in pocket-edition size and sold weekly at 10 cents a copy. The novel was almost an overnight sensation in the best seller world. It was hailed as the most emotional romance of a decade that had made much of emotion.

Calamity-Proof Damsel.

The put-upon heroine of "A Dead Heart" was ideally suited to the feminine taste of the 80's. Emerging from calamity after calamity, she escaped unscathed, presumably because she resisted temptation and remained chaste. The ending, of course, was happy.

Just who first hit upon "Bertha M. Clay" as a pseudonym has never been clearly established. Its origin must have been indefinite even back in the 80's, for by 1885 every thriving publisher had one or two authors writing by the formula and signing the name Bertha M. Clay. The formula, an easy one to master, ran as follows.

1. A golden-haired beauty whose very presence influenced her companions "for the best."

2. An attractive but weak young man who, quivering on the brink of destruction, needed reforming.

3. A "proud couquette" whose virtue was dobutful.

Given these ingredients, the formula was worked out in this fashion: "The heroine was usually of poor family and forced to support herself either by selling flowers or sewing. Eventually she came in contact with a rich man—probably an earl or a baronet, at worst—who was being drawn into the clutches of the proud coquette. No sooner had he met the heroine, however, than the reforming process started. And by the last chapter, he was securely won by force of his sweetheart's purity, and saved from a "life of sin."

Most novels of this type are accredited to a woman, Mrs. Braeme, who also wrote under a number of other pseudonyms. Some, however, were written by men who turned out boy's books between times. In fact, there is proof that at least eight writers signed their work "Bertha M. Clay." (As late as 1922, Frederick van Rensselaer Dey shot himself in the Hotel Broztell in New York. He had written over 20 stories in the 80's and 90's under the name of Bertha M. Clay.)

Appealing though they were, these pure-souled heroines and handsome and dissolute heroes of the Clay novels, none of them ever stepped out of type to become a living literary idol. That was reserved for St. Elmo—the sardonic and sophisticated rake who was Augusta M. Evans' gift to several generations of romantically minded women.

Comatose Bridal Scene.

Mrs. Evans' "St. Elmo," first published in 1866, launched into the best-seller class more than a decade after it was written, because it coincided with the fiction formula of the 80's as perfectly as if it had been written by Bertha M. Clay.

Edna Earl was the angelic maid who eventually reclaimed St. Elmo to the path of virtue, and even inspired him to enter the ministry. However, the reformation must have left the lovely Edna exhausted, for we learn that, during the marriage ceremony:

Mr. Murray felt her lean more heavily against him, and turning to take her in his arms, he saw that her eyelashes had fallen on her cheeks—she had lost all consciousness of what was passing."

Two hours later she recovered in time for the book to end happily as "the light faded slowly in the West."

Laura Stirs Things Up.

The old fiction formula was becoming a little jaded when Laura Jean made her debut in the early 90s. Her "Flirtations of a Beauty; Or, Summer's Romance at Newport,'" was advertised as being "a fascinating story of a lovely belle's adventure." It was woven about an innocent heroine, Corabel, who was beloved of the stalwart Paul Castleton until Beatrix Valentine, a cold-hearted coquette, appeared on the scene.

Being a man of honor, Paul states his position at once in these words:

"I love you Trixy but, alas, I am engaged to another."

While these sentimental novels were being ground out, one publisher, Harold Munro, tried to break the fiction mold. He began to print a series called the "Family Story Paper," whose star writer was Nellie Bly. Arriving in New York unknown and inexperienced, Nellie had tried to obtain a position on a newspaper. One daily offered her a place on condition that she would feign insanity, have herself committed to the madhouse on Blackwell's Island and write her experiences.

Nellie Bly Goes Adventurous.

Later she was engaged by Munro at the largest salary ever paid a woman contributor to a weekly literary paper.

There is no way to judge how much further writers might have gone in their efforts to convert erring men and exalt virtue, if the "New Woman" had not made her appearance. Naturally, a woman with such "advanced ideas" would not long be contented with the fiction of the 80's and the earlier 90's. She was being built up for great endeavors, and her reading had to keep pace. It did; and as a result, the heroine who was strong in virtue but weak in health ceased to be popular and became a literary curiosity.

Spanish Diplomat Retraces Family's Role in History.

By Mildred Reed Bundy.

The Ambassador was absent. He was sorry—was Don Luis M de Yrujo, Minister-Counselor from Spain, that the Ambassador was out of the city. It took time to convince Diplomat Yrujo that it was he, and not the Ambassador, who was wanted this time.

Over his carved desk in the Spanish chancery—the carving on the desk being modern, not antique, according to its owner's admission—Don Luis M. de Yrujo answered questions about his great-grandfather, the Marquis of Casa Yrujo, who was Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the United States in the time of George Washington. Contemporary Minister-Counselor Yrujo, wearing a business suit, told of the portraits of his ancestor, which show the Minister Yrujo of the Georgian era wearing velvets, embroideries and flowing lace. One such portrait hangs in the Washington home of Minister Yrujo in Woodley lane; another hangs in the ancestral home in Spain, and still another in Independence Hall, Philadelphia.

A beautiful American belle of early history, Sara McKean, daughter of Gov. McKean, of Pennsylvania, was the wife of the first Yrujo to be sent from Spain to the United States. But all was not romance in the first Yrujo's career, according to his great-grandson, and according to legal and historical records of that early Spanish diplomat. In Volume IV of the International Law Digest, which the modern Yrujo took from the bookshelf in his office, there is much about the "Yrujo case," showing that the Marquis' diplomacy was sharply criticized in dealings with trade relations and revenue laws affecting countries in Spanish territory.

Days are brightening in Spain, despite the small country's share in the world-wide unemployment and the confusion that atended the birth of the new government. Minister-Counselor Don Luis M. de Yrujo feels optimistic for the republic. "My people are fighting for the things they want—fighting hot-headedly, and not without bloodshed—not changing their country through government alone, as are Americans," he said.

Women in politics are not new in Spain, but are much more numerous since the overthrow of the monarchy, Minister Counselor Yrujo explained. The Spanish cortes of 400 dipudados contains approximately 25 women, he said, many of them chosen within the last two years. The agrarian problem and the "planned economy" before the Spanish state are as important as are their counterparts in the American New Deal.

Cocktails so universal in America are scarcely known in Spain, except in cosmopolitan hotels, according to Minister Counselor Yrujo.

The box of squirming kittens tucked under the blue-coated arm of the law on downtown thirteenth street yesterday must have come to no cruel end, for no record has been made of their imprisonment, nor is anything known of them in the city's animal pound. Policemen chuckled and denied any knowledge of the baby cats, and the poundmaster's earnest search brought to light no recent registration of kittens so small. If the Potomac could only speak and likewise deny knowledge of the policeman's squirming burden!

He may be 25 years old,—that small boyish, Mexican artist, Robert Cueva del Rio, who has just finished the fresco for the walls of the staircase at the Mexican embassy—but no one thinks him to be much younger. Youthful looking or not, this artist's career is well on its way. His fresco will live through years on the walls of his country's embassy, while his other work is selling sensationally well in special exhibits in New York City.

The trying part of his art on the vast stairway fresco, Artist del Rio said, was in knowing that no mark of the brush once applied could be changed. He applied indelible mineral paint on wet plaster and had need to be sure of every stroke. Marvels of slow, sure accurate work, then, are the annual Mexican feasts of the fruits and flowers, subject of the greater part of the fresco work.

When he was but 13 years old Del Rio was doing cartoons for the Mexican newspaper, Excelsior, thereby earning money for study of painting at night. The completion of the fresco in the embassy has required about a year of close application. So Roberto Cueva del Rio is going to Mexico this month for a rest before completing the colorful walls for the upper flights of the stairway. Mexico in March is a proper place to be, if the glowing responsive look in the artist's black eyes is indicative when he said "Mexico is warm—nice—heavenly—now."

Play Parties Back in Favor

New Leisure Induces Many to Return to Parlor Pursuits.

"Games are going modern by being old-fashioned," according to Miss Eleanor Brady of the Girl Scouts, who helped direct games at the third meeting of the fifth annual Play Institute last night in the gymnasium of Wilson Teachers College.

"Games can be divided into three groups," said Miss Brady. "There are the active, lively ones for parties and social groups, quiet, fireside games for family groups, and those that have a teaching angle.

"The new games this year are the same old ones with a few trimmings. There is no doubt that games are taking a more and more important place in social life. The popularity of backgammon and anagrams in the last few years have proved that."

Old and New Games.

Miss Brady thinks that the outstanding difference in old and new games is that the modern ones are better organized. In other words, that Americans are beginning to learn to play.

"People are staying home more and having more leisure time." She explained. "This creates a greater necessity for amusing entertainment. Evenings find many family groups gathered around a game table for hours that used to be spent outside the home.

"The interest that is being taken in designing game rooms in the basements or attics is significant that games are becoming a very real part of American family life.

Psychology of Games.

"As for adults," smiled Miss Brady, "the older people get, the younger they are when it comes to playing games. At a party, they like to start the evening off with a game that everyone plays rather than one that keeps just two or three in the spotlight.

"There is a definite psychology involved in playing games. Sometimes an entire evening which has been carefully planned has to be reorganized after a quick measuring up of the personalities that have been grouped together. But that is taking games quite seriously," said Miss Gardner smiling again, "and learning how to play is our present aim."

Wife's Right to Nag Established by Court

Philadelphia, March 6 (AP).—Nagging by a wife is no grounds for divorce. Judge Trexler of the Superior Court so ruled in setting aside the decree awarded Nicola Manzi, bank teller of Wayne.

The judge held that Manzi's wife would have to do more than nag to justify the divorce.

Psychologist Scorns Bugaboo Middle-Aged Folk Can't Study

Columbia, Mo., March 6.—Adults with new leisure on their hands need not hesitate to start to school again fearing they are "too old to learn."

Recent psychological research has shown that a person of 50 can learn about as well as a child of 14, according to Dr. John A. McGeoch, head of the department of phychology of the University of Missouri.

"It is a popular fallacy," said Dr. McGeoch, "that early childhood is the halcyon period of memory and learning. Recent investigations conducted in several separate laboratories have shown that performance at learning remains at a very high level from about 18 through the 20's and into the 30's, and from that point onward shows a very slow decline into the late 50's.

"The decline in learning ability from the 30's is very slow. It may be entirely counteracted by continued practice in learning, such as occurs in the practice of one's profession or business. In the fields of work at which one continues to practice, there is good reason to believe that ability to learn may remain as high as it was in the 20's until the individual is very old.

Marriage Aid Plans Pushed by Hitler

Loans for Engaged Couples Will be Expanded.

Berlin, March 6 (U.P.).—The government's marriage-stimulation loan plan, so effective that it had to be suspended, will be recommenced on even a larger scale April 1, it was revealed today,

The new budget will contain provision for 250,000 long term loans to engaged couples who have not the savings to set themselves up in homes. In six months after its inauguration, the first phase of the plan resulted in loans to 183,000 couples, and last month, when the number passed 200,000 the Government halted its grants.

The home making loans have given stimulus to furniture, kitchenware and electrical apparatus industries.

Medicine Needs More Women, Doctor Asserts

Have Natural Aptitude in Practice, Cancer Specialist Says.

Baltimore, March 6 (AP).—More women are needed in the practice of medicine, Dr. Joseph Colt Bloodgood, cancer specialist, told the Goucher College student body today.

"Woman was once considered an inferior, but now that we've educated her she may prove a superior being," Dr. Bloodgood said.

"I feel confident that we need, in all the civilized countries a larger number of women fundamentally trained in the medical sciences, not only in the specialties and general practices, but in laboratory positions, research work, and in the public health."

Women, Dr. Bloodgood said, have a maternal instinct that naturally makes them better fitted for preventive medicine.

"My experience teaches me that women are taking to preventive medicine quicker than men. The greatest protection against disease today is the continuous care of the medical and dental profession, and we need more of the best trained women physicians to take their place in this preventive effort."

Discussing the danger of cancer, Dr. Bloodgood said only 10 per cent of mothers have adequate protection because of lack of examination and general knowledge. "The women," he said, "ultimately should have a great deal to do with the prevention of cancer in women, and the establishing of preventive measures from the prenatal stage."

"If we educate mothers to put themselves under the continuous care of the medical and dental profession, and so educate the medical and dental profession to meet these demands, few, if any, women will die of cancer of the cervix, of the breast, of the mouth, or of the skin.

No beautiful woman has cancer of the skin because she pays immediate attention to every skin blemish, Dr. Bloodgood said.

Here's how women look in action playing lacrosse, which has spread to this country from England and which is increasing rapidly in popularity. Students of the New Jersey State College for Women at Brunswick, N. J., are shown above in a scrimmage during a fast and furious game in the college athletic field.

Lacrosse Stars To Teach Skill

English Women Will Give Summer Instruction in America.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

Lacrosse, spreading swiftly as a favorite sport among American sportswomen, will have the brevet of foreign competition during March.

The first English women's lacrosse team to tour this country will play a series of games here in March and April, and will hold day-long coaching periods for American club, college and schoo! players.

Women's lacrosse dates back officially only three years in this country. But enthusiasm and technical skill have grown side by side.

The centers of matches and coaching during the English visit will be Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore, New York, and Greenwich, Conn.

England's two ranking lacrosse players, Katherine Lockly and M. O. Newbold, will lead the touring team. Miss Lockly is all-time captain of the all-English lacrosse team. The English players will give lectures and informal talks, which the exhibition matches will illustrate.

American women's lacrosse, like field hockey, is modeled on the English pattern. Thus the coming of the English team will mean a practical illustration of lacrosse at its best, and likely a resultant boom in the sport in this country.

Famous Play Adds New Records to Already Long List—a Bow to David Warfield

"Barretts" An Extraordinary Road Property

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

Katharine Cornell will appear as Elizabeth Barrett in Rudolf Besier's play of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" for the 600th time in the United States in the Shubert Theater, Kansas City, Mo., at tomorrow's matinee. Miss Cornell first acted this role in the Hanna Theater, Cleveland, Ohio, on Thursday night, January 29, 1931.

While this column is not in any sense dedicated to the celebration of Miss Cornell and her accomplishments beyond the extent to which they may constitute interesting contributions to the current news of the theater, so long as both continue to make modern stage history and the combination of star and vehicle persists in establishing record after record at the box office, it seems probable that the progress of Miss Cornell and her repertoire across the country and back will inevitably be set down here from time to time, if not oftener.

New Distinctions.

Here, then, are some of the latest achievements of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" as a source of concrete evidence that "the road" is not dead and that love of the finer things of the drama still flourishes in the hinterland.

In Dallas, Tex., the play completely sold out one full week before the actress arrived in the city. In Austin the theater was sold out the first day the tickets were placed on sale. Ninety extra chairs were placed in the auditorium and 60 people stood through the performance. In Fort Worth the house was sold out ten days in advance and an extra matinee sold out three hours after it was announced.

Oklahoma City was sold out two weeks before the date of the production and an extra matinee was sold out ten days before Miss Cornell reached the city.

Vitagraph, Inc., has issued cards for the Warner Brothers National Trade Exhibit for 1934—whatever that may be, precisely—which will be held in the Ambassador Theater today, beginning at 10 a. m. Arrangements are stated to have been made for the screening of "As the Earth Turns," "Gambling Lady," "Journal of a Crime," and "Wonder Bar." These would be, in the order named, the vehicle which will introduce Donald Woods, former leading man of the National Theater Players, to the screen; Barbara Stanwyck's latest stellar subject, Ruth Chatterton's new picture and the picturization of Al Jolson's stage hit, in which the star is supported by Dick Powell, Kay Francis and a large and distinguished ensemble. All these in a row, incidentally, will make a fair day's screening.

Concerning Miss Dane.

Speaking of Katherine Cornell, as we were a moment ago, and of Miss Clemence Dane, as we were in this space yesterday, Miss Dane, English novelist and playwright, who is making a lecture tour of America, traveled from Dallas to Houston, Tex., recently in order to see Miss Cornell in "Romeo and Juliet," Shaw's "Candida" and "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," which comprise her season's repertoire, and then accompanied the actress to Waco, where Miss Cornell appeared at the Baylor University, which has the largest Browning collection in the world.

Though Miss Cornell has acted in Miss Dane's "A Bill of Divorcement," "Will Shakespeare" and "The Way Things Happen" and may appear in her "Wild Decembers," Miss Dane had only seen her previously in "Lucrece," one of the less happy of Miss Cornell's recent experiences in the theater.

Miss Dane's "Wild Decembers," by the way, is the play based on the lives of the Brontes which has been on the fire, in a manner of speaking, for many months and now bids fair to be beaten to the boards by Master Dan Totheroh's "Moor Born," a drama dealing, as yesterday remarked, with the same subject matter.

Mr. Jack Hurford, formerly assistant house manager of the Fox Theater in this city and now serving in a similar capacity out in Detroit, was a visitor in the Capital over the week-end—or some small part of it—leaving for his appointed tasks in the Michigan metropolis last night. Rumors are being bruited about that a certain clever young impersonator, appearing at a popular night club in association with Ken Murray, constituted the "official business" that necessitated Jack's presence in his former haunts on the flying visit, but that, of course, is not to be repeated!

Drama Guild's Next.

Do you know why—and there seems to be scant reason why you should—the design for the Lillavar-Antoltat Railroad bridge never got any further than the cross-section of the first pillar? Well, it was because the young engineer fell in love with an actress. Just what happened after that is the prime reason a trip to Wardman Park Theater will be in order on either Friday or Saturday night, March 23 or 23.

The whole amusing business is explained in "I Love An Actress," which Leszla Fudor wrote and the Drama Guild of Washington is to present as its fourth production of the current season, under the competent direction of Denis E. Connell.

Importantly cast in "I Love an Actress" will be Virginia Rand, Marvin Beers, Harold Weinberger, Howard Frederick, Mrs. Ruth Perrott, Grace Peters Johnson, Thomas Matthew Cahill, Frank Jamison, James Otis Porter, Mrs. Jeanne Bateman, Wayne Brown, Roy Bateman, George Furness and John L. Stuart.

The known capability of this group of local Thespians is one more eloquent argument on the side of a real Little Theater for Washington.

As one ponders the state of the theater and the changes that from time to time manifest themselves in the points of view of those concerned with fostering the motion picture as a source of mass entertainment, it is inescapable that now and again the entrepreneurs exactly reverse themselves. For instance, it was not so long ago when a dramatic editor had to don false whiskers, trick hats and otherwise disguise himself—and then walk in backwards so they would think he was coming out—to gain access to a preview of a feature picture. It was the managerial thought then that a picture could only be properly appraised when accorded the benefit of audience reaction. Nowadays, the dramatic desks are bidden to previews in such rapid succession that there remains little time for anything else. All very interesting, but just a trifle baffling. What, all of a sudden, has become of the priceless value of audience reaction? Or didn't it ever have any?

Hurrah For Harvard!

The Hasty Pudding Club of Harvard University, one learns with some flutter of interest, will present its eighty-eighth annual spring production, a musical extravaganza entitled, "Hades! The Ladies!" the night of April 4 in the Belasco Theater.

The cast will be headed by Robert Breckenbridge, '34, of Washington, D. C.; Charles Sedgewick, '34; Arthur M. Jones, '35; Frank Johnson, '35, and Waters Kellog, '34. Gentlemen of the chorus, in some cases "chorines," will include Barrett Wendall, '36; Robert S. Hepburn, '35, brother of the renowned Katherine Hepburn of both stage and screen, and Theodore Roosevelt, 3d, son of the former Gov. Gen. of the Philippines and grandson of the illustrious T. R.

The performance in the Belasco will be followed by a Hasty Pudding Club "cabaret" at the Sulgrave Club.

Capital One of Few.

The National Capital is being included among the cities on this veteran theatrical organization's tour for the first time in several years. Other performances will be given in New York, Hot Springs, Va., and Providence, R. I.

Ardent Harvard alumni submit the further information that Charles Haas, William Howard, James Parton and Francis D. Moor, who also is president of the Harvard Lampoon, have written the book of "Hades! The Ladies" and that Mr. Moore and E. E. Stowell are responsible for the music.

The production is being supervised—this business must come to an end shortly—by Alistaire Cooke, a young Englishman, who is studying and lecturing at the university; the chorus routines and specialty dances are under the direction of William Holbrook, well-known Broadway coach.

So now you know.

Of all distinguished stars of the theater to be inadvertently omitted from the casual lists published in our Sabbath lead in the dramatic department of The Post, can you imagine David Warfield as the one to be so unintentionally slighted? Neither can I.

When Warfield played the Belasco in "The Music Master" he established box-office records that may never yet have been equaled, for all I know. His long career was thickly punctuated with Washington triumphs. Yet, for some inexplicable reason, his name just did not pop into mind last Thursday when Sunday's lead was being written.

The Warfield career, it may be said in passing, marked another instance of the late David Belasco's uncanny discernment in perceiving the field of an actor's greatest usefulness. Back in the old days, Dave Warfield was playing low-comedy Hebrew parts with Weber and Fields at their Music Hall on West Twenty-ninth street in New York, at the same time George Sidney was fulfilling a similar function with Ward and Vokes on the road. It was Belasco who recognized the pathos of the Warfield voice and made it his major stock in trade.

"And Out Like a Lion!"

This may be spring, but don't let March fool you!

A Couple of Tough Young Muggers!

Joe Cook Puts Gloom on Pan In Laugh Riot

"Hold Your Horses" Sure Cure for Blues at the National.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Dancing a little, juggling a little, revealing a little more of his weird faculty for inventing complicated devices to make life a little more miserable for the patient and long-suffering Mr. Dave Chasen and performing his customary miracles of ambiguity with the English language, Joe Cook, the pride of Evansville, Ind., and Lake Hopatcong, N. J., returned to Washington last night and was tumultuously welcomed by a considerable assemblage of addicts who find it difficult to shake off the pleasant hypnosis of his hilarious clowning.

"Hold Your Horses" is neither the best nor the wittiest of the tuneful charades Mr. Cook has brought to the National Theater from time to time, but it is easily the swiftest, noisiest and most nonsensical. Combined with its explosive humors, however, are touches of sheerest beauty contributed to both acts by Harriet Hoctor, who, with Patricia Bowman, preserves to the modern stage something of the Terpsichorean grace and artistry that was lent it in the earlier era by Anna Pavlowa and Adeline Genee. There are one or two lilting songs, too, in the score and, by placing the action of the two acts at about the turn of the century, some quaint effects in costuming and settings are made possible, certain aspects of the former serving as reminders that the so-called "gay nineties" were not quite so chaste as their reputed Victorianism might suggest.

Cabby for Mayor.

The events about which "Hold Your Horses" revolves are those attending a mayoralty election in New York City about the year 1900. As part of a political trick, Broadway Joe, a cabby whose habitual stand is in front of Rector's swanky restaurant, is run for the office of mayor. By a slight mental confusion characteristic of his intellectual processes, he conceives himself to be his opponent, Mr. McGillicuddy, and by making no end of ardent speeches in Mr. McGillicuddy's behalf manages to get himself elected! That will give you a rough idea of the sound basis of logic and integrity upon which "Hold Your Horses" is founded.

The campaign is not by any means permitted to bog down the gayer movements of a plot that involves two or three minor love affairs, the career of a horizontal pugilist, the gay doings in and out of Rectors' Nigger Mike's, on the Bowery, Coney Island and a flea circus, to mention only a few of the subjects of the piece's 21 scenes, so those interested in such things in the Capital may not look to this particular whimsy for any perfection of technique in the conduct of governmental enterprises. For a perfected technique in inspired lunacy it might serve nicely as a model of unimpeachable supremacy.

Spontaneous Fun.

The production makes no pretensions in the direction of pictorial grandeur, nor do book and lyrics lay claim to any appreciable degree of delicacy, coherence or finesse. The whole spontaneous business, nevertheless, does add up to an amusing and utterly inconsequential evening of roughhouse fun in the theater.

Mr. Cook, happily, is Mr. Cook—to this commentator one of the most delightful zanies the contemporary theater can boast. It is necessary for solicitious attendants always to rescue this typewriter from the undignified ecstasy of rolling in the aisles whenever the pontifical Mr. Cook is on the stage.

But in "Hold Your Horses" Mr. Cook is not by any means the whole show. He is surrounded by a large group of competent buffoons who take over the burden of rocking the customers at frequent and protracted intervals. Among the foremost of these, of course, is Mr. Chasen, the world's greatest stooge, who in his present assignment is subjected to more than the ordinary indignities usually allotted him. Others embrace Tom Patricola, whose dancing is not given enough play by half; Jerry Norris, who does most of the barytoning; Jack Anthony and Jerry Rogers, as two ubiquitious wop members of the black mustache gang of cutthroats; the veteran George Schiller, who has been a fixture in musical comedy for more than one generation now, and many more of the masculine persuasion.

The Diverting Distaff.

Among the feminine members of the cast, June O'Dea, as an ingenuous stowaway from Cripple Creek, who come to town in Joe's handsome hansom cab that converts itself into "old 999" with a little timely stoking; Dorothy Dare, sharing most of Master Patricola's songs and dances; Jerry Luger, Love Sallis and numerous others do their full share in the matter of pep, pulchritude and periphery.

The chorus, if not of Ziegfeldian beauty, still is personable, hard working and not too hard on the eyes. Many of the musical numbers in which they appear have long been familiar to those with an ear for popular tunes. And that plump, platinum blonde——

For those in quest of art, "Hold Your Horses" won't do. If the tonic of deep-seated laughter is what you are after, it is precisely what the doctor ordered.

Hearing Scheduled In Killing of Wife

Child Witness to Tragedy Gives Statement.

Danville, Va., March 6 (Spl.).—John Will Boaz will be given a preliminary hearing at Chatham Friday on a charge of killing his 22-year-old wife, Mary, Saturday night at his Flippens Mill home.

Commonwealth's Attorney Joseph Whitehead, of Pittsylvania County, today said the statement of a 7-year-old son, a witness to the tragedy, was important.

Boaz, who surrendered, continues to insist that he stumbled over a chain while leaving the house to kill a dog and shot his wife accidentally.

Charles Reopens Wheat Campaign

Farmers Get New Chance to Sign Up for Slash.

La Plata, Md., March 6 (Spl.).—Immediate reopening of the wheat program in Charles County has been announced by Dr. Thomas B. Symons, in charge of crop adjustment campaigns for Maryland. Growers who did not sign crop reduction contracts last fall will have another opportunity.

Those who sign now will be eligible for final 1933 payments and subsequent benefit payments in 1934 and 1935, but will not receive the first payment of 20 cents a bushel already made to those who signed during the original campaign.

So far, 94 Charles County farmers have contracted to reduce their production of wheat, which is one-third of the total number. The State average is two-thirds of the total number.

C. E. Boyer, 78, Buried; Former Canal Boatman

Hagerstown, Md., March 6 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Charles E. Boyer, 78, retired C. & O. Canal boatman, were held today at Baker sville.

He is survived by nine children, 24 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Col. Charles T. Boon To Be Paid Tribute

Luke, Md., March 6 (Spl.).—Col. Charles T. Boon, 63, connected with the West Virginia Pulp & Paper Co. for 41 years, will be buried tomorrow afternoon in Philos Cemetery, Westernport, following services at his home.

His widow survives, also two brothers, Daniel H. Boon, Evanston, Ill., and Penn Boon, Roanoke, Va., and a sister, Mrs. Juda Boon Murray, Roanoke. Mr. Boon died Sunday night.

Budget Heads Will Oppose Tax Rate Cut

Hearings on D. C. Fund Slated to Open at 10:30 A. M.

Officials Ready to Ask Increased Federal Appropriation.

District Commissioners will oppose the proposed reduction in the tax rate from $1.50 to $1.20, as advocated by Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, during hearings on the 1935 District budget, which opens at 10:30 a. m. today before the House Appropriations sub-committee.

The Commissioners and Auditor Daniel J. Donovan will appear prepared to combat any proposal either to lower the tax rate or to decrease the $5,700,000 Federal contribution carried in the pending estimates.

In fact, they will argue for an increased appropriation by the Federal Government if an opportunity is presented.

Behind closed doors, the committee will consider the present and prospective financial condition of District government and will question District officials regarding justification for estimates of $35,821,013, one of the smallest budgets in recent years.

Already Cut to Bone.

As the budget has been cut to the bone already by the Commissioners and the Budget Bureau, it is not expected the committee will make much headway in further reducing estimates, though another effort may be made to reduce the Federal contribution.

Most of the controversial items will not be before the sub-committee at this time because they are being held up in the form of supplemental estimates by the Budget Bureau.

These latter estimates include $2,700,000 for emergency relief in addition to the $1,300,000 carried in the regular budget; funds for completion of Anacostia Junior High School; an amount to complete the purchase for the Jefferson Junior High School site; construction of a Georgetown branch library, and buildings at Lorton, and money for the drafting of plans for a new Chain bridge.

The regular budget carries little new construction, the only important item being an addition to the Browne Junior High School. Provision is also made for completion of projects already authorized or started, such as the Woodrow Wilson High School, the new Calvert Street Bridge, and a contagious disease ward at Gallinger Hospital.

Auditor Donovan revealed yesterday that if the 5-and-5 pay restoration plan is adopted, the anticipated District surplus of $5,000,000 at the end of the fiscal year 1935 will be reduced by $1,700,000, or $500,000 for five months of this year and $1,200,000 in 1935.

Center Plan Abandoned.

District officials have already been forced to abandon their plan to revive the Municipal Center because they consider other minor projects more urgent. They are convinced appropriations for these items are more important than another tax rate slash at this time.

Maj. Donovan yesterday completed his testimony before the permanent appropriations subcommittee on the permanent and indefinite appropriations on the District budget. He admitted that many of them should be carried as regular appropriations.

Religious Drama Rules Studied by Committee

Rules for the forthcoming religious drama contest were studied by various groups last night in the Foundry Methodist Church Education Building, Sixteenth and P streets northwest.

The contest will be conducted here shortly after Easter by the Religious Drama Committee of the Washington Federation of Churches, and will be open to all groups desiring to present one-act dramas. The committee included Miss Rhoda Watkins, Miss Nell Burghaut and Francis Hoffheins. Miss Katherine Willey is chairman of the religious drama committee.

From Rented Rooms To Cordwood

A few days ago Mrs. Rex R. Case, 1502 Columbia road northwest, advertised two rooms for rent in the Classified Columns of The Post. She bought the 7-day rate, but at the end of the second day canceled the remaining five days because two insertions of the ad had done the work. Her rooms were rented! And at a cost of only 60 cents.

Such results are worth reporting to others, so Mrs. Case told her son, who immediately placed a small Classified Ad in The Post advertising his cordwood and kindling. And he, too, has had excellent results.

For "Today's Results—Today," use The Post's Classified Columns. Rent your rooms, sell your cordwood, find the used car or furniture you need—in The Post's Classified Ads. To place an ad

Processed American Cheese lb. Net Weight

This cheese had one hole too many, local relief authorities and the United States Attorney's Office charge. They say it was issued as a pound package by Stewart Keyser, manager of a store on Nichols avenue southeast, to emergency relief workers, but, in reality, it is claimed, it is a half-pound package. The hole too many shown in the picture bore the weight mark, they said.

Shoemaker On Stand Today In Lorton Case

Says He'll Give Probers "More Evidence Than They Want."

Representative Francis H. Shoemaker will appear today before the Board of Public Welfare committee investigating his charges of graft and other irregularities at Lorton Reformatory.

Abandoning his stand that he would take no part in the inquiry on the grounds that it was to be a "whitewash," the Representative late yesterday announced that he was willing to appear before the committee "and give them more evidence than they want." He also will present the 150 or more letters and other documents given him by Edward Bedell, former inmate at Lorton, and said to provide basis for his charges. The documents are reputedly from the files of the reformatory.

The Minnesotan said the only condition he had made to his offer to appear and present evidence and witnesses was a demand for assurance that employes of the prison who might be called by him to testify would not lose their jobs. He said he was assured that the Welfare Board, at a special meeting today, would give this assurance in writing.

Among evidence to be presented, he said, was information that J. E. C. Bischoff, business manager at Lorton, not only received fees from the John R. Wald Co., of Huntington, Pa., which has furnished equipment for the prison, but that Bischoff also visited Atlanta and other Federal institutions in the interest of the Wald company.

"The Government," Shoemaker said, "thus was maintaining at Lorton the sales manager and the display room for the Wald company."

Prior to the representative's announcement that he would appear at the inquiry today, Bedell had announced that Shoemaker had agreed to release a portion of the papers which Bedell had given him. These were said to bear out charges against Bischoff and reflect on the conduct of the prison by Capt. M. M. Barnard, superintendent of penal institutions.

Another witness today, Bedell said, will be a Baltimore physician who will testify as to alleged use of narcotics at the prison.

Commission Favors Scenic Road Link

Construction of 1,000-Foot Gap Recommended.

The District's coordinating committee on city planning yesterday recommended that 1,000 feet of highway be constructed to complete a drive between Dalecarlia Reservoir and Takoma Park, Md.

The project, which would be undertaken with CWA funds, consists of connecting Bingham drive in Rock Creek Park with Nebraska avenue. This will complete a route from the reservoir, at Conduit road, to Takoma Park via Little Falls road, Loughboro road, Nebraska avenue, Bingham, Beach and Sherrill drives, Aspen street, Laurel street and Carroll avenue.

The route will provide means of reaching Walter Reed Hospital from the Northwest section, said an official of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. Its extension to Takoma Park will follow dedication by the hospital to the project of a part of Aspen street now under Walter Reed's jurisdiction.

Coroner's Jury Clears Fatal Crash Drivers

A verdict of "accidental death" was returned by a coroner's jury in the death of Mrs. Mary A. Mills, 36, killed February 28 in a traffic accident at Fourth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast.

Her husband, John E. Mills, 34, and a truck drives, Charles H. Adams, 25, were absolved of blame. An automobile driven by Mills was in collision with Adams' truck.

6,263 Will Receive School Lunches Today

Free lunches will be provided for 6,263 needy parochial and public school children today, it was announced yesterday by Robert L. Haycock, assistant superintendent of schools.

Recipients of the lunches will include 5,597 public school and 666 parochial children. The lunches have been served to 5,446 public school children and 500 parochial. Two new public schools will be added to the program today. A restaurateur is continuing to prepare food pending completion of the central kitchen on Wisconsin avenue northwest.

Alley Project Still Held Up

House District Committee to Consider Minor Bills Today.

The House District Committee will consider only minor bills today, as no report has been received from the National Capital Park and Planning Commission on the alley dwelling bill.

The Administration - suggested amendments to the District liquor act are still awaiting action, and one of these includes removal of the one-license restriction on chain stores.

Representative Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, acting chairman of the committee, said that he has not yet conferred with Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, regarding disposition of the amendments.

Men Named to Get West Point Tests

Virginia Youths Listed for Entrance Quiz.

The War Department announced yesterday, according to the Associated Press, that the following candidates have been designated to take entrance examinations for West Point:

By President Roosevelt—Private John Eugene Kelsey, Fifty-first Coast Artillery, Fort Monroe, Va.

By Senator Byrd—Glenn C. Coleman, Lynchburg; John E. Kelsey, Newport News, first alternate; Donald R. Matheson, Fort Humphreys, second alternate. By Representative Darden—Walter S. Gray, Norfolk; Donald B. Smith, Portsmouth, first alternate; Henry R. Brewerton, Virginia Beach, second alternate.

Clerk Gets Eight Years In Postal Embezzlement

Huntington, W. Va., March 6 (Spl.).—A sentence of eight years in the Federal prison at Atlanta was imposed today by Judge George C. McClintic in Federal District Court upon Samuel T. Shawyer, former Huntington postal clerk, when he pleaded guilty to embezzling approximately $18,000 in postal funds.

Store Manager Held on Short Weight Charge

Alleged Relief Slip Swindle Revealed by Welfare Board.

Allegedly operating a "short weight" swindle, in which members of destitute families were the victims, Stewart M. Keyser, 27-year-old grocery manager, has been ordered to appear in Police Court today under charges of "diverting Government property to his own use."

Keyser was arrested yesterday after complaints reached the office of Robert B. Turner, an official of the Emergency Relief Division, Board of Public Welfare. His store at 2218 Nichols avenue southeast, is used as a Government distributing point to fill orders on relief slips presented to needy Washingtonians.

Yesterday, Turner said, Carrie Barnes, colored, of 1014 Seventh street southeast, appeared in his office with four half-pound packages of cheese. Her slip, she declared, called for 4 pounds.

When she told Turner the cheese was obtained at Keyser's store, he sent an employe of his office with a duplicate order. The employe also returned with four half-pound packages. Each package was labeled "Not for sale." The weight, marked on an outside wrapper, was torn off.

Keyser was arrested later and Assistant United States Attorney David A. Hart ordered him charged under Section 47 of the criminal code—unauthorized diversion of Government property.

Potomac Ice Destroys Piers of Boating Club

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 6 (Spl.).—The floating piers of a local boating club were swept away last night when the ice in the Potomac at Bedington, near here, moved out. The club estimated the loss at $200.

Otherwise, the movement of the ice from the river was accompanied by no damage. The river was up three feet at Dam No. 4 on the Potomac, near here, but not dangerously high.

West Virginian Finds Father Dead in Woods

Petersburg, W. Va., March 6 (Spl.).—William Aronhalt, 60, was found dead by his son in the woods where the men had been cutting pulp wood near Stony River.

Death was declared due to a heart attack. Services were held yesterday at Mount Storm. Surviving are the widow, six children, two brothers and two sisters.

Street Improvement Contracts Awarded

Contracts for miscellaneous street improvements were awarded yesterday by the District Commissioners to the Eastholm-Melvin Co., of Washington, which submitted a low bid of $48,557, and to the Union Paving Co., which submitted a low bid of $36,960.

When Is a Male a Gentleman Or Just Merely a Hatrack?

This Moot Question of Doffing the Derby in a Lift Is Still Mooting About, as State Department Rather Testily Evades the Issue.

The propriety of wearing hats in elevators is not a question upon which the Department of State is willing to pass judgment.

Washington, border-line town between the hat-removing South and the hat-retaining North, and lately torn by heated discussion of the point, will have to seek elsewhere for a ruling.

"The matter hardly falls within the competence of this department," observed Charles Lee Cooke, ceremonial officer and the city's leading authority on everything pertaining to rank and usage in the more elevated strata of society.

Cooke's unwillingness to assay the subject is traceable to the days of Dolly Gann and the battle for precedence. At that time, the then Secretary of State, Henry L. Stimson, put his foot down on the time-honored custom of referring everything remotely savoring of social correctness to the department's experts.

There were, he let it be known, other things of more direct import to occupy the attention of Cooke. He indicated it was no unusual thing for a Washington hostess to send Cooke a list of guests for a forthcoming dinner with the request he seat them correctly.

Since then the ceremonial officer has been wary of requests for rulings on social usage.

$700,500 Set Aside to Cool Public Offices

Air-Conditioning Plants Will Be Installed in Nine Buildings.

Temporary Structures, Called Hottest, Are Passed By.

The boon of air-conditioning, started unofficially last summer in Government buildings by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, who, as Farm Credit Administrator, had cooling apparatus installed in his private office without official sanction, will be brought officially to several Government buildings, the Public Works Administration announced yesterday.

Government officials and office workers, mostly the former, in sections of nine Government structures will greet this coming summer with considerable more chance of remaining comfortable than in the past.

An allotment of $700,500 for the installing of cooling equipment will be withdrawn from a fund of $1,000,000 previously earmarked for the purpose.

Worst Sufferer Passed By.

However, the new air conditioning will not aid persons in buildings where heat suffering has been the worst. These are the workers still quartered in war-time temporary buildings, where the heat occasionally becomes so severe employes are released for the day.

Interior Secretary Ickes said air conditioning will be installed in the following places:

State Department: Offices of the Secretary and assistants, diplomatic room and library.

Internal Revenue Building: Court of Customs and Patent Appeals.

Interior Department: Sixth floor, Eighteenth street wing, south ends of all wings and five rooms on fifth floor.

Hearing Rooms Included.

Commerce Department: Auditorium.

Old Land Office Building: Tariff Commission hearing rooms.

Agriculture Department: Secretary's rooms, east and west wings, Administration Building and auditorium and motion picture rooms in south building.

Treasury Department, Room 87, used for money counting.

Experts to Study Rust Resistance

National Society Meets Today at Wardman Park.

Several hundred of the Nation's leading technologists will meet today at the Wardman Park Hotel for a regional meeting of the American Society for Testing Materials.

Experts on causes for destruction of iron, steel, brass, copper and aluminum by rust and corrosion will present technical papers discussing resistance and effect of exposure to the elements in various sections of the country.

Arrangements for the meetings were made by a group of Washington members of the society, headed by A. C. Fieldner, chief engineer of the experiments stations division, Bureau of Mines.

Hotel Paymaster Sent to Grand Jury

Gray Pleads Not Guilty; $10,000 Bond Set.

After allegedly admitting the theft of approximately $3,000 from the Willard Hotel, Clarence P. Gray, 40, former Government employe, changed his plea to not guilty in Police Court yesterday and was held for grand jury action under $10,000 bond.

Gray waived a preliminary hearing before Judge Isaac Hitt. He surrendered at Police Headquarters Monday night, after allegedly absconding with pay roll money from the Willard. Gray said he took the money while paymaster at the hotel.

Police said Gray told them that while taking pay roll money to a bank February 23, he was robbed by two armed men. In an effort to make up the loss, detectives said he told them, he took more money, lost some at gambling, and finally went South.

Frankfort District Hits School Location

Fort Ashby, W. Va., March 6 (Spl.)—Citizens of Frankfort district, who recently held several meetings protesting the proposed erection of a high school building at Ridgeley, just across the Potomac from Cumberland, Md., claiming the location is not central, will send representatives to a hearing before the Federal Emergeency Administration of Public Works in Washington tomorrow.

Included will be B. F. Hartman, Wiley Ford, chairman of the protesting committee, and H. Gassaway Shores, Keyser attorney.

Pupils Present Marionette Show

Army Medical Chief Explains Doherty Case

Hospital, Policeman Had Acted Too Hastily, Says Letter.

Hasty action on the part of Montgomery County police and a Walter Reed Hospital attendant was blamed by Maj. Gen. Robert U. Patterson, surgeon general of the Army, yesterday for failure of Daniel Doherty, Silver Spring World War veteran, to obtain emergency treatment at the Army medical center, following an accident February 20.

In a letter to Montgomery County Legion officials, Gen. Patterson said first aid was not given because the attendant in charge at the time was told that this already had been done by Police Sergeant Guy Jones, who took Doherty to the hospital after he had injured his head in a fall on the ice.

"There would have been no cause for complaint," the surgeon general's letter to the Legion said, "if Jones and the attendant had complied with the nurse's request to wait for the medical officer."

Lieut. Col. R. C. MacDonald, executive officer in the office of the surgeon general, said he was under the impression that the attendant had "talked too much" and the policeman had been "too hasty" in removing Doherty from the hospital.

"It is the policy of the Walter Reed General Hospital to render first aid or emergency treatment to everyone, regardless of status, creed or color, who suffers serious injury in the vicinity of the hospital," Gen. Patterson's letter said.

The report to the Legion was based upon statements from all persons concerned, Col. MacDonald said.

Culpeper Chosen For Hi-Y Meeting

Harrisonburg Delegates Elect Officers.

Martin Miller, of Culpeper, was named president of the district boys, with Preston Lincoln, Harrisonburg, vice president, and John Saton, Staunton, secretary-treasury. Miss Mary Faust, of Marshall, was named to head the girls' group, with Mary Frances Dudley, Staunton, vice president, and Mildred Garnett, Harrisonburg, secretary-treasurer.

Rum Charge Holds Virginia Druggist

Danville Man Sentenced to Jail and Fine.

Danville, Va., March 6 (Spl.). R. Haskins McFall, prominent Danville druggist, was under sentence of 90 days in jail and to pay a fine o $50 today because Robert J. Worley testified in police court that he bought a pint of liquor from his drug store without a prescription.

McFall denied the charge and and said that the liquor was not sold there.

Worley also is under the charge of possessing ardent spirits.

Aid to U. S. Attorney Named.

Bootleg Liquor Prices Slashed Since Repeal

Legal Rum Competition Too Strong; "Boys" Being Careful.

Competition with legal liquor is driving Washington bootleg prices down.

With legal gin as low as $1.19 a quart and legal whisky down to the same level for a pint, bootleggers are lowering their prices.

One bootlegger yesterday was selling whisky, or what passed for whisky, at 75 cents a pint. Another announced that he had become a specialist. He is specializing in gin—his own make—at 50 cents a pint.

Bootleggers explain that they have been able to get their prices below those of liquor stores because they have no taxes or license fees to pay. Delivery and other overhead still runs high, they explain, which makes it impossible to get bootleg prices very far below legitimate liquor.

Either the number of bootleggers in the District has dropped off considerably since liquor became legal and the number of speakeasies has dropped to nearly none, or the sellers of untaxed booze are being a lot more careful than formerly.

"It used to be a misdemeanor to sell liquor," one bootlegger explained. "But now they can hook you for failure to pay taxes. That is a real crime. We've got to be careful."

Western High Defeats C. U. Frosh Debaters

Western High School debating team defeated Catholic University freshmen yesterday, upholding the affirmative on, "Resolved, that the United States Should Adopt the British System of Radio Control."

On the Western team were Robert Sullivan, Alice Howard and Randall Jones. Catholic University freshmen were represented by Joseph Spitaly, Robert Makoske and James Gartland.

T. J. Gillespie Buried.

Winchester, Va., March 6 (Spl.).—Funeral rites were conducted in Pittsburgh yesterday for Thomas J. Gillespie, 86, father of Mrs. John S. Scully, jr., of Winchester, who died Sunday. Burial was in Homeward Cemetery.

School Board To Map Rum Policy Today

Liquor and Beer "Ads" to Be Banned from Student Papers.

Aroused by continued efforts of prospective liquor dealers to obtain licenses for both off-and-on-sale establishments near schools, the Board of Education today will formulate a general policy for submission to the Alcoholic Beverage Board, it was learned yesterday.

A ban on any liquor or beer advertising in school publications also will be authorized, it was said. Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, first assistant superintendent, said the advertisement in the Eastern High School paper of a beer garden, over which Representative Schulte, of Indiana, made a strong protest, was the only one brought to his attention.

Will Urge Protection.

In submitting a license policy, the board will ask the Commissioners to exercise whatever discretion it has in cases where the interests of children are jeopardized, it was learned.

The board action will be guided largely by the stand already taken by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, withholding decision on applications near schools until a session Saturday. A general review of the A. B. C. board's action will be made by Henry Gilligan.

Attention will be called to the applications for on-sale establishments in the neighborhood of the Greenleaf School, Four-and-a-Half street, between M and N streets northwest, and the Congress Heights School, Nichols avenue, between Fifth street and Congress Road southeast.

400-Foot Limit Old Law.

The 400-foot boundary for a liquor selling place near a school was specified by the Board of Education on the basis of a preprohibition act of Congress, it was revealed yesterday by Harry O. Hine, secretary. Although this distance has been specified, Mr. Gilligan believes licenses should not be granted anywhere near a school.

Sale of "nip" bottles, banned yesterday by the A. B. C. Board, was described as "vicious" by Dr. Kramer. He described one case of a high school boy buying a number of the novelty bottles and distributing them among college girl friends.

Charters Will Sing At Martinsburg

Winchester Group Will Go to Endeavor Session.

Winchester, Va., March 6 (Spl.). "The Chanters," a musical organization composed of 50 young voices from the churches of Winchester, will present a special program Thursday evening at Martinsburg, W. Va., for the annual meeting of the West Virginia Christian Endeavor Societies.

John Shanley Dies Of Accident Hurts

Struck by an automobile Sunday while attempting to cross the street at Rhode Island avenue and V street northeast, John Shanley, 42, of 14 W street northwest, died last night in Sibley Hospital.

Young Travis Tutored by Cronin

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor, The Post).

BILOXI, Miss., March 6.—Life at the Washington club's training camp, I am sorry to report, has settled down into a routine about as exciting as a mug of three point two and every bit as interesting. The chief development of the Nats' two days of training thus far in the wide open spaces of Biloxi's stadium has been the daily interruption of the correspondents' morning golf game.

Manager Joe Cronin is no longer Clark Griffith's noble experiment which inspired the camp followers to pen lengthy pieces last spring, but an established success. The new faces with the squad are among those born to blush unseen on major league diamonds and waste their fragrance, if any, on minor league fields. The competition for regular jobs with the Nats is mostly the bunk and if you can get a thrill out of the pepper drills and volley ball games, you're a better man than I. Gunga Din.

Now Old Members.

The Washington club, with its 1933 pennant still fluttering in the breezes of the Griffith Stadium storeroom, is too well-set to develop many spring training situations. The lads who made Washington the most speculative club in the league last season—Cronin and the newcomers, Whitehill, Stewart and Russell—are now old and established members of the Nats' family.

The only really noteworthy rookie in camp, aside from the two pitchers, Ed Chapman and Ray Prim, is Cecil Travis, the young third baseman from Chattanooga—who is the apple of Griffith's eye. And Travis must bite a dog before he rates the headlines again. It has long been an open secret that Griffith and Cronin are grooming the young fellow, who came out of an Alabama baseball school three years ago, for Ossie Bluege's regular third base job.

Ordered in Advance.

And they are serious about this Travis down here, with Griffith ogling his birth certificate which shows only 20 years and indicates a full decade of faithful service for the Nats if he makes good. To that end, they have made an exception in his case and ordered him to report two full weeks ahead of the remainder of the infielders and the outfielders.

Today, Cronin took time out, not reluctantly, from his medicine ball season, to tutor young Travis in some of the intricacies of infield play, chiefly how to keep out of the way of flying spikes which can remove a valuable human baseball chattel from a club's roster in a split second if he is lethargic in getting his shins out of the way.

They are going to take Travis' bat away from him, too, when batting practice starts, and give him a stick that he can swing freely. The way Travis pounded the pitching in the Southern League and his sensational hitting during his brief term with the Nats last season have contributed to the esteem in which he is held by Manager Cronin.

Hitting May Settle Issue.

But at this writing I hesitate to go overboard with the prediction that Travis will supplant Bluege as the regular on third. Bluege can give his young rival cards, spades and big casino and still outfield him around that bag. I would say it all depends on how the remainder of the team hits. Unless there is a crying need for hitting from the third baseman Bluege will remain on the job.

So many rookie pitchers are littering the field that Cronin and Griffith are rapidly being won over to the birth-control movement. Griff and Cronin don't even know the names of a half dozen of the lads who have accrued to the squad since Saturday. There are approximately ten pitchers working out who aren't even under contract, mostly boys from the gulf towns.

But with the servant problem what it is, the boys probably will be treated nicely until the regular infielders and outfielders arrive and batting practice starts, when the surplus pitchers will fit in very well, indeed—shagging flies.

Runs, Hits and Errors.

Griffith is showing more than passing interest in young Andy Sierra, pitcher by appointment to the Washington club...By appointment of Senator Pat Harrison, of Sierra's native Gulfport...He is the biggest 18-year-old boy you ever saw...Six feet 3 and built like a brick storehouse...Trainer Mike Martin loves to bawl out the rookies...But speaks discreetly politely to the regulars...The rubber shirt brigade today increased 100 per cent...with Earl Whitehill joining Cronin...Al Crowder's flaming red shirt makes him a standout on the practice field...Cronin today organized his coaching staff to handle the young pitchers...He will diagnose the faults of the rookies after conferences with Alirock, Schacht, Berg and Sewell and systematize the coaching.

New Holdout Trouble for Pirates

Gomez and Macfayden Due to Sign Shortly; Dickey Aroused.

PASO ROBLES, Calif., March 6 (AP).—More "holdout trouble" developed in the Pittsburgh Pirates' training camp today, this time in the form of Arky Vaughn, swashbuckling shortstop.

Club officials added, however, he will reach camp "in a day or two" and the salary question probably will be rapidly patched up. Meanwhile, William E. Benswanger, president, expressed no concern over the absence of Pitcher Bill Swift, who has flailed to return a contract. Negotiations for signing the Scranton, Pa., mounds are reported to be under way.

Although the first squad is working out daily, the second contingent, now en route to camp, is not expected until Thursday.

Braves Reach Camp.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 6 (U.P.).—Pitcher Ed Brandt arrived at the Boston Braves camp today along with 30 other players, and so the rumor that Eddie was planning to become a holdout were dispelled. Ellis Taylor, brother of the Veteran Wach Taylor, was one of the arrivals. He is going to try for the job of third string catcher.

Giants Rained Out.

Miami Beach, Fla., March 6 (U.P.).—Their afternoon practice game rained out, the New York Giants put in the time today discussing Manager Bill Terry's decision to bench Blondy Ryan in favor of Travis Jackson. Ryan, who has been in Lynn, Mass., because of the death of his father, was ordered to report for duty Thursday.

Dodgers Sign Beck.

Gomez Due to Sign.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 6 (U.P.).—Lefty Gomez and Danny Macfayden will sign their 1934 pitcher contracts with the New York Yankees within the next 48 hours, Manager Joe McCarthy predicted today. Bill Dickey, catcher, insists he will not sign for the amount offered and this is understood to be $2,500 less than he demands.

First Brown Workout.

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 6 (AP).—After a week of rain Florida relented today and greeted the St. Louis Browns with sunshine as they held their first workout.

To make more auspicious the initial training of Rogers Hornsby's men, Sam West, one of five unsigned this morning, came to terms and donned a uniform.

Twenty-four players went through batting and fielding practice.

Collins Joins Reds.

Bradenton, Fla., March 6 (AP).—James "Ripper" Collins, the Cardinal's first baseman, arrived this afternoon, leaving Shortstop Leo Durocher as the only infielder missing from the Redbird training camp. Durocher is expected soon.

Bridgewater Gridmen Hold Spring Practice

Harrisonburg, Va., March 6 (Spl.).—Spring football practice has been inaugurated at Bridgewater College for the first time in the history of the Rockingham institution.

Coach Stanley Houser, of Indiana, who took up the coaching reins at Bridgewater last fall, has been conducting indoor drills for the past week. With the advent of favorable weather, he soon will have the squad outdoors.

Coach Houser, who saw a Bridgewater eleven score its first victory in six years last fall, has inaugurated a new system for the Eagles and has decided on spring training in order to have his veterans ready to take their place next campaign. He will lose a number of valuable men by graduation and wants his reserves well trained to take their place.

The tentative schedule for next fall:

November 3—Randolph-Macon College at Bridgewater; 10, Hampden-Sydney College, there; 17, Juaniata College at Huntingdon, Pa.

Marlinton High Five Wins Sectional Honors

Ronceverte, W. Va., March 6 (Spl.).—First honors in the sectional basket ball tournament here went to Marlinton High School, whose team defeated the Ronceverte quintet in the finale, 29 to 18. The White Sulphur cagers won third place.

The all-tournament team selected by tournament officials was as follows: Wright, of Ronceverte, and Norvelle, of White Sulphur, forwards; Simmons, of Marlinton, center; Overholt, of Marlinton, and Weber, of Rainelle, guards. The White Sulphur fans were voted the best cheerers and Peters, of Greenbrier High School, the best cheer leader.

Whitehill, Burke And Berg Signed

Biloxi, Miss., March 6 (Spl.).—The mild attack of holdoutitis among Washington players who reported to the Nats' training camp subsided entirely today when Owner Clark Griffith brandished the signed contracts of Earl Whitehill and Bobby Burke, the last of the recalcitrants who are not out-and-out holdouts.

Whitehill, his resistance weakened by the fumes of Griffith's ever present cheroot, staggered out of the owner's sanctum this morning safely signed. Burke signed later in the day, as did Moe Berg, who reported in time for practice this morning.

But Catcher Cliff Bolton, who has refused an $800 increase over his $3,500 salary of last year, remains adamant at his High Point home and has been officially instructed to send no more collect wires demanding his terms be met.

Investigation In A. A. U. Debut

BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION, 1933 unlimited finalist, will make its debut in the Washington Post's A. A. U. basket ball championship tournament tonight at Roosevelt High School gym, drawing Company E., Thirteenth Engineers as opponents, at 9:30 o'clock.

The battle between the Sleuths and Soldiers is the only unlimited contest on tonight's program, but four fast 145-pound quintets are expected to furnish plenty of thrills and action in two other games.

In the initial game, St. Stephens Preps, who have participated in numerous A. A. U. tournaments, having started out first as a 100-pound team, will encounter Newton A. C. at 7:30 o'clock, while in the second set-to Heurich Flashes, winner of more than 35 games this season, will clash with Simpson Pharmacy at 8:30 o'clock.

Burgess Sleuths Star.

Investigation, slated to go far in this year's event, will present a veteran line-up, with Forest Burgess, former George Washington star, and Joe Lynch, former St. Mary's athlete, as the big shots in its attack. David Shapiro, Walter Morris and Lester and Milton Singman are other outstanding players on the team. The Sleuths were beaten, 39 to 23, in the 1933 finals by Sholl's. At present they are hot on the heels of Trinity for the second-half championship in the Community Center League.

Heurich Flashes, favored to defeat Simpson Pharmacy, have piled up an enviable record. The team has suffered few reverses. Anthony Latona, ace of the Georgetown freshmen; Huck Cavanaugh, former Roosevelt High star, and Capt. Fred Scheele are the three most dangerous players on the Heurich outfit.

George Joray and Joe Mulhall promise to be the kingpins for St. Stephens in the game against Newton. Both are versatile players.

Tomorrow night's games will bring into action the following teams:

Valley Nines Planning League for Semipros

Hagerstown, Md., March 6 (Spl.).—Cumberland Valley baseball representatives have been invited to a meeting to be held in Martinsburg, W. Va., Thursday night, at which time an effort will be made to organize a semipro baseball league, similar to the Tri-State League, which preceded the Blue Ridge League of organized ball here.

Representatives from two of the teams represented in the Washington County Semipro League will attend the meeting.

Other towns asked to send representatives are Frederick, Md.; Chambersburg, Pa., and Waynesboro, Pa., represented in the Blue Ridge League, which disbanded several years ago because of financial difficulties, and Winchester, Va., and Front Royal, Va.

It is the plan to organize either a four or six club circuit to play Saturday ball. None of the players would be paid. All of the towns invited to the meeting have inclosed parks.

South Carolina, 'Tucky Bid to Atlanta Session

Atlanta, March 6 (AP).—Basket ball teams of the University of South Carolina and of the University of Kentucky have been invited to give exhibitions here during the annual meeting of the National Basket Ball Coaches' Association, starting March 29.

Coach Roy Mundoff, of Georgia Tech, president of the coaches' association, made the announcement today. He also said Illinois Wesleyan and the University of Pittsburgh had been invitted.

Martinsburg Elks Win.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 6 (Spl.).—Following an extended rest Hack Wilson's Elks tossers went back into harness, nosing out the Pepsi-Cola five, of Petersburg, W. Va., on the latter's court, 22 to 20.

Sport Snapshots Gathered Here and There

That the old saying about the female of the species being more deadly than the male should include even wrestlers seems to be the aim of two Chicago girls. Having lost positions as physical training instructors they went in for airplane spins and hammerlocks in a serious way. Ruby Allen, claimant to the women's 145-pound grappling title, is the girl impersonating Jim Londos above with Kay ("O. K.") Okonnors as the spinnee. Note the adagio. At right, a fast field of ponies is shown jockeying for the rail position at the Hialeah, Fla., track after starting from the deluxe, padded and balloon-tired starting gate.

W. & M. to Pin Track Hopes On Little

Norfolk Youth, Holder of Several Records, Consistent Winner.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., March 6 (AP).—Henry Moncure ("Monk") Little, the William and Mary lad who broad-jumped 23 feet 9¼ inches to win the event in the thirteenth A. A. A. A. indoor track and field championships, will be the kingpin of the Indian attack in this spring's campaigning.

Coach Joseph ("Scrap") Chandler, who has trained some of the most accomplished trackmen the Old Dominion has produced, was unstinting in his praise of Little, who failed by only an eighth of an inch to equal the indoor record.

Out of doors the William and Mary ace has done much better with a 24-foot 4½-inch leap at Cambridge that hung up a record.

"The most outstanding performer I have ever seen," said Chandler, who has seen many of them, in commenting on the record of the redoubtable Monk.

Holds Two Records.

The old "jack of all trades" expression doesn't follow through in its application to Little, who holds two William and Mary College records and a share in another. He is joint holder of the 100-yard dash record with Bill Scott, speedster of several years back, each with a 9.8 performance to his credit.

But Little didn't stop at that. No one at William and Mary has been able to touch his record of 21.3 seconds in the 220 nor come even close to his excellent performance in the broad jump.

With Little, a native of Norfolk, and Woodrow Bralley, of Hillsville, as consistent winners and a fine batch of sophomores coming up, Coach Chandler, whose teams usually are among the State's best, is expecting another outstanding combination this spring. The addition of Bullard and Plumber in the middle distances will add strength where the Indians felt their principal weakness last season. The William and Mary mentor plans to carry Bullard along slowly, but is confident that the freshman ace of last season will develop into a great quarter and half miler.

Miller, Anacostia Open Title Series

In First Game Tonight for Southeast Crown.

Anacostia Business Men and Miller Furniture Co. will clash tonight at 8:30 in the first game of the best 3-out-of-5 series for the basket ball championship of the Southeast Community Center at Hines Junior High School. Individual trophies are to be given the champions and a cup to the runner-up.

Miller Furniture was the winner of Class A in the season just finished, having won 14 games and lost 1. Anacostia did better in Class B, winning 20 games and losing only 1. Both teams have a host of followers and the battles are expected to be warmly contested.

There were eight teams in class B, and there is still rivalry existing between Christ Church, Congress Heights, Eastons and the Dixies, who failed to win the title. These teams will be pitted against each other in the preliminaries to the major contest. Tonight Congress Heights will meet Eastons at 7:30.

Millers.	Position.	Anacostia.
Barker	R. F.	Ed Plum
Miller or Nelliser	L. F.	Webb
Estes	Center	Severn
Reigleman	R. G.	Holland
Sherman	L. G.	Davis

'Giants 25 Per Cent Better'

By Jimmy Powers
(Pinch-Hitting for Paul Gallico).

MIAMI, Fla., March 6 (Spl.).—I have been squinting at the noble New York Giants now for nigh onto two weeks. The bean bag tossing, puss-in-the-corner, drop-the-handkerchief stage of training is over. On Friday, the Philadelphia Athletics, bargain basement remnants of the American League, open a five-game series with the New York lads, so you see rehearsals are getting to the point where a fellow can pass some judgment.

If I were a fan in New York there are two things I would like to know about the world champion club: (a) How does it look compared to last year, and (b) what are its chances of winning that old gonfalon again? I hope I can give you a fairly decent answer on both counts without sprinkling the essay with a pepper shaker full of percentage points, batting and fielding averages. They're pretty dull stuff, those serious dope essays. I'd rather read why Johnny Chipmonk wears four stripes down his back.

To begin with, the Giants look 25 per cent better today than they did last year. Physically, the players are in better shape with the exception of Gus Mancuso, who has just survived a siege of typhoid and couldn't beat Fanny Ward with a 40-ounce hickory bat. Mentally, the team has the world series poise and confidence that is good for two dozen extra victories on spirit alone. Take the pitchers. Aw, go on, take the pitchers. Take them out and sell them for a million dollars! They're worth every penny of it.

In fact, the world champions are no better than their onion chuckers. Carl Hubbell is the best in the business. Hal Schumacher, shy, hesitant, experimenting a year ago, is a fire tested veteran. Freddy Fitzsimmons' knuckle ball flutters like a celluloid shooting gallery target. Senor Adolfo Luque is a smart old caballero. Some say he has been chucking that cantaloupe past the batters' belt buckles since the Spanish-American war. I asked him why Hubbell and the rest of his pals were good. "They all throw downers," he said. "The ball breaks into the dirt. The batter clips the top of it and a good infield gobbles it up. That's why Mancuso had so many passed balls last summer. Hubbell's screw ball breaks three ways. Even if a batter guessed with him and set himself for the screw ball, he still could be fooled on the direction."

The surprise man of the Giants this summer may be William Watson Clark. He's a good left-hander, but last year he was as sour as a green persimmon from his farm in St. Joseph, La. He had influenza and he weakened himself by pitching too soon. When the Brooklyn Dodgers traded him away he brooded about it, because he coughed so much he thought he had tuberculosis.

Then, when repeated examinations disproved this, he imagined he was catching diabetes. He drank his coffee and ate his oatmeal without sugar. He spurned candy, cakes, pies and ice cream. Deprived of sugar, an energy producer, his body failed to recuperate. Lefty could not go the route. He weakened after three innings. Late in the summer, even after long snoozes in the bull pen, he could scarcely get the ball up to the plate, let alone put any stuff on it.

A cranky old doctor, long a friend of the family, met him in Clearwater this winter. "Why you are ring-tailed, blankeety-blank hypochondriac, Mr. Clark," said the physician. He bought Lefty a pound of milk chocolates. Lefty went back to his old diet. He gained 15 pounds. He feels so good now he thinks he'll win a game for each new pound. If he does the Giants will win the pennant, surely.

I think the Chicago Cubs will be toughest to beat. Riggs Stephenson, Kiki Cuyler, Babe Herman, Chuck Klein—that's a powerful outfield. The new ball travels when its clouted right. Even Hughey Critz, the notorious first-ball hitter, gets up there and promptly slaps that apple right out to the fence. Hughey, you must remember, isn't much bigger than a nickel bag of peanuts. Lon Warneke had a tough-luck season last year. Hubbell and Schumacher were winning from him by slender margins on unearned scores. The Arkansas cattle raiser was dropping heart-crackers.

I remember, at one time, he lost seven straight by one run and they showed me the ruins of a hot-water heater in the Boston Braves clubhouse he busted with his bat. This year the tide may turn. Hub may lose the tough ones, Lonnie may win them. Quien sabe, amigos?

I look for the Giant pitching to hold up. I think if Hub sags, Schumacher, Parmalee, Fitz or Clark will come through. That new ball will affect the infield. Ryan and Critz won't look so hot, although I hope they manage to stop those hot shots which undoubtedly will come their way. O'Doul will get more of those trickling hits down the first base line, but I don't like that double outfield shift, Davis, Moore, O'Doul and may be Peel or Wintrube. I look, too, for Terry to outhit Klein.

German Racing Driver Claims 3 New Marks

Berlin, March 6 (AP).—Hans Stuckvonvilleiz, German auto racing driver, today claimed three new world speed records after a day of driving up and down the Avus speedway between Berlin and Potsdam.

The new records claimed were a mark of 44 minutes 31.4 seconds for 100 miles, 55 minutes 16.6 seconds for 200 kilometers and 217.110 kilometers for an hour's driving.

Golf Pet Believed 'Dognaper' Victim

He is believed to have fallen into the hands of "dognapers." Stymie, a fox terrier and beagle-hound and son of the late Shorty, once the pride and joy of Professional George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring Country Club, apparently was snatched from the automobile in which he was riding last Friday afternoon.

Stymie is 2½ years old. His left eye is black; both ears are black, and his body is white save for a black spot as large as a dollar bill on his back. Like all beagles, he isbuilt low to the ground. When last seen he had a harness and license tag number 10936.

Mrs. Harvey's address is 302 Madison street northwest. Her phone number, Georgia 1544.

Martinsburg's Five Section Winner

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., March 6.—Martinsburg High School's five stood the undisputed champions of the Eastern Panhandle today, by reason of a double victory in the sectional tournament. By virtue of that victory, it will represent the tri-county area in the regional meet which will be held here Saturday.

After a hard, closely-contested game in the afternoon round when Berkeley Springs was defeated by seven points, the local Bulldogs were called upon to give everything they had to overcome a determined Shepherdstown quint that tied the score in the closing seconds of play and made an extra three-minute period necessary. The final count was 29 to 23.

Charles Town Wins Consolation.

Regional 3—Fairmont West, Grafton, Weston, Elkins.
Regional 4—Martinsburg, Keyser, Parsons.
Regional 8—Williamson, Mullens, Gary.

Martinsburg, Shepherdstown and Berkeley Springs were represented on the all-tournament team picked. The judges selected Miller, of Martinsburg, and Sweeney, of Shepherdstown, as forwards; Shockey, of Martinsburg, center and captain, and C. Ambrose, of Berkeley Springs and Stevens, of Shepherdstown, as guards. Honorable mention went to Daniels, of Shepherdstown and Trussell and League, of Charles Town.

Westrope Up, Mt. Hood Wins Orleans Feature

New Orleans, March 6 (AP).—With Johnny Westrope, the country's ranking rider last year, handling the reins, Mrs. R. Sullivan's Mount Hood today made a show of four other 3-year-olds to win the mile and one-sixteenth feature at the Fair Grounds.

Westrope rated Mount Hood back of the pace-setting Black Peter for three-quarters of a mile and then shot him to the front as the field rounded the curve leading into the home stretch.

Hagerstown Moose Beat Woodmen Five

Hagerstown, Md., March 6 (Spl.).—The Moose team won the first of a series of three games for the basket ball championship of Hagerstown from the Woodmen five, by the score of 36 to 24. The Woodmen were leading at the end of the first half, 17 to 15.

Roller Hockey Tonight.

Two newly-organized roller skating hockey teams will make their debut at the Silver Spring Armory rink tonight with the Forsyth Club meeting Dudley & Kiefer Pharmacists in a battle scheduled to get under way at 9 o'clock.

Smith Gains Final With Runyan

MIAMI, Fla., March 6 (AP).—The golfing "natural" of the winter campaign, a duel between two of the greatest short-range shotmakers in American professional ranks—diminutive Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., and slender Denny Shute, of Philadelphia, the British Open champion—brings the colorful international four-ball tournament to a vlimax tomorrow.

Twin scoring sensations of the $3,500 battle, Runyan and Shute will match their skill with irons and putters in the 36-hole final match over the 6,327-yard course of the Miami Country Club, aided and abetted, respectively, by Horton Smith, of Chicago, and Al Espinosa, of Akron, Ohio.

Are Slight Favorite.

Runyan and Smith, the defending champions, ruled a slight favorite tonight among the professionals to repeat their 1933 triumph, something that has not been done since the tournament was established as an annual fixture in 1926.

The "par-cracker twins" continue their explosive march through the field today at the expense of the veteran Walter Hagen, of Detroit, and his young Albany, N. Y., partner, Tom Greavy, with Smith contributing a full share of the shotmaking fireworks. He and Runyan were 8 up after a morning round in 63, 9 under par for their best ball, and sloshed through a thunderstorm this afternoon to win their semifinal match by 10 to 9.

Close With Spurt.

Shute and Espinosa, playing better in rain than they did in the sticky heat of the morning round, closed with a spurt that eliminated the veteran Bill Mehlhorn and Wiffy Cox, of Brooklyn, 5 and 4, in the other simifinal.

Up to the greens, Cox and Mehlhorn were a match for their rivals, but they were outclassed at the gentle art of putting. Shute was not so sensational as the day before when his shotmaking featured a run of ten consecutive threes, but the British open king was deadly with his putter in the pinches.

Under Even Fours.

Whereas the Shute-Espinosa team was seven under even fours for the day, Smith and Runyan combined to post a best ball that was eleven under even fours for 27 moles. The champions virtually settled the issue by negotiating the first nine in 30. Six under par, and becoming 5 up on the luckless Hagen and Creavy. Smith sank a 13-foot putt for an eagle on number one. Runyan's spoon and putter produced another eagle three on the seventh hole. Runyan ended the round with htree consecutive birdies, putting his side 8 up. The Smith-Runyan morning card of 63 was only one stroke short of the tournament record they set yesterday.

Hagen and Creavy outdrove their opponents most of the time but Walter couldn't find his putting touch and Tom was away off his short range game. The result was they never seriously threatened, won only three holes all day, the thirteenth, twentieth and twenty-third, and were glad to ket out from under the double downpour this afternoon.

Split Season Decided By Bi-State League

Martinsville, Va., March 6.—A meeting of directors of the Bi-State Baseball League was held at the Henry Hotel for the purpose of preparing a constitution and by-laws for the league for the coming season. J. F. Wilson, of Fieldale, league president, presided.

A playing schedule to include 80 or more games, four games to be played weekly and double-headers on holidays, was decided upon. A split season will be played, with winners in each half to play for the league championship.

Landers and Wolfram In Norfolk Go Friday

Norfolk, Va., March 6 (Spl.).—Billy Landers, Norfolk County's slugging bantam champion, and Frankie Wolfram, Winnepeg bantam ace, will meet in an eight-round tussle at the Virginia Athletic Club here Friday night.

It is billed as the feature event of the card of three set-to's. This will be Wolfram's first appearance in these parts, but his reputation is known here and he is expected to help swell the gate receipts. The Canadian fighter recently gave Midget Wolgast a tough evening and he is expected to keep Landers busy.

Martinsville Five Entered.

Martinsville, Va., March 6.—Martinsville's independent basket ball five has been entered in the Greensboro Y. M. C. A. tournament which is being played this week and next week. Martinsville plays Cone Memorial Y. M. C. A., of Greensboro, in its first game of the tournament Tuesday night. A victory for Martinsville will send the team back to Greensboro Friday to play High Point Y. M. C. A. in the semifinals. The finals will be played the following week.

Flint Shot, in Feature, Is One of Six Favorites to Triumph at Hialeah Park

Widener Ace 4-Length Victor

Round Table Second in Sloppy Going, With Shuffle Off Next.

Reign of Choices Ended as Patchpocket Accounts for Sixth.

HIALEAH PARK, March 6 (AP).—Although a heavy shower, which fell before the first race, left the racing strip so sloppy that horses and riders were covered with mud after the various events, favorites fared successfully here this afternoon, winning six of the seven races. When J. E. Widener's Florida Derby Hopeful, Flint Shot, sped home by four lengths in the fourth contest, it marked the fourth straight score for form players. Seven non-winners went postward for this 6-furlong dash and the Widener colt was on the head end all the way, Jockey Johnny Gilbert coming back spotless, while the other riders were hardly recognizable.

S. W. Labrot's Round Table was an easy second, having two lengths' advantage over H. P. Headley's Shuffle Off. The winner paid $3.20 and his time was 1:15 3-5. The clouds disappeared before this contest.

Flint Shot Always Leads.

Flint Shot never left his backers any apprehension. He darted right to the front from his outside position at the break and Gilbert urged him into a long lead. Shuffle Off and Round Table gave futile chase, with the former weakening in the last furlong. The others were badly outrun.

A torrential shower fell before the first race and the track was converted into a sea of slop. The field did not go to the post until about a half-hour after scheduled post time, after the rain stopped.

Earl Porter had the mount on Rego, the favorite, and the Geneva youngster brought the colt first home by a length and a half at $5.60 for $2. Appomattox was second, five spans before Zombro, the early pacemaker. Rego was kept close up and took command on the middle of the bend.

Fraidy Cat Nose Victor.

Fifteen maiden 2-year-olds splashed down the 3-furlong straightaway in the second race. Out of the horde emerged the heavily played Fraidy Cat to take a nose decision over Happy Helen, a field horse. Gay Music was third, two lengths away. Bobby Jones, who has fared well in juvenile dashes, brought Fraidy Cat from well back of the pace and the H. P. Headley gelding caught Happy Helen in the last stride to return $8.60.

Spartan Lady gave favorite players their third straight success when he led from end to end of the mile event, third on the card. Stealing a long lead shortly after the break, the daughter of Crusader ran David W into defeat in the first 6 furlongs and then lasted long enough to head the fast-closing Lone Hand. Lone Hand, outrun early, made up ground rapidly on the inside in the stretch run to beat David W by nearly two lengths. The winner paid $5.20.

Ladogan Wins Easily.

Ladogan made it five in a row for the talent, the son of Westy Hogan easily outrunning five other sprinters over the seven furlongs distance. Paying $5, the colt romped past the judges with five lengths to spare over Scythe. The latter beat Royal Gold a length.

The reign of the favorites ended with the running of the sixth race, a mile test. Herowin failed his backers, finishing a beaten off third in the field of five. Patchpocket was an easy victor by a length and a half over Pass Shot. The latter beat Herowin by ten lengths. After a half-mile, Patchpocket made Herowin stop and drew into a long lead. Pass Shot closed steadily but Tipton had the winner in hand. He paid $9.

Apprentice Litzenberger scored a double when Major General, at even money, gave favorite players their sixth triumph in the seventh event. Royal Durbar was beaten a head while saving the place by a half length from Spud.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Joseph Krall, Chicago man who lives without a stomach, is hale, hearty, and hungry most of the time. His case is rare in medical history, and he is so far as records reveal, the only man who leads a normal healthy life without so important an organ.

Strange as it seems, when they removed his stomach they also removed his appetite for liquor and tobacco. Before the operation, according to Krall, he liked both but since then he cares for neither. His appetite for foods, on the other hand, has increased greatly and now in spite of his six small meals a day he is generally hungry. Not only that, he is now able to eat and digest foods without his stomach which, while he had it, always gave him indigestion.

Fritz, whose real name is Furit Suit de Montreuil, is the champion Schnauzer papa in the country. Fritz is a 6-year-old, and in three years he has sired 112 puppies, 12 of which were in one litter—the biggest Schnauzer litter of record.

He has been judged best of breed 12 times in Pacific Coast dog shows, and five of his puppies have won similar distinction.

Dear Al: Hialeah Race Track, March 6.

Three and a half winners today for Bennings, Inc. Rego, Ladogan and Major General led their fields to the wire just as we predicted. We took credit for a half-winner on Flint Shot. The stable chose to scratch Pastry and shift Gilbert onto another horse. Well, anyway, what's a half a winner or so among friends. The crowds are thinning out here and I believe the grand rush is over. The fight crowd has drifted North and the natives have started arguing with strangers again BILL.

First race—Heiress has some encouraging races to her credit and should lead this pack to the wire. Ahmed figures to be close at the finish. The feather-weighted June Foster for the show.

Second race—Claremont has done about everything asked in this sector and comes to this test after a pair of smashing efforts. The logical choice. The King is assigned a crushing impost but is dangerous. Gracias may wake up.

Third race—Idle Victor looks like a winning favorite in this juvenile dash. Has good races and fast trials as recommendations. Blackbirder is a longshot possibility. Cheka to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Wedding Ring moves up on the heavy track. Turned a neat win for me not so long ago. Must beat Happy Scot and Vishnu. The latter has a good workout on Clocker Mike's list.

Fifth race—Gibby's Choice awoke with a bang last out and came through with a winning performance. Finds virtually the same track conditions and should repeat. Sky Haven is as sharp as a razor now. The big surprise of the race might be Dornoch. Loves the mud.

Sixth race — Gay Joe shapes up we llamong these. I'm told that the heavy going will not interfere. Jens Son, second twice, will be close. Fire Mask for the show end.

Seventh race—I'm going back to Butter Beans despite the presence of General Lejeune in the field. Just Fun has been trying to find a spot for weeks.

Banquet for Grid Coach.

Morgantown, W. Va., March 6 (Spl.).—Charles C. (Trusty) Tallman, the new head coach of football at West Virginia University, is to be honored with a banquet the evening of March 17.

Students, alumni, visitors and business and professional leaders of this section will welcome Tallman back to the campus, where he has been serving as a member of the Legislature from Mason County.

Bostwick Horse Wins in England

Chenango 2-Length-Victor in Challenge Cup Race.

Cheltenham, England, March 6 (AP).—George H. (Pete) Bostwick's Chenango, ridden by D. Morgan, today won the £1,200 2-mile Challenge Cup race by a margin of two lengths.

Reginald Smith's Pomple Moose was second, and three other horses also ran.

Miss Dorothy Paget's Golden Miller, one of the two favorites in the Grand National Steeplechase to be run at Aintree, won the £1,000 Cheltenham Gold Cup event from a field of five other horses. The field included J. B. Snow's Delaneige, the other favorite for Grand National honors, and Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Kellsboro Jack, winner of the 1933 National.

Golden Miller, with Briscoe up, breezed in six lengths ahead of the field over the 3-mile and 3-furlong course and became the clear favorite for the Grand National on March 23.

Bristol Court Tourney.

Bristol, Va., March 6 (Spl.).—Entries for the Appalachian Independent Basket Ball Tournament, to be held at the Bristol Y. M. C. A. during the week of March 12 are expected to come in rapidly this week. Deadline for entry has been set at midnight of next Friday, March 9, with pairings to be made on Saturday.

G. U. Freshmen Trim Preps, 44 to 33

TONY LATONA, high scorer of the public high school court series two years ago, broke out with a rash of baskets yesterday afternoon at Garrett Park as the Georgetown Freshmen defeated Georgetown Prep, 44-31, in a fast game. It was the Preps final appearance of the season.

The Frosh had a 23-14 lead at the half and added to this advantage in the final periods. Frank Allan, Maury Nee and Tom Keating were outstanding for the losers. Georgetown Prep finished the season with a record of 20 victories and 9 defeats.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—REGO, $5.60, $3.20, $2.80; APPOMATTOX, $6.90, $4.40; ZOMBRO, $6.30.

REGO was much the best. He shot to the front entering the stretch, drew out, but was driven out to win. APPOMATTOX closed with a rush. ZOMBRO showed good speed for 6 furlongs, then tired. KING HOLLISTER finished fast on the inside. APPREHENSIVE did not like the going.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs, nursery course (straightaway). Purse, $700. For maidens 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 3:18. Off at 3:24½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FRAIDY CAT, $8.60, $5.10, $3.50; HAPPY HELEN, $6.30, $3.60; GAY MUSIC, $4.50.

FRAIDY CAT worked his way up and, closing with a rush, won in the last stride. HAPPY HELEN, very fractious at the start, was placed on the outside of the stalls, broke fast, rushed over to the rail, assumed a long lead but weakened suddenly in the last 100 yards. GAY MUSIC got away well, showed good speed and is worth noting. DISTRACTING was well up all the way. MISS FIREFLY stood the long drive gamely. EARLY MAXWELL had no mishap.

THIRD RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800; claiming price $1,500 to $1,200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:54. Off at 3:59. Winner, H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPARTAN LADY, $5.20, $4.10, $3.10; LONE HAND $20.80, $6.10; DAVID W., $7.90.

SPARTAN LADY, at home in the going, rushed into the lead, showed good speed, but tired badly at the end and just lasted to win. LONE HAND broke slow, came to the inside in the stretch and finished with a rush. DAVID W., well up all the way, had no mishap. PERIODICAL was miserably ridden. FORT DEARBORN lacked speed and never was a factor.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 4:29. Off at 4:32½. Winner, Joseph E. Widener's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLINT SHOT, $3.20, $2.60, $2.40; ROUND TABLE, $4.90, $3.20; SHUFFLE OFF, $2.90.

FLINT SHOT ran as if he outclassed his field. He broke on top, made all the pace and won unextended. ROUND TABLE was kept out in the middle of the track and finished gamely. SHUFFLE OFF, on the inside for the entire trip, tired at the end. THE TRIUMVIR made a bid around the turn, but weakened in the stretch. BROWN BAB had speed for 3 furlongs.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $800; claiming price, $2,000 to $1,500. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:00. Off at 5:02. Winner, A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADOGAN, $5.00, $3.70, $3.10; SCYTHE, $5.80, $3.50; ROYAL GOLD, $3.00.

LADOGAN was much the best. He ran into an early lead, drew away, saved ground and was only galloping at the end. SCYTHE ran a real good race in the going he did not like. ROYAL GOLD broke fast, but was allowed to drop far back, moved up on the turn, went very wide in the stretch and finished fast. AUNT FLOR was well up from the start. CABOCHON quit badly. MARGE did not like the mud.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). The Brighton. Purse, $800; claiming price $3,000 to $2,500. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:31. Off at 5:33½. Winner, G. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PATCHPOCKET, $9.00, $3.60, out; PASS SHOT, $3.20, out; HEROWIN, out.

PATCHPOCKET was much the best. He got away well, raced HEROWIN into defeat in the first half mile, then drew out into a long lead and won easing up. PASS SHOT was outrun in the early part, closed with a rush in the last 3 furlongs and was next best. HEROWIN moved up with a rush in the run down the back stretch, but quit to a walk. DISTRIBUTE had no mishap. STEELHEAD was outrun.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and a furlong. Purse, $800; claiming price $1,500 to $1,200. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:59. Off at 6:01. Winner, J. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAJOR GENERAL, $4.00, $2.60, out; ROYAL DURBAR, $2.70, out; SPUD, out.

MAJOR GENERAL was rated along behind ROYAL DURBAR for the first half mile, moved up entering the stretch, closed gamely and held on well. ROYAL DURBAR was sent to the front with a rush, displayed keen speed, saved ground and ran a good race. SPUD came around the field on the turn and finished with a rush. POLITICAL and DUNFERN were both outrun.

Stocks Decline In Atmosphere Of Indecision

New York, March 6 (AP).—Financial markets appeared to be muscle-bound today and prices in most categories sagged a little in an atmosphere of indecision.

The apathy in stock trading was the most pronounced since January 8 last, with only 813,010 shares changing hands. The average for 90 selected issues showed a net loss of 1.1 points, at 86.4.

The stand-off attitude of both the public and professional operators was exemplified by the fact that bid and offer prices of some of the leaders were frequently printed on the ticker tape. American Can, for instance, opened only about a minute before the close with a transfer of 200 shares at a loss of ⅞ of a point.

Constructions on NRA Talk.

The market had to contend with a variety of constructions placed on the President's speech. The opinion was general, however, that the Executive's challenge to industry to raise wages and lower working hours was scarcely bullish for equities, at least for the moment. Longer term views, though, envisaged a sounder recovery based on widespread employment and the expansion of the Nation's spending power.

Intimations from Senator Robinson, the Democratic floor leader, that legislation for the Federal control of securities markets might be side-tracked this session of Congress, apparently had little effect on equities. It was remarked that only a few weeks ago such an indication might have brought a brisk rally in stocks.

There was some nervousness shown over the possibility of labor troubles in the important automotive plants of Michigan. Hope that further labor difficulties in this key industry would be avoided was seen in the sending of a representative of the National Labor Board to Detroit to mediate the controversy.

Little Change in Trade.

There was little change in the trade picture. Retail sales were reported to be recovering from their brief snowbound lag. The American Metal Market found that the "demand for steel continues to rise easily and smoothly, without making a spectacular showing in any particular, and the market seems to be in a healthy condition." As mills have been doing better than their schedule, it was thought that actual production in the week might be above 48 per cent.

The silver issues were irregular, although United States Smelting rallied nearly a point. American Telephone, Consolidated Gas and a number of others were unchanged. Losers of fractions to a point or more included Du Pont, International Harvester, Sears-Roebuck, General Motors Chrysler, New York Central, Sante Fe, United States Steel, Western Union and Westinghouse. Case lost about 2, but Auburn held a gain of 1⅛.

London—Oil, rubber and brewery shares attracted the most attention on the stock exchange today and registered firmer prices. Profit-taking caused irregularity in recent favorites, which included industrials, home rails and gilt-edged securities; but the undertone was maintained. Argentine rails advanced 1 to 2 points on the reported improvement in grain. The market closed steady.

Paris—Repurchases by recent sellers advanced prices on the bourse, particularly those on rentes, Citroen and oil shares. The closing was steady.

Berlin—Quotations on the boerse were firm, with mining shares active on the Polish-German trade treaty. The market closed slightly lower.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Record of Past Several Months Does Not Provide Support for Further Arbitrary Reduction of Hours and Increase of Wages.

By Ralph West Robey.

Last summer, when the thesis of shorter hours and higher wages first was offered by the Administration as a recovery measure, the proposal had to be debated largely as a matter of economic theory. We simply did not have statistics either to prove or disprove the thesis. No nation before ever had adopted such a program as a means of lifting itself from a depression. On the contrary the emergence from all earlier depressions had been characterized by business improvement preceding wage increases. In appraising the current suggestion of the President that we go farther in the direction of shorter hours and higher wages, however, we are in better condition with regard to facts. We now have had several months of actual experience with this proposal as a recovery measure.

This does not mean, of course, that the data are as yet conclusive. In fact it is inevitable that they should not be. The period has been short, the statistics incomplete and in many instances conflicting, and throughout the time there have been scores of other forces continuing to exert their influence upon the economic system. In spite of these limitations, however, the record it worth attention.

NRA and Reserve Board Data Do Not Agree.

Or perhaps it would be more accurate to say that apparently there are two records and that both must be weighed. The first of these is what may be termed the official NRA view. According to this, as given, among other places, by Gen. Johnson in Washington on February 27, the results have been all that were expected. His factual basis for this statement is a census taken last fall by NRA in cooperation with the Census Bureau. This study "on the most conservative basis showed a reemployment under codes and agreements at that time of 2,750,000 and an increased pay roll of $3,000,000,000." The general's own belief, he says, "is that the actual figure of reemployment was more than 3,000,000."

The second record consists of the statistics compiled by the Division of Research and Statistics of the Federal Reserve Board. These give quite a different story, although since they are published in the form of index numbers (1923-1925 average equal to 100) it is impossible to measure the exact discrepancy. In making an analysis of what has happened three dates may be used: July, as the month in which the first codes were signed; September, as the first month in which NRA was running more or less full force, and January, the last figures available.

Record Does Not Support Thesis NRA Has Been Success.

For industrial production as a whole the Reserve Board index for July was 100 (adjusted for seasonal variation). By September it had fallen to 84. For January the figure is 78.

The residential construction index (the total construction figures contain too much Government building to be valuable for the present purpose) for July was 13 (adjusted). For September it was 12, for January also 12.

The freight car loading index (adjusted) for July was 65, for September 60, and for January 64.

The index for factory employment (adjusted) for July was 70, for September 74, and for January 72.

The index for factory pay rolls (unadjusted) for July was 50, for September 58 and for January 53.

This, then, in brief, is the record of the effects of our experience with shorter hours and higher wages as reflected in Reserve Board indices of business. It does not support the thesis that we have made any appreciable progress in pulling ourselves out of the depression by this means. Of course there is the other side—the data submitted by Gen. Johnson—but even granting their accuracy, the fact remains that business movements appear to show little or no correlation with NRA activities. It seems to me, therefore, that now not only does economic logic provide no support for making a further arbitrary reduction of hours and increase of wages, but as well that our experience points strongly against it as an effective recovery measure.

Exchange Membership Sold.

New York, March 6 (AP).—A New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange membership has been sold at $6,500, unchanged from the previous sale.

Dried Fruits Steady.

Employment Increases.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 6 (AP). Employment here during February showed an increase of 6.7 per cent over January and reached the highest figure since August, 1930. One hundred firms reporting had 63,824 men gainfully employed March 1, against 59,840 a month pervious.

Bond Market Is Unchanged; At 84.4 Level

Selling Flurry Marks Rail Group; Sales Rise to $12,395,000.

New York, March 6 (AP).—A flurry of selling in the Van Sweringen rail group loans and marked firmness in the United States Government division gave a little color to an otherwise featureless bond market today.

Trading volume was somewhat above the previous day's total at $12,395,000, but, despite steadiness over much of the active list, the average price for 60 leading corporate issues was unchanged.

Published reports, later denied, that Van Sweringen bank loans, amounting to more than $40,000,000, were in technical default and that the banking creditors might seek to gain control of underlying collateral, brought heavy selling into the loans of Alleghany Corporation, as well as some issues of the Van Sweringen operating companies during the early trading.

Denial by Bankers.

A prompt denial from the interested banking sources that there had been an actual default was followed by rallying tendencies, but in spite of this reversal in trend many of the Van Sweringen bonds closed well down on the day.

U. S. Governments displayed more life on a rising trend in response to the announcement that the Treasury's March 15 financing plans would be made known on Thursday.

Specialists in Governments, noting the brief time allotted for the operation, concluded that the forth-coming offering would be of routine character, consisting of a combination of notes and certificates.

Treasury 3s Lead.

Treasury 3s led the upward movement in the Federal group with a gain of ½ point. In most of the other Treasurys improvement ranged from 1-32d to 6-32s of a point.

Moderately higher prices were paid for some loans of Chicago & North Western, Cleveland Union Terminal, Detroit Edison, Illinois Central, Kansas City Southern, New Haven, Pan American Petroleum and Texas Corp., among others.

Some of the active groups had soft spots involving losses ranging from fractions to around a point, but it appeared that such trends were due to general thinness of markets, other than heavy selling.

It was a quiet session in the foreign sector with prices showing general steadiness within narrow price swings. Belgian loans showed fair gains on moderate dealings. The Germans were mixed as were South American issues.

Tobacco Net Is Reduced to $17,401,207

Celanese Company Declares $1.75 Regular Quarterly Dividend.

New York, March 6 (AP).—The annual report of the American Tobacco Co. shows net income in 1933 of $17,401,207, after depreciation, taxes and other charges, but before preferred dividends. This compares with net income of $43,269,026 in 1932, which was, after deducting, $512,293 net loss on sale of securities and $312,487 miscellaneous deductions.

After paying dividends on the preferred stock amounting to $3,161,982, the company carried $14,239,225 to the surplus account, out of which was paid during the year $23,719,148 on account of dividends on the common and common "B" stock. At the end of the year the surplus account totaled $108,627,694.

The Celanese Corporation of America today declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 on the 7 per cent cumulative series preferred stock, payable April 1 to stock of record March 16.

San Francisco, March 6 (AP). — Natomas Co. announced today its decision to split the stock 10 for 1 and voted an extra dividend of $1.25 a share in addition to the regular dividend of the same size. It reported January earnings of $59,767, or 60 cents a share, compared with $31,819 in January, 1933. The dividends are payable April 2 on records of March 15. The company engages in land and gold dredging operations.

Bonds—Selling flurries in the Van Sweringen rail group and firmness in Federal issues marked trading. In the end prices remained unchanged at the 84.4 level. Sales increased to $12,395,000.

Curb — Prices drifted slightly lower in quiet trading. Minor irregularities marked alcohols, metals and oils. Trading volume declined to 225,000 shares.

Wheat—Reports of improved crop conditions caused wheat to decline. The volume of trading was lightest for some time. Other grains joined the slump. May wheat sold at 87⅛; July, at 86¼.

Cotton—Control bill reports failed to aid prices in any division. March sold at 12:01. The general market declined 8 to 12 points. May closed at 12.12.

Rubber—Crude rubber futures closed quiet, 8 to 18 points higher. Santos No. 4 sold at 10.71; May at 10.93.

Gold—Bar gold in the United sold at $35 per ounce. It sold in London at 137 shillings and 2 pence.

Dollar—The United States dollar was quiet in foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $5.07¼ to the English pound; 6.58 cents to the French franc and 39.68 cents to the German mark.

Wheat Reacts On Improved Crop Prospects

Trade Volume Is Lightest for Some Time; Other Grains Decline.

Chicago, March 6 (AP).—Favorable crop advices regarding domestic winter wheat did a good deal today to bring about a moderate downturn of values for all grain.

Especially influential toward weakening of the wheat market was a comprehensive summary from railroad sources covering crop conditions in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

It was emphasized also that according to records over a long period wheat prices have shown a general seasonal tendency to decline during March.

Wheat Closes Unsteady.

With trade volume the lightest witnessed in some time, wheat closed unsteady at the day's low point, ½ to ¾ under yesterday's finish; corn, ⅝ to ½ off; oats, ⅜ to 1 cent down and provisions at 7 to 17 cents decline.

Brokers said downturns of wheat prices were due more to lack of aggressive buying than to any material pressure to sell. Uncertainty over proposed legislative measures at Washington and as to grain code developments appeared to be largely responsible for keeping speculative demand within narrow limits. Aside from a brief interval at the outset, buyers were scarce almost the entire day, with the market showing little power to rally.

Buying of Corn.

Some buying of corn against selling of oats provided a feature of interest. It was contended that May corn at around 52 cents was cheaper pound for pound than May oats at 35 cents.

Assertions were also made that although farm reserve stocks of oats are relatively smaller than reserve of corn, new oats will be available in about four months. Besides, distilling interests were said to be holders of May corn futures and would accept deliveries on contracts, whereas May oats speculatively held must either be liquidated or changed over into the July or September futures before delivery date.

May oats, which yesterday were at a premium over July, went to a discount today, and showed 1 cent net decline. March corn in Rotterdam was quoted as ⅜ of a cent higher than wheat. Clearances of 38,000 bushels of corn to be shipped overseas were reported.

Provisions sympathized with downturns of grain values.

Wool Market.

Boston, March 6 (A.P.).—U. S. Department of Agriculture.—A scattered demand was received on Ohio and similar fleeces. Fine Ohio delaine wool was sold in small quantities at 35@36 cents, grease basis. French combing staple out of similar lines realized 30@31 cents, in the grease. Strictly combing 48s, 50s, ¼ blood, Ohio wool sold at 40 cents, in the grease, compared with a sale a few weeks ago at 41 cents. Some houses continued to hold firmly at 41@42 cents for their ¼ blood Ohio wool.

Trade Outlook Is Hopeful as March Opens

Most Industries Expect Continued Advance to Higher Levels.

New York, March 6.—The first of the month outlook for various important divisions of industry is summarized by the Standard Statistics Co., of New York, as follows:

Agricultural machinery—Cyclical recovery in this industry promises to be extensive, with both sales and profits recording sharp betterment.

Automobile parts—The indicated further upturn in car and truck assemblies in coming months points to a continued high rate of operations in automotive parts plants.

Automobile tires—Total tire output, aided by larger original equipment takings and by the approach of the active season for retail replacement business, is expected to register further gains into the summer.

Building—Under the impetus of the public works program and more favorable conditions for the initiation of private building, activity during the coming months should be approximately double that of a year ago.

Chemicals—The limiting influence of inventories accumulated late last year is now less pronounced, and sales expansion should closely parallel further gains in general industrial activity.

Coal—While anthracite production has been stimulated sharply by the unusually cold weather, it is doubtful that this fuel has permanently regained any of the market lost to competitors. In the bituminous division, both cold weather and the upward trend of industrial activity and railroad traffic have stimulated production.

Electrical equipment — Revival in demand for heavy equipment will be slow, although sales of the lighter lines should keep pace with any further business expansion.

Food products—Possibly Governmental regulations is clouding the outlook for several lines, but expanding sales and rising prices should insure satisfactory operations for most producers over the near future.

Leather and shoes—The early Easter has stimulated demand for footwear and production of both leather and shoes is expected to increase moderately during March.

Machinery — Broad improvement in demand for industrial equipment continues. Machine tools and construction machinery should make the best relative records.

Metals (Nonferrous)—The prospect that the copper code will be adopted soon, thereby eliminating some of the uncertainties in the industry, should induce consumers to adopt a more liberal buying policy. Lead and zinc consumption is likely to register a relatively greater increase as general business recovery progresses, because of the greater diversity of uses of these metals.

Paper—Stability of prices and the prospects for greater demand have improved the outlook in this field.

Petroleum—Indications that production in Texas will be adequately controlled suggest that total domestic output will be held in balance with rising consumptive requirements.

Railroad equipment—With extensive capital improvement programs already well under way, aided by PWA loans approximating $225,000,000 and a higher level of railroad earnings, prospects are that leading producers in this field will be operating on a profitable basis by the second quarter.

Shipping—Most shipyards are now getting into production on naval contracts received in 1933, and have prospects of additional naval business during the next two years. As weather conditions moderate, domestic shipping lines probably will experience the best demand for their services since 1931, while moderate expansion of activity on foreign routes is looked for.

Steel—Active demand from automobile and miscellaneous industries, as well as heavier orders from the railroads, promise further gains in activity during March. The monthly average should exceed 50 per cent of capacity.

Sugar—The prospect that legislation shortly will be enacted to stabilize this industry suggests that sugar prices will be well maintained over the next few months.

Textiles—Further gains in output are expected during the immediate future, but production during the later spring months will be below the unusually high 1933 levels.

Tobacco—Despite erratic monthly fluctuations, cigarette consumption is expected to record only a moderate increase this year, while Government pressure and potential competition from the 10-cent brands should prevent further price advances. Cigar prospects are darkened by relatively rigid prices, rising costs and prospective modest unit volume gains.

Utilities—Some improvement in power output, gas sales and telephone traffic will be witnessed in line with generally improved economic conditions. Increasing fuel and labor costs, as well as higher taxes and rate reduction, are expected to restrict the profits from this additional business.

Visible Coffee Supply.

New York March 6 (AP).—The world's visible supply of coffee on March 1 totaled 7,563,861 tons against 7,718,413 bags on February 1, the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange reports.

Copper's Tone Turns Steadier Under Buying

Tin Quieter; Lead Price Steady and Unchanged; Demand Firm.

New York, March 6 (AP).—A somewhat steadier undertone developed in copper during the week owing to absorption of small resale offerings at slight concessions and appearance of moderate buying interest for prompt shipment at the producers' quotation of 8 cents for electrolytic.

Foreign demand continued fair, at prices slightly above the domestic basis, aiding the tone of the market.

Tin was quieter, but fluctuations were narrower. Slight declines early in the week were recovered later in sympathy with the action of sterling. Purchases of metal by consumers thus far this year are said to be under consumption. Tin-plate mill operations continued at around 60 per cent of capacity.

Lead Is Steady.

Lead was steady and unchanged. Moderate daily buying from various consuming branches for March shipment was reported. Battery and cable makers were said to be among the more prominent buyers. Demand was centered in nearby requirements, with little interest thus far for April needs.

Zinc was quiet. Inquiry was confined to prompt carload lots, with smelters holding prices unchanged. While sellers hoped that expanding steel operations would result in improved demand, interest centered principally in the ore situation, and efforts being made to improve the supply and demand position through a program of mine curtailment.

While somewhat better interest in antimony was attracted by continued firmness of Chinese prices, forecasting higher futures replacement costs, business was still limited. Sellers held firm, however.

Steel Trade Optimistic.

On top of a further rise in steel operations to the officially estimated 45.7 per cent of ingot capacity in the past week, the steel trade continued optimistic of further gains.

Appearance of a greater variety of orders from miscellaneous industries, following sustained support from automotive manufacturers, was reported. Actual receipt of orders at mills for railroad cars and construction equipment was expected to be followed by further rail orders.

Prices were unchanged. Sales and shipments of pig iron were increasing in some districts, but quiet conditions were reported elsewhere.

Auto Exports Of Canada Up At First of '34

Canadian exports of motor vehicles and parts during January, 1934, more than doubled shipments in January, 1933, according to figures compiled in the Commerce Department's automotive-aeronautics trade division.

The export valuation in January, 1934, totaled $908,169, an increase of 146 per cent higher than the December, 1933, figure of $744,416.

For the first time since March, 1932, shipments of trucks exceeded those of passenger cars by 76 units. Of the passenger cars exported, 981 were in the classification valued at $500 or less, 126 units were valued from $500 to $1,000, and 11 over $1,000. Of truck shipments, 1,025 units were over 1-ton capacity and 241 of 1 ton or less.

December, 1933, passenger car exports increased from 1,062 to 1,118 units, although trucks increased materially from 583 to 1,266 units. Gains over January, 1933, were substantially higher, passenger car shipments showing an increase of 286 per cent from 289 to 1,118 units and trucks 580 per cent, from 186 to 1,266 units.

Production of 6,904 motor vehicles in Canada during January, 1934, marked an improvement of 112 per cent over the 3,262 units in December, and 105 per cent over the January, 1933, output of 3,358. Output of passenger cars advanced from 2,171 in December to 4,946 and trucks from 1,091 to 1,958.

Cotton Farms Get Fresh Work-Stock

New York, March 6.—Southern cotton farmers have been buying work-stock more freely in recent months than for several years, but their purchases have been entirely to replace old and worn-out mules rather than to build up their total numbers of workstock, according to a report issued today by the New York Cotton Exchange Service.

From 1930 through 1932, many farmers were not financially able to buy new mules and were forced to get along with old, inefficient workstock. Recently, however, money has been more plentiful with them as a result of higher cotton prices and Government benefit payments, and many farmers have been replacing their worn-out mules.

"Reported large sales of mules and horses in the cotton belt are borne out by records of receipts of workstock at public stock yards in Southern cities," says the Cotton Exchange Service. "During the four-month period from September 1 to December 31, 1933, receipts of horses and mules at Atlanta, Montgomery, Memphis, Oklahoma City, Fort Worth and San Antonio totaled 55,013 as compared with 16,356 in the corresponding four months in 1932, 5,370 in 1931, 12,658 in 1930, 47,986 in 1929 and 42,798 in 1928."

Corporate Earnings Increase Almost 195 Per Cent in 1933

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, March 6 (AP).—Black is blotting out red in corporation ledgers. Annual statements now appearing tell an impressive story for 1933.

Industrials, as a group, got out of the vermillion. Rails almost made the switch from loss to profit. Utilities, the only one of the three major groups that showed black figures for 1932, reported moderately reduced, although still substantial, earnings last year.

Here's the story in figures, as Standard Statistics Company tells it. A tabulation of annual statements of 701 corporations, comprising industrials, rails and utilities, shows aggregate net income of $704,884,000 for 1933, as against $239,115,000 for 1932. This is an increase of nearly 195 per cent.

A total of 589 industrial companies showed net earnings of $391,600,000, as against a deficit of $20,194,000 in 1932. Fifty-five railroads, which had a deficit of $106,055,000 in 1932, showed a group loss of only $11,199,000 for 1933. Fifty-seven utility companies, reporting net of $365,364,000 in 1932 had net income in 1933 of $324,483,000. This was a decline of little more than 11 per cent.

Steel and iron companies still ran behind, but not so seriously. Statements of 31 companies show a 1933 deficit of $58,826,000, compared with $137,098,000 in 1932. The largest aggregate net shown for any industrial classification in the tabulation last year was chalked up for 61 food products companies, and amounted to $90,063,000, compared with net of $53,014,000 for the previous period.

Eight makers of automobiles and trucks had net for last year almost as large, amounting to $87,926,000. That replaced an aggregate deficit for 1932 of $14,602,000. Fourteen makers of chemicals and fertilizer cleared net of $53,680,000, against $34,614,000 in the previous year.

Canada Rubber Goods Exports Gain Sharply

The value of rubber manufactured goods exported from Canada during January of the current year exceeded those for January, 1933, by more than 100 per cent, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Commercial Attache H. M. Bankhead, Ottawa. The total value of the January, 1934, shipments was $889,492 compared with $418,508 in January, 1933.

Pneumatic tire casings, valued at $409,117, accounted for 48 per cent of the January exports and were shipped to 61 countries. The leading markets were British South Africa, British India, New Zealand, the Netherlands and British East Africa.

The rubber boot and shoe industry shared in the increased trade, the value of January exports of these items amounting to $249,424. The United Kingdom was the principal outlet shipments to that market reaching a value of $152,586. Exports of canvas shoes with rubber soles amounted to 111,540 pairs, with the United Kingdom the outstanding purchaser.

Imports of rubber, chiefly raw, into Canada during January were valued at $529,000 compared with $201,000 in January, 1933. Imports from the United States, valued at $423,000 compared with $157,000 in January, 1933, an increase of 233 per cent. The value of rubber imports from the United Kingdom remained practically unchanged, the January, 1934, gain being less than 5 per cent compared with the corresponding month of last year.

Missouri Pacific Line Loads Total 21,651 Cars

New York, March 6 (AP).—Revenue freight car loadings on the Missouri Pacific Railroad for the week ended March 3 amounted to 21,651, compared with 20,510 in the previous week and 17,179 in the same week last year.

New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad loaded 12,630 cars during the week, compared with 12,272 and 9,743, respectively, in the preceding week and the same week a year ago.

Revenue loadings on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy for the week ended March 3 totaled 21,168 cars, compared with 19,906 in the previous week, which included a holiday, and 16,592 in the same week a year ago.

St. Louis-San Francisco handled 12,053 cars in the week, compared with 12,048 in the previous week and 10,499 in the same week last year.

Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific system loaded 19,386 cars, against 18,660 in the preceding week and 16,949 in the 1933 period.

Business Is Improving.

New York, March 6 (AP).—Business is improving in industrial centers with few exceptions, the magazine American Machinist reported. The wide variety of orders and the decrease in supply of good used machines were cited as favorable indications.

Status of World Business

The recent Italian loan conversion schedules the complete amortization of the consolidated debt in 42 years with an annual economy of almost 920,000,000 lire beginning in 1937.

Austrian foreign trade last year showed a considerably smaller adverse balance than in 1932; mineral oils and bread grains were the leading imports, and lumber, iron goods and paper the principal exports.

The balance of Bulgarian trade in 1933 was favorable as against a small import excess in 1932, owing principally to a heavy decline in imports last year while exports were falling to a smaller extent.

Colombian business advanced moderately during February, with coffee prices the highest since 1929 and other agricultural prices also higher; foreign trade figures for 1933 show a maintenance of the export surplus.

Chinese imports during January were larger than in the previous year, while exports showed a moderate decline; New Year settlements were generally satisfactory, although a few small firms were forced to obtain extensions.

Business conditions remain difficult in the Philippines, although the outlook is somewhat more optimistic.

Kelvinator Sales Jump In February

Detroit, Mich., March 6.—February shipments of Kelvinator Corporation, totaling 20,943 units, were more than 300 per cent of those for the corresponding month of 1933 and brought total shipments for the first five months of the company's present fiscal year up to a point 78 per cent ahead of those for the same period of the previous year, it has been announced by H. W. Burritt, vice president in charge of sales.

The end of the month found unfilled orders still on hand 403 per cent in excess of those on the books at the same time last year and orders received during the month were 461 per cent greater than those received in February 1933.

The new record, which makes the month just passed 228 per cent of the best previous February in Kelvinator's 20 years of existence, exceeds the shipment record of any single month in the so-called boom years of 1928 and 1929, Mr. Burritt said. He pointed out that it was established at the same time that Kelvinator Corporation was inaugurating its 1934 advertising and sales campaign, greatest in the company's history.

"Dealers and distributors in every section of the country are sharing our optimism over 1934 prospects," Mr. Burritt said, "and without exception they are preparing to get their share of business during what we confidently expect will prove to be the biggest year the electric refrigeration industry ever has experienced."

Cold Snap Lifts Coffee Use to 52-Year Peak

New York, March 6.—Confirming a recent study made by the Statistician of the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange, which showed a direct relationship between coffee consumption and cold weather, the deliveries of coffee into consumptive channels in the United States during February totaled 1,363,516 bags, the largest quantity for any one month in the 52-years history of the exchange.

January's deliveries were 1,106,809 bags and February, last year, but 980,000 bags.

Consumption for the eight months of the crop year from July 1, 1933, to February 28, 1934, amounted to 8,289,708 bags—an increase of 13.3 per cent over the 7,315,819 bags delivered during the similar 1932-33 period.

LEGAL NOTICES

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT of Columbia. H. Theodore Sorg, Newark, New Jersey, plaintiff, vs. Bud Dress Shop, a corporation, 1206 G street northwest, defendant. Equity No. 56746. Notice of publication. Notice is hereby given that all persons, firms or corporations having claims or demands against the defendant, the Bud Dress Shop, a corporation, are required, on or before the FIFTEENTH DAY OF APRIL, 1934, under penalty of thereafter having said claims or demands disallowed in the discretion of this court, to file the same with Harold P. Gaines, ancillary receiver, at 1518 K street northwest, City of Washington, District of Columbia, which said claims or demands shall be supported by affidavit and shall set out the amount and nature of any security or lien held by the claimant or to which the claimant is entitled, if any, and also any claims of preference or priority in payment out of the assets in the hands of the ancillary receiver in this cause in this jurisdiction, provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in a newspaper published and in general circulation in the District of Columbia and in the Washington Law Reporter, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before the return day. Witness this court this 27th day of February, 1934. DANIEL W. O'DONOGHUE, Justice. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) FRANK E. CUNNINGHAM, Clerk. By C. E. STEWART, Jr., Asst. Clerk. 28,7,14

AUCTION SALES

FRIDAY, MARCH 9, 1934—
ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF TWO STORY BRICK DWELLING, NO. 1244 SECOND STREET SOUTHWEST.

By virtue of a deed of trust recorded February 4, 1925, of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will offer for sale by public auction, in front of premises, on FRIDAY, THE NINTH DAY OF MARCH, 1934 AT THREE O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described property in the District of Columbia, to-wit: Lot 90 in Oliver Cox's subdivision of lots in square 567, in the City of Washington, District of Columbia, as per plat recorded in Book 16, Page 39, in the office of the surveyor for said District.

TERMS OF SALE—One-fourth of the purchase-money to be paid in cash, balance in equal installments, represented by promissory notes of purchaser payable in one, two and three years, with interest at 6 per cent per annum from day of sale, payable semi-annually, secured by first deed of trust upon property sold, or all cash, at option of purchaser. A deposit of $100.00 required of purchaser at sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. Terms to be complied with within 30 days from day of sale, otherwise trustees reserve the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit trustees may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

Boys and Girls WIN A Musical Instrument Absolutely FREE!

It's easy! Here's the story . . . we are organizing in our own store a band for boys and girls, but we haven't a name, so, we are giving absolutely free to the boy or girl who sends in the name that we decide is most suitable for the band his or her choice of a clarinet, cornet, drum, etc., and one year's free instruction. It's very simple . . . only one rule . . . no contestant over 16 years is eligible. Bring or mail in your entry on the slip below. If any additional information is wanted call us.

Walt Mason, Himself

Lucky Shots.

The hard may labor all his days, producing epics, odes and lays, and always hoping he'll acquire the wreath immortal, with his lyre. And one by one his efforts fail, and he grows weary, old and stale; he sees that he will not attain the noble heights, the higher plane, and settles down to writing junk, to earn a ruble or a plunk. And then, perhaps, in hopeless mood, in weariness and solitude, he will produce a little rhyme that shall endure till end of time. Toplady wrote a thousand screeds, explaining divers points of creeds; he wrote about a million tracts, all loaded down with helpful facts, he swamped the people with his stuff, although they long had cried, "Enough!" One day, grown tired of quarrels vain, of controversies quite insane, of rending foeman limb from limb, he wrote his "Rock of Ages" hymn. And it's the only thing that keeps his name from out oblivion's deeps; his tracts and sermons all are gone, but that fine little hymn lives on. Poor Collins yearned for deathless fame, and bravely played the poet's game. He wrote some eclogues which were good, and odes that charmed the neighborhood, but still he couldn't gain renown that passed the borders of the town. Among third-raters he might pass; he'd never reach the higher class. And then he wrote, fatigued, distressed, "How sleep the brave who sink to rest," and, backed up by that little rhyme, he marches down the halls of time.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Helping the Doctor By Harry J. Tuthill

AS I STARTED TO EXPLAIN ON THE PHONE DOCTOR, HE DOESN'T TALK MUCH AND CAN'T REMEMBER HIS NAME AND...
HE WAS SCARED, DOC, BY THOSE RED-HOTS WHO HAD HIM AT THE OTHER HOUSE.
THEY FOUGHT WITH DAGGERS, THE BOY WAS SO FRIGHTENED WHEN THE WOMAN LEFT HIM WITH US.
FRIGHT CAN DO ANYTHING. I KNOW. FOR WEEKS AFTER WALL STREET TURNED TURTLE I WAS PRACTICALLY SPEECHLESS.
HE'S MUCH BETTER THAN HE WAS. ALL EXCEPT THAT HE CAN'T REMEMBER HIS NAME.
I EXAMINED HIM THOROUGHLY AND CHECKED UP ON EVERYTHING IN OUR MEDICAL BOOKS.
MY THEORY, DOC, IS...
I FEEL SURE...
AHEM! THE CHILD SEEMS TO BE IN EXCELLENT CONDITION. HIS MEMORY LAPSE IS NO DOUBT ONLY TEMPORARY. REST AND TIME WILL HELP AND I'LL WATCH HIM CLOSELY.

W. Easby-Smith Funeral Rites Set Tomorrow

Retired Federal Telephone Official, 77, Died in Baltimore.

William Easby-Smith, 77, of West Falls Church, Va., under whose supervision word of the first successful flight of the Wright brothers at Kitty Hawk, N. C., was telephoned to the outside world, died Monday at Baltimore.

Funeral services will be held here at the home of his son, Paul Easby-Smith, 4808 Kansas avenue northwest, tomorrow at 9:15 a. m., with requiem high mass at St. Gabriel's Catholic Church. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mr. Easby-Smith died in Mercy Hospital, Baltimore, of which his daughter, Sister du Chantel, is superintendent. He had been ill four weeks.

Born on Capitol Hill in 1856 in the residence of his gr. ndfather, while his father, William Russell Smith, was representing Alabama in the House, Mr. Easby-Smith spent most of his adult life in the Government service. He was one of the earliest observers and forecasters in the Weather Bureau, then under the Army Signal Corps. Later he was superintendent of telephones lines of the Life Saving Service, now the Coast Guard, on the Virginia and Carolina coasts. He retired in 1923.

In addition to his son and Sister du Chantel, Mr. Easby-Smith is survived by four daughters, Mrs. M. W. Chadwick, Mrs. Margaret Erwin and Miss Ann Easby-Smith, all of Washington, and Mrs. Kathleen Slaughter, of Cordova, Md. He also is survived by a brother, Col. James S. Easby-Smith, four sisters and 16 grandchildren. Pallbearers will be members of the Holy Name Society of Falls Church, of which he was president.

Thief Wears 'Em Away, Old Clothes Left Behind

Fisherville School Ready Within Week

Staunton, Va., March 6 (Spl.). Twenty-five workmen, many of them from CWA rolls, are making progress on the ten-room school "shanty" at Fisherville, near here, in which pupils will complete the session. The building probably will be completed by Tuesday.

The Fisherville School was destroyed by fire last Thursday.

Low Bridge Bidder.

Covington, Va., March 6 (Spl.). The firm of Haley, Chisolm & Morris, Inc., of Charlottesville, was the low bidder on the bridge over Dunlap Creek on Route 60, near Callaghan in Alleghany County. The firm's bid was $20,836.92.

Radio Waves and Ripples

JUST why Mrs. McGuire should have written us about this is more than we are able to understand. Perhaps she felt she simply had to talk to someone.

It all began two years ago when the McGuires bought their radio. They were very happy with it at first. Mrs. McGuire didn't mind its ceaseless playing in the evening. The thing was a novelty. Then, she thought, possibly McGuire wouldn't fall asleep right after dinner and, possibly, she would have an opportunity to talk about Sarah's new baby and the dress she was making.

But McGuire not only slept, he snored. Soon, Mrs. McGuire longed for the good old days when McGuire slept but didn't snore and when there was no radio. One evening she tip-toed across the room and turned it off. In a flash McGuire was awake. He turned the radio on, louder than before, glared at his timorous mate and fell to sleeping and snoring again. The next night Mrs. McGuire again sought surcease from a blaring radio. The same thing happened, except McGuire's glare was, if anything, steadier and more ominous.

SINCE then Mrs. McGuire has tried desperately to restore her little household to its peaceful somnolescence. Having discovered that even turning the radio down slightly awakened McGuire in a splitting rage, she attempted a mild form of sabotage. One night she would loosen a connection, the next a tube. But McGuire invariably located the trouble with such facility as not only to make Mrs. McGuire's efforts practically useless, but to give McGuire unwonted opportunities to boast about his mechanical turn of mind, which was more than his suffering wife could stand.

Lately she has taken to removing tubes entirely. This was a contingency for which McGuire was not quite prepared and which gained for Mrs. McGuire unexpected quiet. But not for long. Somewhere in the house McGuire has hidden an apparently inexhaustible supply of tubes of all varieties. As quickly as Mrs. McGuire removes a tube, he replaces it with a new one.

And now Mrs. McGuire would like to know what in the world she is going to do with several dozen radio tubes practically as good as new. She'd probably sell them for almost nothing.

Ever restive, ever questing are WJSV minds.

Last week it was a hurdy-gurdy they wanted. They got it.

Now it's a pig's squeal without the pig.

Warren Sweeney has it all figured out that a couple of squeals are all he needs to brighten up his portion of the Sun Dial program. But he doesn't care about learning animal husbandry to get them.

Speaking of the Sun Dial, WJSV wants it distinctly understood that Arthur Godfrey has no present intentions of deserting the breakfast broadcast. His Columbia contract will compel him to give three weeks' notice before leaving. Time enough for any one of us to accept things should the worst happen.

Western Publicity."

That's mighty fine of you Mr. Kaufman.

Together with Philadelphia's WCAU and Baltimore's WCAO, Washington's WJSV starts to air Pete Woolery, Broadway musical comedy man, and Paul Mason's orchestra in a series designed to further the interests of a certain brand of a widely used household article Friday morning at 11:30.

Mrs. N. M. Dewey, of Takoma, Wash., has come to the conclusion that Harold Gray who handle's Elder Michaux's network broadcasts Sunday mornings, is a relative she has been looking for during the last decade. However, Gray insists his family never got farther West than Roanoke, Va.

He had to ask WMAL's Carlton Smith, who had a pass, to take him in as one of his assistants.

WMAL's engineers have been working all night this week to install a new switching system. The work must be done between 1 a. m. and 6:45 a. m. while the station is off the air.

Hoarding Topic Of Dr. Strider

For the second of his series of noonday Lenten sermons at the Church of the Epiphany, the Right Rev. R. E. L. Strider, Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of West Virginia, took for his subject yesterday: "Hoarding" he spoke to a large congregation.

"We have read and heard lately of the civic sin of hoarding" he said, "and we know that to hoard money in these times is unpatriotic In like manner in the Kingdom of God there is a law against hoarding which says, 'that to him that hath shall be given but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath.'

"That means that he who nobly and wisely uses what he has shall be given more. It may be that we have hoarded when we should have shared our blessings and that this has contributed to the distress of our day."

Potomac Water Board Project Is Approved

Cumberland, Md., March 6 (Spl.). The upper Potomac water board plan was approved by the mayor and city council yesterday.

Lewis M. Wilson, commissioner of finance and revenue, said the project meant better sanitation for this part of the State. It is understood to be a Federal project entirely.

School Celebration Sought.

Waynesboro, Pa., March 6 (Spl.). The executive committee of the Franklin County Education Association will recommend at the monthly meeting in Lemasters Thursday night that the theme for the 1934 commencement exercises be in keeping with the 100th anniversary of the establishment of free public schools in Pennsylvania.

Museum Heads Urge U. S. Art Center Here

Recognized Leaders Back Drive to Establish National Gallery.

Heads of museum organizations here and directors of art galleries in other cities yesterday gave unanimous indorsement to the movement for a National Museum of Fine Arts to raise Washington to a ranking position among the cities of the world in art.

Fiske Kimball, director of the Pennsylvania Museum of Fine Arts at Philadelphia, in a telegram to the Washington office of the American Association of Museums said:

"There is no government in the world except ours which has not made adequate provision for a National Museum of Fine Arts. The present quarters in Washington, the scope and appropriation for the gallery are totally inadequate and unworthy of a great nation. A suitable building with a strong staff would attract gifts of important collections."

U. S. Lags, Says Coleman.

"The United States lags behind all great nations and even behind most second-rate countries in not having a National Museum of Fine Arts worthy of the name," said Laurence Vail Coleman, director of the American Association of Museums and a member of the executive committee of the International Museums office of the League of Nations.

"Unless the Federal Government recognizes art soon," he continued, "most private collections will have gravitated to local museums in big cities and it will be too late to form a strong collection to represent Americans before the world and to inspire our people," he said.

"Leadership from Washington is needed for a general cultural awakening and as a stimulus to more uniform art development in all parts of the country. This calls for a National Museum of Fine Arts Building and a distinguished personnel. The rest will follow. The American Association of Museums urges early action in the common interest."

"Disgrace," Wires Barr.

"The present inadequate housing of the National Gallery is a National disgrace," wired Alfred H. Barr, jr., yesterday to the office of the association here. "I heartily indorse the campaign for an adequate building—but only if provision is made or plans prepared for a separate National portrait gallery and a separate National gallery of modern art. This three-fold division would follow the admirable and successful London precedent."

Barr is the director of the Museum of Modern Art in New York City.

"The whole history of museums in Washington has been a long story of consistent neglect," declared Lewis C. Everard, editor of the American Association of Museums magazine. "An adequately equipped National Museum of Fine Arts could not only exhibit in suitable surroundings art works belonging to the Nation, but it would serve as an expression of faith in the value of creative art."

Thorough understanding and recognition of fundamental requirements preceding the establishment of a National Museum of Fine Arts was urged by Frederic Allen Whiting, president of the American Federation of Arts.

Urges Staff of Experts.

"Collections absolutely should be of the first quality," he said, "and no consideration should be allowed to interfere with maintenance of the highest standards. An adequate staff of recognized experts capable of exhibiting the collections in the most effective way should see that they are studied and that knowledge about them made known to all.

Whiting said he thought there should be a development of a department devoted to interpretation of the exhibits, using all the means recently developed by the most enlightened art museums in the country.

"A National Museum of Fine Arts in Washington," he said, "should have a sense of responsibility to the rest of the museums in the country and should cooperate with them and make available the services of its staff."

Tariff Parley At White House

To obtain a "more comprehensive understanding" of the Administration's tariff bill, Chairman R. L. Doughton and seven other members of the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday conferred with President Roosevelt and Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre.

Hearings will begin tomorrow with the prospect that Secretary of State Cordell Hull will be the first witness. Doughton expressed belief the measure will be reported within ten days, and is confident it will be adopted by the House.

Asked if a three-year limitation would be written into the bill which gives the President broad powers to negotiate reciprocal tariff agreements, Doughton said the measure would remain as prepared unless overruled by the committee. He asserted there is no fundamental disagreement among Democratic members.

College Teacher Suicide.

Northampton, Mass., March 6 (Spl.).—Bernard M. Cooney, 30, an instructor at Texas A. and M. College, today shot himself in the head while parked in his father's automobile. Medical Examiner E. W Brown gave a suicide verdict.

Revenues Gain In West Virginia

Charleston, W. V., March 6 (Spl.). West Virginia revenues are increasing, according to Edgar B. Sims, State auditor.

Receipts last month totaled $2,971,068.34, compared with disbursements of $2,675,175.70. The State had a balance of $586,667.49 to begin the month and left a balance of $862,560.13. Receipts of the special revenue fund amounted to $2,598,516.

Outstanding loans were $3,600,000, which, balanced against the general fund, left a net overdraft of $3,737,439.87. The general fund had an overdraft of $666,023.75 and there was an overdraft of $873,448.07 in the capitol building fund. In all other funds there were balances.

Spring Sure Now! The Shad Are Here

Herring, Too, Arrive in the Potomac.

Norfolk, Va., March 6 (Spl.). Shad and herring, unfailing advance guard of spring, are in Chesapeake Bay and Potomac River, W. H. Gary, Tidewater fish and oyster inspector, said today.

He declared that fishermen at Little Creek and Lynn Haven and in the lower end of the Potomac had reported catching shad and herring yesterday and today.

The shad and herring, Mr. Gary said, are 10 to 15 days late in reaching the Chesapeake and its tributaries and will make speed in rushing to the spawning grounds in the Potomac and other rivers emptying into the bay.

School May Adopt 5-Day Week.

Cambridge, Mass., March 6 (AP).—The five-day week may invade Massachusetts Institute of Technology classrooms. Faculty committees are studying a proposal to abolish Saturday classes.

Merged Bank's Deposits Twice Withdrawals

Washington Mechanics' Day Doubles Business of Its Opening.

Deposits in Washington Mechanics Savings Bank's new main office, the former Mount Vernon Savings Bank, were twice as large as withdrawals Monday, when the banking house reopened for business.

This was announced yesterday by officials of the consolidated institutions, who estimated a $30,000 gain in deposits for yesterday. Among deposists received yesterday were two of $5,000 each.

None of the large labor organizations which were patrons of the former bank is withdrawing its accounts, they reported. This also applies to large commercial and individual accounts, he said.

At Franklin National Bank, which is to follow Washington Mechanics and Mount Vernon Savings Banks into a merger creating a new house, it was reported that depositors' agreements to the combine now represent between $2,015,000 and $2,020,000 of a required $2,100,000 in deposits.

This is an increase of between $25,000 and $30,000 in three days. Sale of 60 per cent of $100,000 stock was reported yesterday by Franklin Bank officials, a 7 per cent gain in three days.
